

•

•

[ iii ]

onless

THE # PREFACE.

Am fo fenfible of the Nicety of the following Subject, and the Ill-nature of the Age, that tho I have Introduc'd it with all the Protestations of a refolv'd Caution, and of tying my felf down to all possible Modesty in the whole Work; and tho' I have concluded it with due Explanations, and a free Appeal to the most impartial Judges, yet I cannot but add a Word of Preface.

6 2

THE

[ iv ]

Real Property in

THE justness of the Satyr, the loud Calls which the Crimes (here reproved) make for Justice and a due Censure, the dreadful Ruin of the People's Morals, and the apparent Contempt of Modesty and Decency, which grows so visibly upon us by the shameless Practice of what is here reprov'd, join all together to vindicate this Undertaking, and to show not the Usefulness only, but the Necessity of it.

IT is almost thirty Years fince the Author began this Piece: He has all that Time heard, with a just Concern, the Complaints of good Men upon the hateful Subest. The Grave and the Sober, the Lovers of Virtue and of Religion, have, with Grief, express'd themselves upon the growing Scandal; and they have often press'd him to finish and bring out this Reproof; and have join'd with his Opinion of the Justice of it.

ier i j

1 10

[ v ]

HITHERTO he has been reluctant as to the publishing it, and partly on Account of his Years, for it was long fince finished, and partly in hopes of Reformation; but now, despairing of Amendment, grown OLD, and out of the reach of Scandal, and of all the Pretences to it; Sincerely aiming at the Reformation of the Guilty, and defpiling all unjust Reproaches from a vitious Age, he closes his Days with this Satyr; which he is fo far from feeing Caufe to be ashamed of, that he hopes he shall not, where he is going to, Account for it.

AT leaft, he can Appeal to that Judge, who he is foon to come before, that as he has done it with an upright Intention, for the good of Mankind, fo he has ufed his utmost Endeavour to perform it, in a Manner the least liable to Reslettion, and, in his Judgment, the most likely [ vi ] likely to anfwer the true End of it, (viz.) the Reformation of the Crime. And with this Satisfaction, he comfortably prays for its Success.

TI

THE ## CONTENTS.

THE Introduction.

Pag. I

- Chap. I. Of Matrimony, the Nature of it, its facred Original, and the true Intent and Meaning of its Institution; as also how our Notions of it are degenerated, the Obligations of it disregarded, and the Thing it self, as a State of Life, groshy abused. p. 20
- Chap. II. Of Matrimonial Chaftity, what is to be underflood by the Word; a Proof of its being required by the Laws of GOD and Nature, and that wrong Notions of it have posses'd the World. Dr. Taylor's Authority quoted about it. p. 45
- Chap. III. Of the End and Reason of Matrimony, and that there is a needful Modesty and Decency requisite, even between a Man and his Wife, after Marriage, the Breaches of which make the first Branch of Matrimonial Whoredom. p. 57
- Chap. IV. Of the absolute Necessity of a mutual Affection before Matrimony, in order to the Happiness of a married State, and of the Scandal of marrying without it. p.95
- Chap. V. Of Marrying, and then publickly profeffing to defire they may have no Children, and of using Means physical or diabolical, to prevent Conception. p. 123
- Chap. VI. Of being Over-rul'd by Perfuation, Interest, Influence of Friends, Force, and the like, to take the Person they have no Love for, and for fake the Person they really lov'd. p. 166

The CONTENTS.

- Chap. VII. Of Marrying one Person, and at the fame time owning themselves to be in Love with another. p. 181
- Chap. VIII. Of unequal, unfuitable and prepofierous Marriages, and the unhappy Consequences of them. Of the Effects they have upon the Family-Conversation. How they occasion a Matrimonial Whoredom many Ways. Also fomething of the Marriage-Covenant and Oath; and how all the Breaches of it are a Political and Matrimonial Whoredom, if not a Literal Whoredom; with feveral Examples. p. 213

Chap. IX. Of Marrying at Unsuitable Tears p. 229 Chap. X. Of Marrying with Inequality of Blood. p. 252

Chap. XI. Of going to Bed under folemn Promifes of Marriage, and altho' those Promises are afterwards performed; and of the Scandal of a Man's making a Whore of his own Wife. p. 272

- Chap. XII. Of the Husband knowing his Wife after Conception, or after it appears the is with Child. Of the Reafonablenefs and Lawfulnefs of it. And whether this may not come under the just Denomination of Matrimonial Whoredom. p.293
- Chap. XIII. Of indecent and untimely Marriages, whether as to the Tears of the Persons, marrying Infants and Children, or marrying immediately after the Death of the Husband or Wife that went before. p. 338
- Chap. XIV. Of Clandestine, Forcible and Treacherous Marriages. p. 366 The Conclusion. p. 379

Conjugal

Conjugal Lewdnefs, &c.

ΤΗÆ

INTRODUCTION.

T is certainly true, that Modefty is no natural Virtue; what the Latins call'd Pudor or Shamefacednefs, is the Effect of Crime, and is always occasioned by a Confcioufnefs of Guilt, whether it be actual Guilt, or intentional, Guilt of a Fact already committed, or Guilt of a Crime refolv'd on, 'tis much the fame.

BEFORE Adam and Eve knew Evil as well as Good, before they were confcious of Offence, they went naked, and blufh'd not, and 'tis moft fignificantly express'd, they knew not that they were naked; they knew not that Nakedness was a Turpitude, an Indecency, and therefore when Adam gives that poor, foolifh Excuse for hiding himfelf from the Eyes of the infinite Author of Sight, and fays, because he was naked, Gen. iii. 10, 11. GOD asks him, Who told thee that thou wasf naked. DOUBTLESS before the Fall, Innocence was given to Man for a Covering, and he not only knew not that he was naked, but he really was not naked, though he was not clothed; he knew not how to blufh at being naked, much lefs why.

THE fame Innocence is the Protection of Virtue to this Day in the untaught Savages in many Parts of the now known World, where Nakednefs is no Offence on one fide, no Snare, no Incentive on the other; but Cuftom being the Judge of Decency to them, takes away all Senfe of Indecency in going uncovered, whether in whole, or in Part. See Mr. Milton upon that Head:

God-like Erest, with Native Honour clad In Naked Majesty _____ So pass'd they Naked on, nor shunn'd the Sight

Of God or Angel, for they thought no Ill.

Milton, Par. fol. 95.

- Now the fame Cuftom in these Northern Parts having concurr'd with the Necessity of the Climate on one Hand, and the Laws of Religion on the other, to cloath and cover the Body; the Breach of that Cuftom would be a Breach of Decency, and a Breach of the Laws both of God and Man.

HENCE Modefy fucceeds, whether as a Virtue in it felf, or as an Appendix to Virtue, we will not difpute; but where the Rules of Decency are broken, a Senfe of Shame comes in, with as much Force as if all the Laws of God and Man were broken at once.

It may be true, that if Man had continued in a State of unfpotted Innocence, unfhaken Virtue had been Part of it; that as his Soul had had been untainted with fo much as a Thought of Crime, fo no Covering had been wanted to any Part of his Body, other than the Severities of Climate might make neceffary; but to juftify what has been done fince, that I may take Notice of the Manner, and put you in Mind of the Authority of it too, we may obferve that as his Guilt made him naked, GOD himfelf covered him with his own Hand, Gen. iii. 21, it is faid pofitively, that GOD clothed them with the Skins (we fuppofe) of Beafts: Unto Adam alfo and to bis Wife did the LORD GOD make Coats of Skins, and clothed them. So foon were the Creatures dedicated to the Convenience, as well as Life of Man.

HENCE, tho'Nakednefs in a ftate of Innocence had been no Offence at that time, it is otherwife now; and we have the Sanction of Heaven to enforce the Decency, as we have the Force of the Seafons to urge the Neceflity of Clothing: It were to be wifh'd we had nothing to fay of the Indecency even of the Clothing, and how we ftudy to go naked in our very Clothes, and that after Go D himfelf put them on to cover us too. But of that by it felf.

GOD having then appointed, and Nature compelled Mankind to feck Covering, all the Pretences for going naked on that account are at an End; a meer Chimera, an Enthufiaftick Dream, feldom attempted but by a Sect of Madmen, worfe than Lunatick, who, heated with a religious Phrenzy, (the worft of all Poffeifions) pretend to Nakednefs as the Effect of their Innocence, at the fame Time making it a Skreen to all Manner of Lewdnefs and Debauchery.

N.4.5

NATURE and Religion having thus introduc'd Decency, the ftrict and religious regard paid to that Decency is become a Virtue; effential Virtue, and is fo in all the requifite Parts of Virtue; I mean, those which are understood as commanded by the Laws of GOD, or by the Laws of NATURE; and this is MODESTY, as it is the Subject of our prefent Difcourfe.

WE fay that Modefty is the guard of Virtue; and in fome refpects it is fo; and were Modefty univerfal, Virtue would need no other Defence. But as the World now ftands, fhe is fain to fly to other Succours, fuch as Laws of Men, the Command of Religion, the Power of Reafon, and, at laft, the Protection of Governours; fo hard is fhe purfued by Vice and the degenerate Paffions of Men.

MODESTY then, as I am to underftand it here, and to difcourfe about it, is nothing but a ftrict regard to Decency, as Decency is a ftrict regard to Virtue, and Virtue is a ftrict regard to Religion; indeed they feem all, in fome Senfe, to be fynonimous, and to mean the fame thing. It is true, Honour and Virtue may (fpeaking ftrictly) be faid in fome Cafes to be preferved, though Decency is not fo much, or equally regarded: But let all that plead the poflibility of that Diffinction know, that however possible it may be, it is fo far from being probable (that where Decency is given up Honour fhould or can be preferved) that they will find it very hard to have it be believed; as they that give up their Modesty cannot be faid to preferve Decency, fo they that give up Decency will be hardly believed to preferve their Virtue.

HENCE

HENCE Modesty is become a Virtue in it felf, and, if it be not literally and expressly all that is understood by the Word Virtue, 'tis Virtue's compleat Representative, its true Image, and they are as infeparable as the Gold and the Gliftering.

THE Object of Modefty refpects three Things.

- I. Modefty in Difcourfe.
- 2. Modefty in Behaviour.

3. Modefty in regard to Sexes.

I. By Modely in Discourse I think I must of Necessity be understood, a Decency of Expreffion; particularly, as our Difcourfe relates to Actions or Things (whether neceffary or accidental) that are and ought to be Matters of Secrefy. Things which are to be fpoken of with referve, and in Terms that may give no offence to the chafte Ears and Minds of others, and yet perhaps are of Necessity to be spoken to. Indeed fuch Things, with respect to Decency, ought never to be spoken of at all, but when Necesfity urges; and it were to be wilhed, that in a Christian and Modest Nation, where the Laws of Decency are expressly admitted as Rules of Life, all immodeft Difcourfes were decry'd by univerfal Cuftom; and efpecially that Printing and Publishing fuch Things as are not to be read with the like Decency, were effectually fupprefs'd. But as I have made that Subject a Part of this Work, I fay no more of it here.

2. By Modesty in Behaviour, I understand that which we call Decorum, Distance and Deference in Conversation, chiefly as it respects the Distinction of Qualities in the Persons con-

converfing; but that Part is not at all concerned in this Difcourfe, our prefent Defign looking quite another way.

