

Health as a driving economic force

Klaus-Dirk Henke, Karl Martin, March 2008

- 1. Starting point: the downsides of cost increases and the upsides of growth effects with regard to health
- 2. Theoretical considerations: health as a component of human capital
- 3. Overview of existing empirical evidence
- 4. Macroeconomics and Health
- 5. Expanding understanding of health: the first and the second sector for healthcare and health
- 6. Labour market implications
- 7. On the growth-related effects of health promoting

Literature

Berlin's healthcare market as a driving economic force:

A regional case study

Klaus-Dirk Henke, Anja Georgi

- 1. Turnover and gross value added of Berlin's healthcare market
- 2. Health-related spending in the capital
- 3. Employment potential in the Berlin region
- 4. Monitoring growth and employment in Berlin
- 5. Berlin – an expanding healthcare metropolis

Literature