THE last of these, (viz.) Modelty with respect to Sexes, is the Subject intended in this Tract, especially as it is confined to this one Branch of it, namely, the Conjugal Part of Life; the Intercourfe between the Sexes, or the freedom of converfing between a Man and his Wife; in which many think all the Rules and Laws of Modefty are finished and at an end; a Mistake fo gross, fo full of fatal Milchiefs to the Publick Virtue, and to the intent and meaning of Decency in general, that it is much in a Nation fo every way Virtuous as this, and where the Rules of Virtue are enforced by wholefome Laws, fuch a corrupt Notion theuld fpread fo far, and fo many Abfurdities break out into Practice upon that Subject.

THE Notion is, that there is no more fuch a Thing as Modefly to be named between a Man and his Wife; that as they are but one Flesh, and indeed but one Body, there's no Nakednefs between them : That were they alone Covering would be not only needlefs but Nonfence, if the Climate did not require it; that nothing can be indecent, nothing improper; that there's no Reftraint, and that no Law can be broken by them, but every thing is Handfome, every thing Honeft, and every thing Modeft; that 'tis a full Anfwer to all Reproach in any Cafe that may be charg'd, to fay it was my own Wife; or it was none but my own Husband; this is made the Covering to all manner of furfeiting Indecencies and Exceffes; of which I am to fpeak at large in their Order.

IT is high time to combat this Error of 1 ife, and the more, becaufe it is grown up to a heighth not only fcandalous, but criminal and offenfive, and, in fome things, unnatural; and ftill the more, becaufe 'tis a Miftake that is encreafing, and 'tis fear'd may go higher, till at laft it may break out into yet greater Abominations.

THE Difficulty before me is, to know how to reprove with Decency offences againft Decency; how to expose Modeftly Things which 'tis hardly Modeft fo much as to mention, and which must require abundance of clean Linnen to wrap them up in ; how to speak of nauseous and offensive Things, in Terms which shall not give offence, and fcourge immodest Actions with an unblameable Modesty; that is, without running out into Expressions which shall offend the modest Ears of those that read them; this, I fay, is the only Difficulty.

I am infulted already on this Head by the rude and felf-guilty World; my very Title and the bare advertifing my Book, they fay, is a Breach upon Modefty, and it offends their Ears even before it is publifhed. They not only tell me it will be an Obfcene and immodeft Book, but that it is impoffible it fhould be otherwife: They fay, I may pretend to as much refervednefs and darknefs of Exprefiion as I pleafe, and may skulk behind a Croud, or indeed a Cloud of Words; but my meaning will be reach'd, and the lewd Age will make plain Englifb of it; nay, that I fhall make plain Englifb of it my felf, before I have gone half thro' the Work.

ÓTHERS, armed with the fame ill Nature, have their Tongues poifoned with another kind of Venom, and they tell me it is an immodelt B 4 Subject

Subject; that as it cannot be handled decently, and cannot be difcours'd of modeftly, fo it is not intended to be fo, but that 'tis a meer Bait to the Curiofity of that Part of the reading World, whose Vices are prompted as much by a pretended reproving them as by the plainest Expressions: That it forms the same Ideas in their Minds, and they receive the Notions of Vice in as lively a form by the very Methods taken to expose and condemn the Facts, as if those Facts were represented to the Opticks in all their fhamelefs Nudities, with the most vitious and corrupt Drefs that could be put upon them on a Stage, or in a Masquerade.

I thall answer these People best by a Silence in my Introduction, and a fpeaking Perfor-mance. It is my Business to let them see they are miftaken, and that a truly modeft Defign may be purfued with the utmost Decency, even in treating of a Subject, in which all the vilest Breaches made upon Decency by a wicked and hitherto unreproved Behaviour are to be cenfured and exposed: As to a vicious Mind forming corrupt Ideas from the most modest Expressions, I have only this to fay; The Crime of that Part is wholly their own, I am no way concerned in it: The healing fructifying Dews, and the gentle fweet refreshing Showers, which are God's Bleffing upon the Earth, when they fall into the Sca are all turned Salt as the Ocean, ting'd with the grofs Particles of Salt which the Sea-Water is fo full of. The fame warm cherishing Beams of the Sun which raife those fweet Dews from the Earth, shining upon the ftagnate Waters of an unwholfome Lake or Marsh, or upon a corrupted Jakes or Dunghill, exhale exhale noxious Vapours and Poifons, which infect the Air, breeding Contagion and Difeafes in those that breathe in it. But the Fault is not in the Showers of refreshing Rain, or in the wholefome Beams of the Sun, but in the Salt, and in the Filth and Corruption of the Places where they fall. And thus it shall be here; Words modeftly expressed can give no immodeft Ideas, where the Minds of those that read are chafte and uncorrupted. But if a vicious Mind hears the Vice reproved, and forms pleafing Ideas of the Crime, without taking notice of the just Reproof, the fault is in the Depravity of the Mind, not in the needful and juft Reprover. I shall therefore take no notice of that Suggestion, as what I think does not deferve the least Regard, but go on to a just Cenfure of the Crime, in fuch a manner, as, I hope, fhall neither leffen the Reproof, or expofe the Reprover.

In order to this, I may indeed lie under fome Reftraints, be confined to a narrow Compafs of Words, and the Story may want in fome Places the Illuftration of appofite Similies, ufeful Arguments, and, above all, of flagrant Examples, to fet off and fet home the Arguments that are made ufe of; and this, to the great Lofs of the Author, in taking away those Ornaments of his Difcourfe; but where it cannot be otherwise the Reader must be content to abate it.

HowEVER, I pretend to fay, you will not find it a dry, a dull, or a barren Subject, for all that, and though fomething may be loft, and much left out, to preferve the Rules of Modefty, which I could not reprove the Breaches of with Juftice, if the Work was Criminal it felf, yet I doubt not to find you Subject of Diversion enough, enough, mixed with the Gravity of the Story, fo as, I hope, not to tire you with the Reading; at the fame time preferving the Chaftity of the Subject, the Authority of a Reprover, and binding my felf down with all poffible Severity to the Laws of Decency, Modefty and Virtue, which I write in the Defence of.

BUT now, while I am making thefe Provifo's, pray let me be underftood too with that juft and neceffary Liberty of Speech which thall render my Difcourfe intelligible. I am neither going to write in an unknown Tongue, nor in an unintelligible Stile; I am to fpeak fo as to be underftood, and I will not doubt but I fhall be underftood; and thofe whofe vitious Appetites are under Government, fo as to give them leave to relifh decent Reproof for indecent Things, may underftand me without large Explications, effectially on Occafions where they know the Cafes will not bear it.

THE Scripture is the Pattern of Decency. and, (as the learned Annotator Mr. Pool, in his Synophis Criticorum, and in his Annotations alfo obferves) fpeaks of all the Indecencies of Men with the utmost Mcdesty; yet neither does the Scripture forbear to command Virtue, gives Laws and Rules of Chaftity and modeft Behaviour, and that in very many Places, and on all needful Occasions: Nor does the Scripture fail to reprove the Breach of those Laws in the most vehement manner, condemning the Facts, and cenfuring and judging the guilty Perfons with the utmost Rigour and Severity, as I shall on many Occasions be led to observe as I go on. Let none therefore flatter themfelves that their Crimes shall avoid the Lash of a just Satyr in this Work, for want of Exprefions fuited to the Nature of the Reproof, and the Vilenefs of the Offence. We fhall find Words to expose them, without giving a Blow to Decency in the Reproof; we shall find Ways and Means to drefs up furfeiting Crimes in foftening Language; fo that none but the Guilty need to blush, none but the Criminals be offended.

of

BUT the Crime must be reproved; there's a Necessity for the Reproof as there is a Necessity of a Cure in a violent Diftemper. Do we reckon it a Breach of Modesty for the Body to be exposed in Anatomies, and published with learned Lectures on every Part by the Anatomifts? Are not the vileft and most unnatural of all Crimes neceffarily brought before Courts of Juffice, that the Criminals may be punished as they deferve? And though it may be true, that fometimes judicial Proceedings are not managed with fuch Decency in those Cafes as others think they might, and which, however, I allow to be fometimes unavoidable; yet notwithstanding all that can be pretended of Immodefty in those Proceedings, the Punishment of the Criminal, or his being fentenced must not be omitted, for the preferving the Modesty of the Trial; an Offender would come well off in many Offences, befides this I am treating of, if he must not be brought to Justice, because the very mention of his Crime would put criminal Ideas into the minds of those that hear of it.

LET it fuffice then in the Cafe before us; I am entring upon a juft and needful Cenfure of prepofterous and immodeft Actions; I shall perform it in as decent and referved Terms as I am able able to do, and as a Man meaning to correct, not encourage, Vice is able to do. If a lewd Fancy will entertain it felf with the meer Ideas of Crime, where it is only with the utmost Severity condemned, Be the Crime to the Criminal, I fee no reason to be afraid of doing Justice on that Account. A Man is to be executed for Sodomy; Nature and the Laws of God require it; Must not the Criminal die because all that fee or hear of it must immediately form Ideas of the Crime in their Thoughts, nay, and perhaps may think criminally of it? This would give a loofe to Wickednefs indeed, and Men might Sin with most Freedom where their Crimes were too vile to be punished, because they were too grofs to be named.

So when a Cloud its hafty Show'rs fends down, They're meant to fructify and not to drown; And in a Torrent if a Drunkard fink, 'Tis not the Flood that drowns him but the Drink. But 'twould be hard because a Sinner's slain, For fear of Drowning we should have no Rain.

BESIDES, it wou'd be a light efcape; and fome of our first Readers would triumph another way over the Author, if they could be fatisfied that they had finned in a manner fo großs that he could not find Words to reprove them in; I mean, fuch Words as were fit for modest Ears to bear the hearing of. Our well known Friend G - A -, with his three Brether, (as they call them in the North) who think themfelves beyond the reach of Reproof, as they are out of the reach of Confcience, may find themfelves mistaken here; and that if they will venture for for once to think and look in, they may fee themfelves touch'd to the quick, and yet the Readers hardly able to guefs at their Crime, and not at all at their Perfons; which laft they ought to acknowledge is a fpecial Favour to them, whether they deferve it or no.

So kind have I been to their Fame, and fo careful to leave Room for their Amendment, which I would hope for in fpite of their folemn Vows to the contrary.

NOR shall that eminent Brute of Quality pass untouched here, whose Name or Titles need no other mention than what are to be fumm'd up in this short Character:

A Life of Crime, with this peculiar Fame, Without Sense of Guilt, and past Sense of Shame.

I fay, he shall fee his most inimitable Way of Sinning stabbed to the Heart, and damn'd with an unanfwerable and unexceptionable Reproof; and yet without any Defcription either of his Perfon or his Offence, other than as may be Read by himfelf, and those that know him; though I must allow him to be the weakeft and the wickedeft Thing alive; vain of being the first in a Crime, and the last that will leave it; that blushes at nothing but the thoughts of Blushing, and thinks a Man of Wit can be ashamed of nothing but Repentance; That Sins for the fake of Crime without the pleafure of it, and is got feven Degrees in Sin beyond the Devil, in that he not only boafts of Sins which he never committed, but tells the World he FIBS, by boafting of Sins, which all the Town knows he cannot commit.

 $I\!f$

[ 14 ]

If such a Wretch on Earth ye Gods there be, Pill die if our Sir — be not he.

Nor let another flagrant Example of married Lewdnefs trouble himfelf, or express his Concern, least he should be omitted in this Work for fear of our offending the chast Ears of our Readers with his vile Story.

A City Sinner, nameless as his Crime.

Let him not doubt but he may find himfelf fuitably reproved, feeing he is fo fond of it; and fince he defires the Fame of being fuperlatively Wicked, he may hear of it in a manner that fhall make others blufh for him, though he can't blufh for himfelf.

But to pass these and some more, for in this Age of preposterous Crime we should never find our Way out, should we enter into the Labyrinth of Characters, and bring on Regiments of Examples. Our prefent Business is with the Offence not with the Offenders, with the Crimes not the Criminals; if a just Satyr on the wicked Part will not reclaim us, I doubt the Lift of the Guilty of both Sexes, though it would indeed be as numerous as our City train'd Bands; would be as useless a Muster as that at the Artillery Ground, and find as little Reformation among them.

As it is in ordinary Crimes, that Men Sin on becaufe they form and are afhamed to Repent, fo in the Cafe before me, when they are launched into the most flagrant of all Crimes, things fo odious that 'tis offensive to modest Ears fo much as to hear of them, and difficult to a modelt Pen fo much as to write of them; they take hold of the hellish Advantage, and make the greatness, the superlative Blackness of their Offences be their Protection in the committing them; as if they were out of the reach of Reproof, becaufe no modeft Pen can dip in the Dirt, or rake in the Dunghil of their Vices, without being fullied and daub'd by them; that it would be fcandalous for any modeft Man fo much as to mention what they do not think it scandalous to do. Thus the hardened and fearlefs A _____, who defies God and Man, laughs at Reproach, and threatens every Reprover, impudently faid to his Parish Minister that modestly spoke of his Crimes, " You may talk to me here, Doctor, at " home, but you dare not speak a Word of it in " the Pulpit; I am out of your reach there; Why, " all the Women would run out of the Church, and " they'd throw Stones at you as you go along the " Street if you did but mention it.

tor'

HAPFY Criminal! that hugs himfelf in being too Vile to be reproved, or fo much as modeffly mentioned; that his Crimes cannot be expoled becaule modeft Ears cannot bear to hear them fpoken of. Let the Offender, who is fam'd for being Revengeful, and who is not fo far off as not to hear of it, refent it if he thinks fit : I am told he will foon hear more of it, where it may be fpoken of without fear of his Anger.

THIS very Cafe runs parallel with what I am now engaged in; but the Age fhall fee the Effect fhall not answer their End. Shall it be Criminal to reprove the Offence which they think it is not Criminal to commit? Must we Blush to speak of what they will not Blush to do? do? And must the most detestable Things go on in practice, because we dare not go on to cry them down? God forbid we should by Silence feem to approve that Wickedness, while that Silence is occasioned only because the Wickedness is too gross to be reproved.

SURE our Language is not fo barren of Words as that we cannot find out proper Expressions to reprehend an impudent Generation, without Breach of Decency in the Diction; or that immodes Actions may not be modestly exposed.

IF corrupt Imaginations will rife up, and Men will pleafe themfelves with the Difficulty I am put to for Words, if they will turn mymoit referved Terms into lewd and vitious Ideas, and debauch their Thoughts while I expofe their Debaucheries, let them go on their own Way; let them think as wickedly as they pleafe, they fhall owe it to themfelves, not to me; both the Fire and the Tinder are all their own. Here fhall be no Materials to work upon, no Combuftibles to kindle, but what they bring with them.

BUT the Work muft be done in fpite of the Difficulty. Shall they watch for a flip of my Pen, and take Advantage, if poffible, from any mifplaced Word, to reprove me of Indecency in the neceffary Work of reproving their fhamelefs Immodefty? Muft I be afhamed to expofe the Crime which they are not afhamed to be guilty of, and blufh to mention the Things they boaft of Doing? The Truth is, I know not why I fhould not freely name the Men, who in the open Coffee-houfes, and in their common wicked Difcourfes, publickly brag of the moft immodeft and fhamelefs Behaviour. [ 17 ] haviour, and vilely name themfelves to be guilty of it, make fport of the Crimes, and value themfelves in being the Criminals; but it fhall not be long before I may fpeak of it much plainer.

HOWEVER, as the Offence is flagrant, is grown fcandalous and notorious, and that we find the Age ripening up by it to the higheft and moft unnatural of all Crimes, to the fhame of Society, and to the fcandal even of the Proteftant Profeffion; I have undertaken to begin the War againft it as a Vice, and hope to make good the Charge, though I know I do make the Attempt at the rifque of all that a modeft Writer has to hazard.

HE that undertakes a Satyr againft an univerfal Cuftom, fhall be fure to raife upon himfelf an univerfal Clamour; my Lord Rochefter is plain in that Cafe:

" Nor shall weak Truth your Reputation fave, "The Knaves will all agree to call you Knave.

IT must be acknowledged the Age is ripened up in Crime to a dreadful heighth, and it is not a light, a gentle Touch, that will bring them to blufh. The Learned and Reverend Ministers, the Good, the Pious, who would reprove them, are forced to content themselves to fit ftill, and pray for them; and, as the Scripture fays, to mourn in Secret for their Abominations; they cannot foul their folemn Difcourfes with the Crimes which they have to Combat with; the Pulpit is facred to the venerable Office of a Preacher of G O D's Word; and the Gravity of the Place, a decent Regard to the Work, and especially to the Affembly, forbids them pol-C Iuting their Mouths with the filthy Behaviour of those they see Cause to reprove: And this makes many a lewd and vitious Wretch go unexposed, at least as he deferves; and many a scandalous Crime, as well as the rich and powerful Criminals, go unreproved.

The Press may reach him, who the Pulpit scorns, And he whose flagrant Vice the B_____ adorns : The fearless Satyr shall to Rage give vent, And teach him how to Blush, tho' not Repent.

IN fhort, 'tis a ftrange World! and we are grown up to a ftrange heighth in our Notions of Things! we have brought our felves to a Condition very particular to the Day, and fingular as I may fay, to our felves; the Policy of our Vices Vices has got the better of Virtue, and the Criminals have managed themfelves to artfully; that, it feems, they may Sin with lefs hazard of Reputation, than the Innocent may reprove them: For Example,

THE Crime is now lefs Scandal than Repentance, and, as the Proverb fays, 'tis a fhame to Steal, but 'tis a double fhame to carry Home again; fo 'tis a fhame to Sin, but 'tis a double hame to Repent; nay, we go beyond all that, 'tis no fhame to be Wicked, but to Whine and Repent is intolerable; and, as the late Colonel  $H_{------}$  faid, in the flagrance of his Wit, that it might be a Fault to Whore, and Drink, and Swear, and fome worfe Sins of his, which he reclimed up; but to Repent ! to Repent! fays be, (oppeating the Words) nothing of a Gentleman can come into that; to be Wicked, adds he, iswicked, that's true; but to Repent, that's the Devil.

" Blush to Repent, but never blush to Sin.

BUT the Rubicon's paft, it muft be put to the venture; and let Rage and exafperated Luft lo its worft, the lewd Age fhall hear their hamelefs Behaviour as well expofed as it will bear, and that without any fhamelefs Doings in the Reproof; they will find no Levity here; no cleanfing Blurs with blotted Fingers; they fhall have nothing to Blufh for but that they give occafion for fuch a Reproof, which being engaged with them on the occafion of their filthy Conduct, may be forced to fpeak of it in Terms neceffary to express our deteftation of it, but not at all adapted to encourage or recommend it.

C 2

CHAP

[ 20 ]

CHAP. I.

Of MATRIMONY, the Nature of it, its facred Original, and the true intent and meaning of its Institution; as also how our Notions of it are degenerated, the Obligations of it difregarded, and the Thing it felf, as a State of Life, grofly abused.

EING to difcourfe in a particular and extraordinary Manner of the Breaches of the Matrimonial Relaition, with the Diforders which are committed under the Protection of Matrimony; and being to exhibit a Charge of very high Crimes and Mifdemeanors against fome People who think themfelves very Virtuous and Modeft, and yet give themfelves all those Matrimonial Liberties : It is highly needful to explain to fuch feemingly Ignorant, what the true intent and meaning of that ill-underftood State of Life is; what it imports; and how Chriftians ought to rate and effeem the Obligation of it in the Conduct of a regular Life.

FOR as I find my Judgment of Things is like to differ from others, that what they think lawful I shall condemn as criminal, and cenfure what they think moderate and fober, the Preliminaries ought to be fettled as we go; that we may begin upon right Principles, leaving ving no Room to cavil at Terms, and difpute upon Conftruction of Words, nicety of Expreffion, double Entendres, and fuch Trifles. I refolve to fpeak plainly, and would be underftood diftinctly.

MATRIMONY is, according to the Words in the Office appointed in our Liturgy, GOD's Ordinance, that I shall prove to you prefently; but 'tis moreover GOD's holy Ordinance. Now if it be a holy Ordinance, the married Life has a Sanction too, and ought to be preferved facred, not be debauched with criminal Exceffes of any kind; much lefs fhould it be made a coverand skreen for those matrimonial Intemperances which I now fpeak of, and which I shall prove to be not only fcandalous to, but unworthy of Matrimony, as a facred state of Life.

As it is GOD's Ordinance, and an holy Ordinance, fo'tis an honourable State; the Apoftle fays, Marriage is honourable, Heb. xiii. 4. But then you are to obferve alfo, that it is immediately added, and the Bed undefiled. Now this nice Term of the Bed undefiled, requires fome Explanation, and in that perhaps we may differ. They that think the Marriage-Bed cannot be defiled but by Adultery, will greatly differ from me; and 'tis my Bufiness to prove they are mistaken, which, if I do not, I do nothing.

BUT, that I may do it with the more clearnefs, and leave no Room for Difpute, I therefore fet apart this first Chapter to confider Matrimony in general, what it is, how we ought to understand it, and what the End and Defign of GOD's Appointment in it was, and ftill is; and by this, I think, I may make Way for a more exact Obfervation of those Duties which the the matrimonial Vow is faid to bind us to, and expose the fcandalous Mistakes of those who make it a Cloke to all Licentious fields.

C 3

[ 22 ]

As foon as our Mother EVE was first form'd, had just found her felf in Being, and though she had feen nothing about her, yet had a Soul as capacious of Knowledge as the Man she was made for. The Text fays, GOD brought her to the Man, Gen. ii. 22. that is, in short, GOD married them. Adam himself expresses it, cap. iii. 12. The Woman whom thou gavess me. N.B. GOD gave the Bride.

HENCE I observe by the way, tho' with all possible Brevity, that they are certainly wrong who challenge the Clergy for engroting the Office of Marrying, as if it did not belong to them, but was a meer Civil Contract, and therefore was no Perquisite of the Church, but the Business of the Magistrate.

I fay, 'tis a Mistake; for as it was instituted. immediately from the divine Authority, fo it was folemnized by him who having alone Inftituted it, had a Right to perform the Ceremony; for this Reason it is called GOD's holy Ordinance; and though I do not think it ought to be called a Sacrament, yet without doubt GOD himfelf put a facred Character upon it as he honoured it with a particular Law, the fecond Law given in Paradife, namely, that the Man fhould leave his Father and bis Mother and cleave unto his Wife, Gen. ii. 24. after which, as GOD, who was the Father of Eve, gave her in Marriage, fo the Paternal Authority preferved the Right of Marriage ever after, as they did the Priefthood, (for the Patriarch was the Prieft) and had it by the fame Authority; Hence the Parent giving the Bride is to this Day a remainder of that AuthoAuthority. The Ceremony then being truly Religious, and an Ordinance of GOD, it goes with GOD's other Ordinances, away to the Prieft, whole Bufinels it is to exercise all religious Offices; and this among the reft.

Also here, if you will allow me to Preach, it fhall be againft the Plurality of Wives: From this Pattern in Paradife Poligamy feems to be utterly condemned; and though in the Times of After-Ignorance many Things were practifed, which, as the Text fays, GOD winked at, yet in the Beginning it was not fo; and we may as well Argue for marrying two Sifters, as  $\mathcal{F}a$ cob, and perhaps feveral others did, till it was efpecially prohibited, as for marrying many Wives at once, which 'tis evident our Saviour forbids, and the Argument againft them are alike, as I faid above, (viz.) That in the Beginning it was not fo.

I know 'tis alledged, that the encreafe of Mankind, in those early Ages of Time, made it neceffary; but might it not be much more a Reafon in Adam's Cafe when he was alone? And why did not GOD, for the immediate Propagation of the kind, and encreafe of the World, make his Rib into half a dozen Wives for Adam, or as many as he had pleas'd.

But 'tis evident, one Wife to one Husband was thought beft by his Maker, who knew what was beft, and most calculated for his temporal Felicity; as to the encrease of People, 'twas evident the Race foon multiplied; and, after the Interruption of the first Growth, and the Difaster of Abers Death, the long Life of the Antediluvians also confidered, the Numbers of People foon encreased, and that in a prodigious manner; for, if you will believe the learned C 4 Author of the Theory of the Earth, 'tis probable there were much greater Numbers of People alive at the Deluge than ever were in the World at any one time fince, or than are now ; tho' the World is thought to be more populous now than ever it has been fince the Deluge.

THE Argument for the encrease of People could not be greater fince, than it was in Paradife; and had GOD approved of it, or thought it reasonable, he would certainly have given Adam more Wives than one at first. Besides, one Wife was given him as a Help meet; by which it is evident the Original understands it a Help fufficient to him, intimating, that they were in every Thing fufficient to one another; and not to enter into that Part of it which refpect their Sexes, which my lewder Readers will perhaps look for; 'Tis evident, that a fingle handed Matrimony is many Ways adapted to the Felicity of human Life more than a ftate of Poligamy; the Effect of a Plurality of Wives having always been Family-Strife, Envying, and Quarrelling, between the Women efpecially, no Part of which could much add to the Felicity of the Husband, and often did embark the Husband in the Breach, as in the Examples of Sarah and Hagar, Leah and Rachel, Hannah and Penninah, and many others.

On the other hand, we fee the most eminent of the Patriarchs had but one Wife, at least we read of no more; even Abraham, except in the Cafe of Hagar, who was but a Concubine at most, had but one Wife at a Time; Ifaac had never any but Rebecca, Joseph, Moses, Aaron, and feveral others; the groffer Use of Women came in with David, as the fetting up a Seraglio of Whores did with King Solomon; but, [25] but, to repeat our Saviour's Words again, in the Beginning it was not fo.

BUT I shall speak of that Part again in its Courfe. What I have now faid is but a Digression made necessary as an Observation on the manner of the first Wedding; the Man and the Woman, as I have faid, were fingle and separate, but GOD made them to affociate together, so he brought the Woman to him, and gave her to be with him, that is, as above, GOD married them.

GOD having thus ordained Matrimony, and folemnized the first Nuptials in Paradife, it cannot be denied to be, as our Office of Matrimony declares it, GOD's boly Ordinance. How our Notions of it are degenerated, the Bonds of it difregarded, and the whole Institution abufed, is the Subject of this whole Undertaking, but effectially of this Chapter.

WMAT the true intent and meaning of Matrimony, in its firft Inftitution, was, and what the Nature of that Contract points at, I fhall leave in better Hands; the learned Fathers of the Church have, in all Ages, taken Pains to explain those Things to you: Nor am I going about to Preach, as a Reverend Divine lately did to the furprize of his Auditory, on Gen. iv. ver. I. Adam knew his Wife Eve. But there are a great many Civil Views in the Inftitution of Matrimony, which the propagating of the kind has little or no Concern in, and the Ordinance of Matrimony fuffers as much by our fcandalous Notions of it, as a State of Life, as it does in any other Part.

Nor is the fubordination any Part of the Cafe I am upon; I am fo little a Friend to that which they call Government and Obedience between between the Man and his Wife, efpecially as fome People would have it be underftood, and as the common Talk is managed when fuch Things come in our way; that the Ladies will take no Offence at me, I dare fay. I don't take the State of Matrimony to be defigned as that of Apprentices who are bound to the Family. and that the Wife is to be us'd only as the upper Servant in the Houfe. The great Duty between the Man and his Wife, I take to confift in that of Love, in the Government of Affection, and the Obedience of a complaifant, kind, obliging Temper ; the Obligation is reciprocal, 'tis drawing in an equal Yoke; Love knows no superior or inferior, no imperious Command on one hand, no reluctant Subjection on the other; the End of both fhould be the well-ordering their Family, the good-guiding their Houshold and Children, educating, inftructing and managing them with a mutual Endeavour, and giving refpectively good Examples to them, directing others in their Duty by doing their own well, guiding themfelves in every Relation, in order to the well guiding all that are under them; filling up Life with an equal Regard to those above them, and those below them, to as to be Exemplar to all.

THIS is Matrimony in its just appointed meaning, whatever Notions our fashionable People may have of it. What Import else can those Words have in them, which we find so carefully placed, and so openly repeated in the Office at the Time of Marriage, Wilt thou love her, live with ber, comfort her, bonour, keep her, and again, to love and to cherish, and asterward 'tis added, that you will do all this according to GOD's holy Ordinance; which, if I may expound in very plain Words, is, according to the true intent and meaning of the first Institution, and that is in the Sense of Gon himfelf, to be a Help meet to one another.

ÚPON the whole, the Matrimonial Duty is all reciprocal; 'tis founded in Love, 'tis performed in the heighth of Affection; its moft perfect Accomplifhment confifts not in the Union of the Sexes, but in the Union of the Souls; uniting their Defires, their Ends, and confequently their Endeavours, for compleating their mutual Felicity.

ALL the fubjection and fubordination in the World, without this mutual Affection, cannot give one Dram of Satisfaction or Enjoyment. How remote our Notions of Marriage in general are to thefe Things, and how little the prefent Age feems to underftand them, or at leaft to regard them, I need not enquire; 'tis too vifible in almost every Family: Nor indeed can it be otherwise, except by fome rare Example of Virtue and good Humour meeting on both Sides, which, as Marriages are now made, is very unlikely to happen; 'tis a Lottery of a thousand Blanks to a Prize.

Not one in five hundred of those that now marry, really understand what they marry for; I cannot give the detail of their general Account, and of the Answers they would give to the Question without Blushes, not at them, but for them; I do not mean Blushing in the Sense that I generally take the Word in this Book, but I mean blushing for the Folly and Ignorance of the People.

Ask the Ladies why they marry, they tell you 'tis for a good Settlement; tho' they had their their own Fortunes to fettle on themfelves before. Ask the Men why they marry, it is for the Money. How few Matches have any other Motive except fuch as I muft mention hereafter, and indeed will hardly bear any mention at all, for many known Reafons. How little is regarded of that one effential and abfolutely neceffary Part of the Composition, called Love, without which the matrimonial State is, I think, hardly lawful, I am fure is not rational, and, I think, can never be happy.

HENCE it follows, that we have fuch few happy and fuccefsful Matches. How much Matrimony, how little Love; how many Coupled, how few Join'd; in a word, how much Marriage, how little Friendship. O Friendship! thou exalted Felicity of Life, thou glorious Incorporation of Souls, thou heavenly Image, thou polifher and finisher of the brighteft Part of Mankind, how much art thou talked of, how little underftood, how much pretended to, how little endeavoured for! Where does the kind expecting Husband find a fincere Friend in his Bofom ? How feldom does the tender affectionate Wife take a Friend into her Arms, even though fhe does take the Perfon, fhe takes the Man without the Husband, and the Hufband without the Friend? Not Virtue, not Fidelity to the Marriage Bed, not Confcience of the Conjugal Duty, not Religion, will do it; no not RELIGION! How many Husbands and Wives will go to Heaven from the Arms of the Wives and Husbands they had no Friendship for?

How miferably do the Pious and the Devout, the Religious and the Confciencious live together! the Husbands here, the Wives there, by jarring jarring Tempers, difcording Affections, and, in thort, meer want of Love and Friendfhip, grow fcandals to the marry'd Life, and fet themfelves up for Beacons and Light-houfes, to warn the wandering World, and to bid them beware how they marry without Love, how they join Hands and not Hearts, unite Interests, unite Sexes, unite Families and Relatives, and yet never unite Hearts?

How is Matrimony abufed in all thefe Cafes by almoft all Sorts of People, who carrying a Face of Civility and Union in the married Life, and who, in view of the World, pafs for fober, modeft, grave, religious, and all that Virtue and Honefty call for among Chriftians; and yet trace them into their Houfes and Families, their Converfation is grofs, and, in a manner debauched with undecent Language, their Way of living all Luxury and Sloth, their Marriage Covenants broken by Strife and Contention; in a word, their Houfes a Bedlam, and their Marriage Bed a Scene of Lewdnefs and Exceffes not to be named.

Is this living together after Go D's holy Ordinance? Is this making the Marriage Bed a Bed undefiled? Will they pretend there is nothing defiles the Marriage Bed but Whoredom, and forfaking the Marriage Covenant. Let not that Miftake be their Protection in the Breach of the Laws of Nature, and defpifing all the limitations of Decency and Modefty; there are Laws and Limits plac'd by Nature, nay, let me fay, by the Go D of Nature, even to the conjugal Embraces; and a due regard is to be had, in all Cafes, to thofe Laws and Limits. If I am fpeaking to Chriftians I need not explain my felf; but as I am to fpeak to fome People People who, though the World calls them Chriftians, can hardly, without blufhing, call themfelves fo, I muft be forced to fpeak as plainly as the Laws of Decency will allow, in reproving their Conduct, I refer to the Particulars in the following Tract, where they who are guilty may find Room to blufh.

IT were to be wifhed, that all People that marry were to be ask'd before-hand if they really understood what Matrimony meant, and what the true intent of a married Life was, as well in its Inftitution, as in the grand Defign of Family-Felicity; the married Couple are young, their Blood warm; the Youth, fir'd with the blooming Beauty of his Bride, thinks of little all the while the Apparatus of the Wedding is in hand, nay, perhaps all the while he is (feigning) I 'fhould fay making, Love to her, as we weakly call his Courting her, I think we fhould rather call it, all the while he is talking in Jeft to her; I fay, all this while he is thinking of little but getting to Bed to her. What engages her Thoughts I fay nothing to, for Reafons given already.

THUS, coming together without Thought, we are not to wonder they go on without Conduct, that they act a thoufand weak and wild Things afterwards, fuch as they often live to be afhamed of, and to blufh at. As they allowed themfelves to think no farther than the wedding Week, fo how awkwardly do they behave when they come to the graver Part of Life? Matrimony is not a Branch of Life only, but 'tis a State, 'tis a fettled Eftablifhment of Life, and an Eftablifhment for a continuance at leaft of the Life of one of the two. How unhappy are thofe married People, who rafhly coming together, as I faid faid juft now, and perhaps with mean and unthinking Views, I think I may fay, Views unworthy of the Dignity and Honour of a married State, feem furprifed and difappointed when they come to enter upon the fubfequent more weighty and folid Part of the married Life ? How often do we hear them fay, If I had known what it had been to be a Wife, if I had known what it had been to be a Husband, and to have the Care of a Family upon me, and a Houfe-full of Children to provide for, and take care of, I would never have married. Some indeed Repent upon a worfe Foot. But I am fpeaking of it now, even where the Article of a bad Husband or a bad Wife are not concerned.

MARRIAGE is an honourable State or Station of Life, but it is not a thoughtlefs, idle, unemployed State, even where the Concerns of the Family are eafy, where Plenty flows, and the World fimiles; yet a married Life has its Cares, its Anxieties, its Embaraffments, which the young Lady knew nothing of in her Father's Houfe, where fhe liv'd without Care, without Difturbance, flept without Fear, and wak'd without Sorrows. But married, fhe is a Miftrefs, fhe is a Mother, fhe is a Wife, every one of which Relations has its little addenda of Incumcumbrance, and perhaps of Uneafinefs too, be her Circumftances as good otherwife as fhe can or would fuppofe them to be.

WE have an English faying, they that marry in hafte repent at leifure. Now though my Defign is not to run down the married State, and raife frightful Ideas in the Minds of those that are to enter into it, fo as to prevent their marrying; yet, I hope, I may hint to them, that that they fhould look before they take this Leap in the Dark, that they fhould confider all the Circumftances that are before them, that they may have no Reafon to repent when they fhall be fure to have no Room for it.

Now, it is not the Matrimony, but the abufe of Matrimony, which is our prefent Subject, nor let the Ladies be offended, as if I was perfwading Folks not to marry at all; it is not refufing Matrimony that I perfuade to in order to prevent those Abufes, but a confidering and weighing the Circumftances of Matrimony before it is confummated. I agree with the Maids Catechife, where the first Question is, What is the chief End of a Maid? and the Answer is, To be married. But I am Arguing to remove the Occasion of those Abufes which make the Matrimony ruinous, and a Difaster both to the Man and to the Maid.

THIS would fecure the Affection of the Parties before they marry; they would be united before they were joined, they would be married even before they were wedded, the Love would be poffefs'd before the Perfons, and they would have exchanged Hearts before they exchanged the Words of, I, N. take thee N; in fhort, Matrimony without Love is the Cart before the Horfe, and Love without Matrimony is the Horfe without any Cart at all.

MARRYING is not fuch a frightful Thing that we fhould be terrified at the Thoughts of it, yet it is far from being fuch a trifling Thing either that we fhould run Headlong or Blindfold into it, without fo much as looking before us. 'Twas a prudent Saying of a young Lady, who wanted neither Wit or Fortune to recommend her, that marrying on the Woman's Side was like a Horfe rufhing into the Battle, who depending upon the Hand that rules him, has no Weapon of his own, either offenfive or defenfive; whereas, on the Man's fide, like the Soldier, he has both Armour to preferve himfelf, and Weapons to make him be fear'd by his Adverfary.

was

I know not by what degeneracy in our Manners, or corruption of Principles, it is come to pass, but 'tis too general in practice, that Matrimony is now looked upon only as a politick Opportunity to gratify a vitious Appe-tite: The Form, how facred foever graver Heads may pretend it is in its Inftitution, is now become our Jeft, and not only ridiculed and bantered in our Discourse, for that might be born with, but 'tis become a Jeft in practice; all the folemn Part is dropt out of our Thoughts, the Money and the Maidenhead is the Subject of our Meditations; not only the divine Inftitution is made a Stalking-horfe to the brutal Appetite, but indeed the beft of Women are betrayed by it into the hands of the vileft of Men, and in the groffeft manner abus'd; nay, which is still worfe, this is done with a Banter and a Jeft, all the facred Obligations, the in-diffolvable Bands of Religion and Virtue, are trampled under foot; the modeft and most virtuous Lady is impudently defloured, and the Night's Enjoyment boafted of the next Day in the Arms of a Strumpet; the innocent Bride is poifoned with a Difeafe, and the deteftable Wretch is a Bridegroom, and an Adulterer, in the first four and twenty Hours of his Engagement.

 $A _ B _$  was a Gentleman of Figure and Fortune; in his Coach and four, and D with with a fuitable Equipage: He made his Addreffes to a wealthy Citizen, and Propofals of fuitable Settlement, for his Confent to court his Daughter. Nothing appeared but what was faiand honourable; he is accepted; the young Lady, virtuous, modeft, beautiful, finely bred, in the Bloom of her Youth, wheedled with his Tongue, and deceived with the appearance of a fine Gentleman, and a Lover, yields to the Propofals, and throws her felf into the Arms of the worft of Monfters.

THE very first Moments of his embraces fright her with fomething inexpressibly naufeous about him; yet Innocence and Virtue had no Power to make a Judgment of Things; but, like the chast Roman Lady, whose Hufhand had a stinking Breath, innocently anfwered, That she thought all Men were so.

IN fhort, the Lady is ruined the firft Night; the V.... boafted among his viler Companions, that he had given her fomething that would foon difpofe of her; and it was too true; in lefs than a Month fhe was in a Condition not fit to be defcribed, in about two more the ableft Phyficians fhook their Heads, and voted her Incurable, in eight Months fhe was a deplorable Object, and, in lefs than a Year, lodg'd in her Grave; the Murtherer, for he can be no other, putting on Black for a fhew; but when charged home by the Friends of the ruin'd Lady, anfwered with a kind of a laugh, that he thought he had been cured.

IF this unhappy Story were a Romance, a Fiction, contrived to illuftrate the Subject, I fhould give it you with all its abhorred Particulars, as far as decency of Language would permit; that the abufe of Matrimony, which is the Subject Subject I am now to enter upon, may be expofed as it deferves.

BUT when Facts, however flagrant, are too near home, and the miferable Sufferers already too much oppreffed with the Injury, we muft not add to their Afflictions by too publick a ufe of the Calamity to embellish our Story; the murthered Lady refts in her Grave; we must leave the Offender to the fupreme Juffice, and to the Reproaches of his Confcience.

SAD Examples of conjugal Treachery might be given of this kind; and I might make the whole Work a Satyr upon thofe, who, abufing the Marriage Bed, have proftituted the facred Inftitution to their Vice, and made it a covering to Crime, a fnare to the Perfon drawn into it, and a cheat to devour their Fortunes, as well as Perfons.

THE Lady ____, pardon my concealing Names, is a Perfon of good Birth, of a Family in good Circumstances, and pass'd with all that knew her for a Woman of Virtue. Her modeft behaviour gave fuch a Credit to her, and eftablifhed her Character fo well, that it would have looked like Malice, and been received in all Company with a general difgust, fo much as to have drop'd a Word that look'd like Detraction, or in the least touch'd her Fame.

SHE is admired and courted by feveral, and, after fome time, married by a Perfon of good Fortunes, and even fuperior Birth; a Man of Honour and of Quality, and yet, which is now very rare, a Man of Virtue: He is pleas'd with his Bride to the last degree, vain of her Beauty; boafts of her as a Prize carry'd by his good Fortune from fo many Pretenders. But, alas! what Shagreen covers the ufualSmile that fat fat upon his always pleafant Countenance! What Torment fweli'd his Breaft, when, within the compafs of half a Year, he finds the virtuous Charmer, the Miftrefs of his chaft Affections, not only with Child, but not able any longer to conceal, that by the unalterable Laws of Nature it could not be his.

HE is furprized, he charges her with it, fhe confeffes it with the utmost Testimonies of penitence and regret for the Injury done him, and, with the force of an inimitable Conduct, reingages him; he forgives her, but finds out the Man, fights him, wounds him, and is killed himself in the unequal Quarrel. Miserable Effect of abus'd Matrimony !

BUT even all this is not the great Point aim'd at in this Work : Our View is the criminal ufe of the lawful Liberties of Matrimony, and that I fhall come to in its Place.

AMONG thefe however this is not the leaft, and therefore proper to this Place, viz. That we find wrong Notions of the matrimonial Vow, wrong Thoughts of the conjugal Obligation have poffefs'd the Minds of both Men and Women, and they marry now meerly to gratify the fenfual Part, without the Views which the Nature of the Thing, called Matrimony, ought to give them. This is what I call making a jeft of the Inftitution, that marry in fport, and, like the little Children, who not knowing what they are doing, fay to one another, Come, Let us Play at Man and Wife.

THEY that make a jeft of marrying, generally live to be the Jeft both of the married and unmarried World; when they marry in jeft they come to mourn in earneft; they tie themfelves felves in Bonds, refolving not to be bound by the Obligation; and where is the Honefty and Juffice of this? They that have no Senfe of the matrimonial Obligation can have no Senfe of the conjugal Duty; they marry to lie together; and they fatisfy the Appetite in the Pleafures of the Marriage Bed. But when that's over, all the reft, which they had no View of before, is a Force, a Bondage; and they as heartily hate the ftate of Life as a Slave does his Lot in Algier or Tunis.

LET me go on a little then to furnish the growing World with better Notions of the Thing; I fay, let me take up a little of this Work in the needful Enquiry of what Matrimony is, and how we ought to understand it.

THE Ladies indeed run the greateft Rifque in marrying, but the Men cannot be faid to run no hazard, or to have nothing to lofe; a little Confideration before-hand would leffen the hazard on both Sides, and not only remove the Dangers but prepare the Minds of the marrying Couple to act their Parts wifely and prudently, and to fuit themfelves to the particular Circumitances of the Condition which is before them.

THIS due preparation of the Mind for the married State, would prevent all the Abufes of it which I complain of in this Book.

WHEN they come together affectionately, they will live together affectionately, at leaft they will not abandon all Affection to one another afterwards, or not fo foon; nor will it be fo likely that they fhould declare open War against one another fo foon, as when they came together without any previous Kindness, except only from the Lips outward.

WHEN

WHEN they come together deliberately, they will keep together deliberately; they will not be fo ready to curfe the rafhnefs and hurry of their Marriage, or be fo eafily difappointed in one another.

AGAIN, and which is effectially to the Purpoles mentioned hereafter in this Work, when they come together Coolly and Modefly, they will not be fo apt, by immoderate and furious Exceffes, to different the Marriage Bed, and abufe one another, as too many do.

MATRIMONY is a folemn Work, 'tis propofed as a facred Inftitution, and the conjugal State is, upon all Occafions, look'd upon, by thofe that confider and underftand it, as a kind of Civil Eftablifhment in life; to engage in it Rafhly, and without Confideration, is perfectly inconfiftent with the Nature of the Thing, and with all that is propofed in it, or expected from it, at leaft by wife and fober People.

I cannot enter here upon a Defcription of all the feveral Incidents which render a married Life happy or miferable; they are innumerable, and too long to meddle with in a Work fo fhort as this. But as I am moving all those (young People efpecially) who defign to marry, to confider fedately and calmly, and weigh well the Circumftances, and all the Particulars of what they are going to engage in, as well of Perfons as Things; fo I must add, that let the Circumftances of the married Couple be what they will, I believe it will be univerfally true, that those Matches fucceed beft which are entered into with the most ferious and thorough Deliberation; duly debating all the Particulars of the Perfons; ferioufly engaging the Affections on both Sides, by mutual reciprocal Endearments, and and unfeigned fincere Love, founded on real Merit, Suitability and Virtue. These confirm the Felicity, if they may not be faid really to conftitute it: Nor, in a word, is there one Match in fifty happy and successful without it.

Now, to come to the laft Claufe in the Title of this Chapter; it is for want of thefe calm deliberate Proceedings in the Apparatus of Matrimony, for want of weighing Circumftances, and fuiting Perfons to one another, that Matrimony is fo often abufed; fuitability of Perfons is one of the greatest and most important Difficulties that lie before the marrying Couple for their Confideration. The Temper of the Perfon is not easily difcovered, nor does it require a little Judgment and Difcretion to dive into the Disposition of the Perfon; looking too narrowly for Defects (fince all Tempers may have Failings) may be injurious on one hand; as covering the Infirmities which difcover themselves too evidently, may be injurious on another.

I knew a certain Lady in the critical Time of Courtfhip, mighty inquifitive about the Qualifications, the Temper, and the Merit of the Gentleman; and it was thought fhe fhewed abundance of Prudence and Caution in her Obfervation of his Conduct, and her Enquiries into his Character. It happened, one particular Perfon, who was very intimate in the Family of the Gentleman, and knew him more particularly than most did, had fo much Integrity as to inform the Lady's Friend who fhe fent to enquire about him, that he was a hard Drinker, and that particularly he was very illhumoured and quarrelfome when in drink; tho' 'twas allowed that he was very well tempered when fober, and, in general, had the Character of a good-humoured Man.

IT feems no Body elfe was fo kind, or fo juft to her, or fo well acquainted with his Humour, as to acquaint her of this Part, but that one Perfon; and the Lady either liking the Man, or having particularly a mind to be married, or what elfe over-ruled her, I know not, but fhe took this Account, which was the only faithful and fincere one that fhe had given her, to be malicious and falfe; fo fhe went on with her Affair, as before, giving no heed to what fhe had been fo kindly inform'd of.

BUT a little while after, as if Providence had directed it for her more effectual Information, and particularly that fhe might have no excufe, and none to blame but her felf; I fay, a little after this, he happens to be very Drunk, and, in his drink, he not only takes care to give the Lady a Vilit, but goes from her to the Houfe of one of her neareft Relations, and fhows himfelf there too.

THE Lady furprifed, not at his Vifit, but at feeing him in that Condition, as foon as fhe could decently difinifs him, went big with her difcovery, and greatly exafperated as well as difappointed, to make her Complaint, and give her Paffions vent at her Relations, who I mentioned above. But if fhe was vexed and difappointed before, fhe was both angry and afhamed now, to find he had fo little Difcretion in his Wine, as to go and fhow and expofe himfelf there, fo that when fhe faw it, fhe could not forbear reproaching him with it, and that in the bittereft Terms imaginable. THE Gentleman ftood pretty patiently a good while, and bore it all, better than they that knew him expected he thould, confidering he was very drunk, till the Lady giving her Paffions a full vent, fell upon him in a downright fcold, and ended it with a forbidding him to wait upon her any more, that is to fay, bad him give himfelf no farther trouble about her, for fhe had enough of him, and the like.

THUS far, I fay, he held it very well, confidering his Condition : But when the came to that Part, he looked fteadily at her, and with a finiling pleafant Countenance, contrary to his ufual Cuftom when he had been drinking, he turns to her, Ha Madam! Says be, are you fo hot and in fuch a rage! Pray, have you been drinking too? That put her quite mad; and fhe reviled him, told him fhe fcorn'd him, and his Queftion too, that fhe would have him be informed fhe was no fuch Perfon, and a great deal more. No Madam! fays he, are you not in drink, and yet can be in fuch a Rage? Are you fo Pathonate as this when you are fober ? whereas, you fee, I can be fuch a patient Dog when I am drunk, why then, Madam, fays he, in good Faith, I'll take you at your word, for you are not fit to make a Wife for me. So he takes a Glass of Wine, and drinks to her better Fortune, bad her good buy, and immediately, paying his Refpects to the Gentleman of the House, he walks out, and goes away.

IF fhe was angry before, fhe was calm, perfectly calm, and furprized to the laft degree, to fee her felf treated fo foberly by a Man that was hardly himfelf; and that fhe was rejected in earneft, whereas fhe had rejected him but in a kind a kind of a Paffion, and did not intend to be taken at her word.

42

HOWEVER, notwithftanding all this, and notwithftanding fhe faw him in drink feveral times after that, and fometimes when he did not preferve his Temper, as he did then, yet this Lady married him after it all; And what followed? As fhe had reafon to expect, fo it prov'd; fhe was as compleatly miferable in a Husband as a married Life could well make any Woman be; for he proved not only drunken, but a paffionate outragious Wretch in his drink, and that to her in particular.

IT is true, he was very obliging and goodtempered out of his Exceffes; but then, as he grew older, the Vice encreafed upon him; till at laft, fo little made him drunk, and he was fo feldom fober, that fhe had the moft Vexations, and the leaft Intervals of Quiet that ever Lady had; and all this for want of obeying not only the intelligence of her faithful Friend, but even the kind difcovery which Providence made to her, as it were, on purpofe, and paft her being able to doubt the truth of it; fo that indeed fhe had no Body to blame.

BUT to return to the Cafe, and not to infift upon the drunkennefs of a particular Perfon, here or there, which may be faid to be an Accident to the Temper; but without this, the difcording Tempers of the Party is as great, and as effectual a Caufe of the abufe of the matrimonial Peace, as any thing elfe can be.

I have mentioned the fad Confequences of difcording Conftitutions, in a Chapter by it felf, and which often occasions a great abufe of the matrimonial Duty, and particularly of the Marriage Bed; but that is not the Point I am upon here, the difference of Tempers is yet a thoufand times worfe, for this makes a continued Breach in everything they do or fay, ruins the whole Family-Peace, deftroys the Comfort of Life, expels Religion and every good thing; for, as the Scripture fays, where there is Strife and Contention, there is every evil Work.

'Tis the horror of Matrimony when two contrary Tempers come together, when Fire and Tinder meet, they certainly blaze together; when the Spark and the Gunpowder touch, the whole Houfe is blown up; 'tis great pity to fee in fome Families a patient Wife and a furious Husband, or a patient fober Husband, and a termagant fiery Scold; becaufe there is the utmoft Opprefilon on one fide, and the utmoft Rage and Violence on the other.

BUT to have two Devils together in one Houfe, what can be expected but Ruin and Confusion to the whole Family? and at laft either feparation or deftruction.

It is meerly for want of a fuitability of Temper, that the Peace of fo many Families is loft and deftroyed, and Matrimony abufed, and that fo many, once happy People, are made miferable. But I fhall fay more of this ftill.

MATRIMONY is a flate of Union, 'tis the neareft union that the Sexes can be placed in. This Union is appointed in order to the mutual felicity of the Parties; 'tis then a flate that both Parties fhould be particularly careful of, and of their Conduct in, that they may make it answer the End for which it was fo appointed, namely to preferve, and indeed to procure, the mutual Happines to the Parties, and make that Union effectual.

How

How impossible do we make this to our felves, when we invert the great End and Defign even of GoD himfelf, who inftituted and appointed it, and when we make the facred Ordinance a retreat for Crime, a cover for our Exceffes, and a protection to the most abominable Practices.

THIS is what I call abufing the ftate of Matrimony as well as diffionouring the Contract. Matrimony is not a fingle Act, but it is a Condition of Life, and therefore when People are new-married, they are faid to have altered their Condition; it is a Series of Unity contracted by, and fhould be made up of agreeing Habits; where the Harmony is broken, the ftate of Life is abufed; when the Parties ceafe to be united, and to be united too in that which is right, the Life is no more matrimonial, 'tis a Jargon of Speech, a Word without fignification, to call it a matrimonial Life.

In the Contract the Parties bind themfelves to live in this Harmony and ftate of Union; what elfe is underftood by living according to G O D's holy Ordinance. How do they live according to a holy Ordinance, whole Converfation even towards one another, and with one another, pollutes and defiles the ftate of Life, and would the very Ordinance too, if that were poffible?

How the Conversation between a Man and his Wife may and does pollute and defile the matrimonial State, (however firange fuch a thing may be) is the Subject of the following Chapters, where the Affirmative will, I doubt not, be clearly made out.

[ 45 ]

CHAP. II.

Of MATRIMONIAL CHASTITY, what is to be understood by the Word; a Proof of its being required by the Laws of GOD and Nature, and that wrong Notions of it have posses'd the World. Dr. Taylor's Authority quoted about it.

Am yet fettling Preliminaries; the Work I am upon will have fo many Oppofers, fuch Cavillings and Quarrellings, as well at the Subject, as at the Manner of Subject, as at the Manner of of handling it, that I am obliged to provide my Defences in time against all the Batteries of the Enemy.

I have this to boaft of for Encouragement, (viz.) that I know my Argument to be invulnerable; all the Arts of Hell cannot evade the force of it; if there is the leaft Defect, it muft be in the weaknefs of the Performance. Good Weapons may be rendred ufelefs or infufficient in an unskilful Hand; but as no Man elfe has ever undertaken it, I muft venture, I'll manage it as well as I can.

IN the former Chapter I have explained the matrimonial Obligation, what I mean by the the word Matrimony, how it fhould be underftood, and in what fenfe I underftand it in the following Work. I repeat nothing.

I am now to explain another Term equally fignificant, tho' little taken notice of among us, a Word thought to be difficult, but is not difficult; abfolutely neceffary to be underftood towards the right reading this Book, and particularly ufeful to its explanation, I mean MA-TRIMONIAL CHASTITY; 'tis the Breach of this Chaftity that is the Subject of the whole Work, and 'tis therefore, I fay, abfolutely neceffary to underftand what it is.

THE exercise of lawful Enjoyments is one of the greatest Snares of Life; where Men feem to be left to their own Latitudes, 'tis too natural to think they are not obliged to any Reftraint ; but 'tis a great Miftake : Chriftian Limitation is the true measure of human Liberty; where Heaven has had the goodnefs to leave us without a limitation, he expects we fhould limit our felves with the more exactness; and perhaps 'tis the intent and meaning of that feeming unlimited Liberty (for 'tis no more) that our Virtue may have a fair Field for its trial, and that we may more eminently fhew our Christian Temperance, in using those Liberties with the fame Moderation where we have no politive Reftraints imposed, as we would others, where we are under a direct and abfolute Command.

BEING therefore about to reprehend the Breaches of this Moderation, and, in a word, to combat the Exorbitances of unlimited Life, 'tis abfolutely neceffary to know what they are; and to lay down, with the utmost plainnefs that that decency will permit, what it is I am to engage against, and for what Reasons.

CHASTITY is a Virtue much talked of, little practifed; a great Noife is made with the word Chaffity, and, on many Occafions, where little true regard is had to the thing, and perhaps where 'tis little underftood; 'tis taken among us for a meer Regulation of Manners, and a kind of Government of Life. But the definition is infinitely fhort of the thing it felf, which is of a high and fuperior kind; it is a rectitude of Nature, an inherent Brightnefs of the Soul, I'll give you a better defcription of it prefently, and a better defcriber alfo, for I muft fpeak with Authority, if poffible, where I have fo much to fay, and which you will like fo little.

IF Chastity in general be fo little under-ftood, the Chastity I fpeak of is infinitely more out of the way of your ordinary thinking: Matrimonial Chaffity ! 'tis a new strange Term, faid one of my critical Observers before I published this Work; you must be fure to tell us what you mean by it, or it will not be intelligible : What, Says he, are you going to lay down Rules and Laws for the Marriage Bed! Are you going to enclose what Heaven has left free, and pretending to fhew us the deficiency of GoD's Laws, fupply that deficiency with fome wifer Rules of your own ? 'Tis againft Nature, as well as against Heaven. But this Reproof is mifplaced, and the Reprover mistaken. I am far from adding to the Reftraints that Nature, and the God of Nature have laid upon us, but am for fhewing you what Reftraints they are; and particularly to let you fee, there are fome Reftraints ftraints where you fuggeft, and perhaps believe, there are really none.

[ 48 ]

You acknowledge, that Chaffity in general is a Virtue, and a Chriftian Duty; and I affirm there is a particular Chaffity, that is to fay, a limited Liberty, which is to be obferved and ftrictly fubmitted to in the conjugal State; This I call Matrimonial Chaffity, and the Breach of this I call, as in my Title, matrimonial Whoredom; let others call it what they will, I can give it no other Name than what I think it deferves.

Tho' they're called Miffes which lewd Men adore,
I cannot guild their Crimes, a Whore's a Whore.

HAVING thus entered upon the difficult Task of reproving those criminal Practices of Men, which are acted under the shelter of supposed lawful Liberty, I must state the due Bounds and Extent of that Liberty, that we may the better ground our suture Censures, and be able to justify the Reproof from the Rules established in the Foundation.

Now, that I may do this with the better Authority. I begin with quoting the late Pious and Reverend Dr. Taylor; in his Book of Holy Living, he has a whole Chapter upon this very Subject, I mean of Chaftity, and I cannot take my Arguments from a better Beginning.

"Chaftity, fays the Doctor, is the Circumci-"fion of the Heart, the fuppreffing all irregu-"lar Defires in the Matter of carnal and fen-"fual Pleafures.

HERE the Doctor has made a Provision to encounter the merry Disputants of this Age, as pungent and as natural, as if he had been now alive, alive, and knew the highth to which the corrupt Imaginations of Men have carried those irregular Defires: What do you pretend to call Irregular, faid a cavilling favourer of Vice to me once, alfo before this Book was thought of? What can be Irregular between a Man and his Wife?

I fhall have more to fay to that Queftion in the next Chapters, and doubt not to fpeak to the Conviction of reafonable Creatures : As to human Brutes I am not looking towards them, much lefs talking to them in a Difcourfe of Chastity; let them alone to their irregular Defires, and let the fuccefs of those gratify'd De-fires be their reprover; they generally end in Repentance, or, which is worfe, Self-reproaches. But I come back to Dr. Taylor. "I call all those Defires irregular, fays the " Reverend Doctor.

" I. THAT are not within the holy Infli-" tution, or within the Protection of Mar-" riage.

" 2. THAT are not within the Order of Na-" ture.

" 2. THAT are not within the Moderation " of Christian Modesty.

In this last Head he includes (to use his own Words) all immoderate use of permitted Beds, which is exactly to the purpole that I am fpeaking of, and upon which Subject the fecond Chapter of this Book is chiefly employ'd.

"CONCERNING which, Says the Same worthy "Author, Judgment is to be made as concern-" ing Meats and Drinks, there being no certain " degree of frequency or intention prefcribed to "any <sup>v<sub>c</sub></sup> any Perfon, but it is to be ruled as the other "Actions of Man's Life are ruled, viz.

[ 50 ]

" 1. By the Proportion to the End.

" 2. By the Dignity of the Perfon as a "Christian.

" 3. By the other Particulars, of which he fpeaks afterwards.

" CHASTITY (fays he) is the Grace which " forbids and reftrains all thefe, keeping both " the Body and the Soul pure, in the flate GOD " has placed it, whether of a fingle or married " Life, I Theff. iv. 3, 4, 5.

AND now having quoted fo eminent an Author as Dr. Taylor, whofe Works are fo well known, let me put all my good Friends, who watch for my balting, in mind, that the Doctor having this very Article upon his Hands, and being refolved to fpeak critically, and yet fully, to it, he takes all due caution in the doing it, juft as I have done. First, He cautions the Reader against unjust Centure and Reproach. (2.) He then fortifies himself against the Fears of it: And, Lastly, fpeaks boldly and plainly where Duty calls upon him to do fo. Just in this manner you may expect me to act, in that critical Article of Liberty which is before me.

THE Doctor, it appears, knew how the World was vitiated, and the Minds of Men corrupted, even in his Day, and that it was a most dangerous thing to speak of fuch things as these in the Ears of a lewd Set of People, which the World was then full of; That they would corrupt the most fanctified Advice, and infult the Adviser, and therefore as I have done here, fo the the devout Doctor gives caution, and enters his Proteil against misconstruction and misunderftanding of what he was to fay; this he does with infinite Modesty and Referve, but ventures for all that upon the Reproof as a neceffary Work; his Example is highly useful to me in this equally neceffary Work, of laying open the Crimes of the prefent Age; which, it must be acknowledged, is much farther advanced in Wickedness than the Times the Doctor lived in. His Words are these:

Dr. Taylor's Preamble to his Chapter upon the Subject of CHASTITY.

" READER, stay, Says be, and read not the " Advices of the following Section, unlefs that " thou haft a chaft Spirit; and in another Place " he fays, unless thou hast a chast Spirit, and " unless thou art defirous of being chaft, or at " leaft art apt to confider whether thou oughteft " or not. For there are fome Spirits fo Atheisti-" cal, and fome fo wholly poffefs'd with the ٤٢ Spirit of uncleannefs, that they turn the 65 most prudent and chast Discourses into " dirty and filthy Apprehenfions; like cho-" lerick Stomachs, changing their very Cor-" dials and Medicines into bitternefs, and, in " a literal fenfe, turning the Grace of God into " Wantonness."

" THESE Men fludy Cafes of Confcience in "the Matter of carnal Sins, not to avoid them, "but to learn Ways how to offend Go D, and pol-"lute their own Spirits; fearching their Houfes "with a Sun-beam, that they may be inform'd of all the Corners of Naftinefs.

[ 52 ]

"I have ufed all the care I cou'd in the fol-"lowing Periods, that I might neither be "wanting to affift those that need it, nor yet "minister any Occasion of fancy or vainer "Thoughts to those that need them not. If "any Man will fnatch the pure Taper from my "hand, and hold it to the Devil, he will only burn his own Fingers, but shall not rob me of the "reward of my Care and good Intention, fince I have taken heed how to express the following "Duties, and given him caution how to read "them.

THUS far Dr. Taylor. He had but one Chapter, or Section, as be calls it, upon the Subject of Chaftity, and yet you fee how wary he was, leaft the ill digefture of the Times fhould turn that which he defigned for the wholefome Nourifhment of the Mind, to a corrupt and unclean purpofe. How much more have I juft ground to warn the Reader of this Work, that he may forbear reading it with a Defign to gratify or pleafe a tainted and vitiated Imagination ? Let him rather prepare to read a juft Reproof of the vileft Actions, with the fame deteftation and abhorrence that I write it with, and with fuch clean Thoughts as becomes a Mind feafoned with Virtue, awed by Religion, and prepared by a due Reverence to the divine Command.

To the pure all things are pure, to the unclean all things are unclean; they that are difpofed to ridicule and make a jeft of the juft Satyr here pointed at Crime, will but make a jeft of themfelves; fince nothing can be more evident than the Offence, nothing can be more juft than the Reproof. If Men will defile themfelves, as the Scots fay, no Man can dight them. 'Tis very ftrange ftrange a Man fhould be afraid to expose a Crime for fear of encreafing it, as if the very Shame fhould excite to the Sin.

BUT I must keep to the Point, and to which I refolve to confine my felf. Chaffity is no popular Subject, 'tis fo broken into upon all Hands, and with fuch a Gust of general defire, that to rake into the Filth must be difagreeable to the generality of People; and tho' I do not let it alone for that Reason, being not at all reluctant to an attack upon a Crime, because grown flagrant and universal, yet at prefent I am upon another Subject; I am attacking a Crime equally odious, but which is not equally acknowledged to be a Crime, a Wickedness which even fome that pretend to Purity of Life will not allow to be wicked.

So much more is the Danger, when Men walk among Barrels of Gunpowder, and know it not to be Gunpowder, who fhall be cautious of his Candle ? It is not fo hard to perfuade fuch Men to fhun the Evil, as to convince them that it is an Evil; they cavil at the very Title of this Chapter Matrimonial Chaffity, 'tis Nonfence, they fay, in the Nature of the thing; Virgin Chaftity indeed, and Chaftity of a fingle Perfon, is fomething, and would bear to be exhorted to; but married Chaftity is what they will by no means underftand, or bear a Reproof about.

But becaufe I have, as I faid above, a whole Chapter upon this very Subject, and only mention it here with refpect to Opinions of good Men about it, give me leave to quote the Reverend Perfon juft now nam'd upon the fame Subject, and refer you afterward to my own Opinion in the following Difcourfe.

DR.

DR. Tayler, in his Difcourfe of Chaftity mentioned above, after having fpoken of Virgin Chaftity and Vidual Chaftity, comes of courfe to mention the very Thing I am now upon, and in the very fame Terms, viz.

 $\begin{bmatrix} 54 \end{bmatrix}$

MATRIMONIAL CHASTITY.

And I choofe to give it you in his own Words, becaufe, before I remembered that the Doctor had mentioned this Cafe, I had finished the next Chapters, viz. of the Bounds and Limitations which Modesty and Decency had placed to the Liberties of the Marriage Bed, and which the Doctor's Opinion so far confirms, that I could not but subjoin his Thoughts after my own was gone to the Prefs. The Doctor's Rules for married Persons are thus express'd:

<sup>6</sup> CONCERNING married Perfons, befides <sup>6</sup> the keeping their mutual Faith and Contract <sup>4</sup> with each other, thefe Particulars are uleful <sup>6</sup> to be obferved.

<sup>6</sup> I. ALTHOUGH their mutual Endearments <sup>4</sup> are fafe within the Protection of Marriage, <sup>4</sup> yet they that have Wives or Husbands, mult <sup>6</sup> be as tho' they had them not; that is, they <sup>6</sup> muft have an Affection greater to each other <sup>6</sup> than they have to any Perfon in the World, <sup>6</sup> but not greater than they have to GOD: but <sup>6</sup> that they be ready to part with all Intereft in <sup>6</sup> each other's Perfon, rather than fin againft <sup>6</sup> GOD.

<sup>c</sup> IN their Permiffion and Licence, they must <sup>b</sup> be fure to observe the Order of Nature, and <sup>c</sup> the Ends of GOD. He is an ill Husband, that <sup>c</sup> uses bis Wife as a Man treats a Harlot, having <sup>e</sup> no other End but Pleasure. Concerning <sup>c</sup> which

" which our beft Rule is, that although in this, ' as in eating and drinking, there is an Appe-' tite to be fatisfied, which cannot be done without pleafing that defire; yet fince that defire and fatisfaction was intended by Nature ' for other Ends, they fhould never be feparate ' from those Ends, but always be joined with all ' or one of those Ends, with a defire of Children, ' or to avoid Fornication, or to lighten and ease the cares and sadnesses of Houshold-affair, or to endear each other; but never with a purpofe. ¢ either in act or defire to feparate the fenfua-' lity from thefe Ends which hallow it. Onan ' did feparate his Act from its proper End, and fo ordered his Embraces that his Wife fhould ٢ not conceive, and GOD punished him.

<sup>6</sup> 3. MARRIED Perfons muft keep fuch mo-<sup>6</sup> defty and decency of treating each other, that <sup>6</sup> they never force themfelves into high and <sup>6</sup> violent Lufts, with arts and misbecoming de-<sup>6</sup> vices: always remembring that those Mix-<sup>6</sup> tures are most innocent which are most fimple <sup>6</sup> and most natural, most orderly and most fafe.

' 4. IT is a duty of matrimonial Chaftity to · be reftrained and temperate in the use of <sup>6</sup> their lawful Pleafures: Concerning which, ' although no universal Rule can antecedently ' be given to all Perfons, any more than to all ' Bodies one proportion of Meat and Drink; ' yet married Perfons are to effimate the degree ٤ of their Licence according to the following ۲. Proportions. I. That it be moderate, fo as to ¢ confift with Health. 2. That it be fo ordered ٢ as not to be too extensive of Time, that pre-4 cious opportunity of working out our Sal-6 vation. 3. That when Duty is demanded it be always payed (fo far as in our Powers and E 4 ' Election) <sup>e</sup> Election) according to the foregoing Meafures. 4. That it be with a temperate Affection, ' without violent transporting Defires, or too ' fenfual Applications. Concerning which a " Man is to make Judgment by proportion to · other Actions, and the Severities of his Reli-' gion, and the Sentences of fober and wife · Perfons; always remembring, that Marriage ' is a Provision for fupply of the natural Ne-· ceffities of the Body, not for the artificial and <sup>e</sup> procured Appetites of the Mind. And it is a fad truth, that many married Perfons think-' ing that the Flood-gates of Liberty are fet " wide open without Meafures or Reftraints (fo " they fail in that Channel) have felt the final " Rewards of their Intemperance and Luft, by ' their unlawful ufing of lawful Permittions. • Only therefore let each of them be temperate, * and both of them be modeft.

[ 56 ]

THUS far the Reverend Doctor, a Man whofe Character gave him an undoubted Right to the Title of a true fpiritual Guide, thorowly qualified in his time for a Teacher of Holy Living.

I add nothing, only that here is a Confirmation indeed unexpected of all the Principles which I have advanced in this Work.

HERE is a full Concession to the real occasion and even necessity of my prefent Undertaking; the Doctor grants, that married Persons even at that time thought the Flood-gates of Liberty were set open to them, and that (as I faid) Modesty and Decency was at an End after Marriage, and there was no more Restraint between a Man and his Wife.

But you will find the Doctor quite of another Opinion, as I alfo am; and I am very glad to have to unqueftioned an Authority for my Opinion.

CHAP.

[ 57 ]

LERGIE MONSTAN

CHAP. III.

Of the End and Reafon of MATRIMONY, and that there is a needful Modesty and Decency requisite even between a Man and his Wife after Marriage, the Breaches of which make the first Branch of Matrimonial Whoredom.

HE Ends and Reafon of Matrimony are affigned by our Church in T the Office, or Introduction to the Office for marrying fuch Perfons as may be lawfully join'd together; if I repeat them, I hope no Reproof can lie againft me there; the most modest Virgin submits to be told, that the Reason of joining her felf to a Man, is principally for the Procreation of Children; 'tis the Law of Generation given both to the Man and to the Woman atfirst; 'tis twisted with their very Natures, and placed among the first Principles of Life; and 'tis also the Law of God, given to Man imperatively at the fame time that he joined to it his Bleffing, Gen. i. 28. And GOD bleffed them, and GOD faid unto them, be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the Earth.

IN

In this great Law of Matrimony is founded the utmost Intercourse and familiarity of the Sexes, by which all that Shynefs, that modeft Referve and Reftraint, all that which is called fhamefacednefs and blufhing, even in the moft modeft and chaft Virgin, is taken away; that is to fay, fo far only, and no farther, as refpects her immediate Intimacy and Conversation with her own Husband; the freely ftrips off her Cloths in the Room with him; and whereas fhe would not have fhew'd him her Foot before, without her Shoe and Stocking on, fhe now, without the leaft Breach of Modefty, goes into what we call the naked Bed to him, and with him; lies in his Arms, and in his Bofom, and fleeps fafely, and with fecurity to her Virtue with him, all the Night : And this is her Place, her Property, her Privilege, exclusive of all others, for he is her own, and fhe is his; he is the covering of the Eyes to her, and fhe is called, in the facred Text, the Wife of his Bosom; the has the only right to lodge there; it is her Retreat, the Repolitory of her Cares, as well as of her Delight, and of her Affection.

AND if it is not thus with both or either of them, nay, if it was not thus before they married, let them flatter themfelves as they pleafe with the formal Marriage, or the formality of Matrimony, I infift they have violated the Laws of GoD and Man, in their coming together; violated their folemn Oath and Covenant to one another after coming together; and whatever they are in the Senfe of the Law, they are really no Man and Wife at all in the Senfe which I am giving of Things: Whether I am in the right or no, I refer to the Judgment of the impartial Part of fober Mankind. HAVING

HAVING faid thus much by way of ad-. vance, I think 'tis neceffary to take notice here how just it is, and indifpensibly, nay, absolutely neceffary to the Happinels of a married Life, that the Perfons marrying fhould have not only an Acquainiance with one another before Marriage, but that they fhould be engaged to each other by a folid and durable Affection, profeffing to love, and not only profelling but fincerely loving one another, above all other Perfons; choosing and being the real choice of each other: This is not a fmall and triffing thing, it is the chief Article of Matrimony, tho? not included and afferted in the Contract, 'tis a thing of the utmost Confequence to the future Happinels of the Parties. However, as I purpofe to fpeak to it again fully and at large, in a Part by it felf, I only leave it here as a Memorandum proper to the Place, and referve the reft to what shall come after. I return now to the Cafe of Matrimonial Liberty.

HAVING advanced thus much in favour of the utmost Freedoms between Man and Wife, and which I might enlarge upon, but that I believe there is really no Occafion; I think I grant as much in it as I need to do, in Condefcenfion to the Proposition mentioned in the Introduction, namely, that there can be no Offence between a Man and his Wife, that Modefty is at an End, that 'tis cancelled by the very nature of the Thing, that all Things are Decent, all Things modelt, all Things lawful between a Man and his Wife; all which, in a few Words, I deny, and infift, that there are feveral Things yet remaining, which ftand as Boundaries and Limits to the Freedoms and Intimacies that are otherwife to be allowed between a Man and his Wife.

AND first, I infift that these limitations of the conjugal Liberties are placed in the open View of both the Man and his Wife, by the Laws of Nature ; fo that both of them are furnished with Principles of Reluctance and Averfion, fufficient, if duly liften'd to, and if the Laws of Nature are obeyed, to arm them against any Breaches of those Laws. It is evident in many Cafes, too many, had it not pleafed GOD to fuffer it to be fo, that the Laws of Nature have a much ftronger Influence upon us than the Laws of our Maker; and this is especially remarkable in those Cafes, where the Laws of Nature feem to give fome Latitudes which the Laws of God, and Inftitutions of his Providence, have thought fit to limit and restrain. For example ;

60 ]

THE Laws of Nature dictate the propagation of Kind by the intercourfe of Sexes; the laws of GOD fubfequent to thofe of Nature, limit and reftrain the Particulars of this Propagation, namely, that the Man (by Man there is to be underftood Man or Woman) fhould be allowed but one Woman at a time, that they be bound together by the facred Bonds of Matrimony indiffolvable, after once engaged in, and therefore facred, and to be inviolably adhered to, and preferved by both Parties.

IT is true, that there is a corrupt Principle inbred and indwelling, taking a kind of Poffeffion, too much in Man's Nature, degenerated as it is by the Fall; this corrupt Principle dictates the Propagation of the Kind, that is, as a Law of Nature, but does it without regard to the limitations imposed by Heaven upon the Branches; that is to fay, without entring into the Engagements of Matrimony, and and this makes those Actions criminal, which otherwise would have been lawful; makes the Man commit a Crime in that very Action, which done under due Regulations and Limitations, that is to fay, in Wedlock, would not only be lawful, but his commanded Duty.

IT is the fame afterwards; for example, when those Limitations are obeyed and fubmitted to, I mean, the Limitations of Matrimony, there are (as I have observed) yet farther Limitations, which the Laws of Nature concur with the Laws of GOD in, and which the Man is obliged to obferve, tho' this corrupt Principle would fain evade and avoid them : thefe are fuch as I hinted to be contained in the Words Decency and Modefly : Now tho' much of the Obligation is taken off by the allowed Intimacies between a Man and his Wife, and a full and free Intercourfe of Sexes is granted; yet I must be pardoned the liberty of faying, there are Bounds and Limitations of Decency, Modefty and Moderation, which ftand as a Pale about even their matrimonial Liberties, and fay to them both, in the midft of their greateft Endearments, Hitherto shall you go, and no farther.

As I am fpeaking to the married Perfons only, in this Part, I need explain my felf no farther than to fay, there are Bounds and Meafures, Times and Seafons, which Nature and Decency always will dictate to them, and will regulate too, and teach them to regulate between themfelves their moft intimate conjugal Delights and Embraces : Thefe nothing but an Appetite criminally immoderate, and under no Government, no not of Reafon, Religion, PhiloPhilosophy, or common Sense, will trespass of break through.

[ 62 ]

I hope I have hitherto kept the Bounds of Decency, and given no Offence, though I am reproving one of the most notorious Breaches of conjugal Modefty; a thing even Nature her felf abhors, tho' Nature vitiated may be faid to be the Occafion of it ; I fay, Nature, under any just Regulation of Senfe, Nature, abstracted from criminal Habits, abhors it; and, which is more, Nature speaks plainer in her Reproofs of that Crime than I darè do, while the Product of those impure and unlawful, however matrimonial Liberties, carry the indelible Marks of their Parents unhappy Exceffes and Intemperances in their Faces, and on the blotch'd and bladdred Skin of their Posterity for many Years, nay, to their dying Days. As if Nature had declared to them, that fhe was able to fhew her Refentment for the Breach of her tacit and fecret Inhibitions; and that though they broke in upon her in fecret by the power of an inflamed and vitiated Appetite, and thought themfelves out of the reach of Punishment." vet that fhe was able to do her felf Juffice upon them, in a manner that they could not efcape, and which should fix a lafting Infamy upon both the Offence and the Offender, by a Punishment which they should neither be able to avoid or to conceal.

I need explain my felf no farther, Nature does it for me; and I have, by her Indulgence, a full liberty to touch this tender Part with the ftricteft Obfervation of my own Rules, fince fhe has fpoken it aloud, and has made the Crime of the Parent flagrant in the very Pictures of their Pofterity. How do fuch Children call upon their Parents to blufh, every time they fee the fcrophulous Humours break out, in Scabs and Blifters upon the poor innocent Lamb's Faces? making them bear the unhappy Reproach of their Fathers and Mothers Conjugal Lemdnefs?

I need fay no more to this, but to remind those that are guilty, that the more modest Brutes of the Forest, who obey the Laws of Sense, and follow the Dictates of meer Nature, do not act thus: The Wild Ass, which the Scripture represents as the most vitiated ungoverned of all the Forest, yet the Text fays, in ber Months you shall find ber; the has her Seafons, and to have all the rest of the beastly Creatures, and they all observe them firictly and fuitably to the Reasons of Nature, Man and Woman only excepted.

THIS I call, and I think justly too, as it refpects one Part only, a Branch of Matrimonial Whoredom, and thus I keep close to my Title.

I could load this Part with a throng of Examples, a cloud of felf-condemned Witneffes, and fome whofe Stories I can the lefs bear to relate without blufhing, becaufe they are arrived to fuch a Pitch of Wickednefs as to make it publick themfelves without fhame. But, as I faid above, Nature has printed upon the tainted poifoned Faces of their Pofterities, fuch indelible Spots, has branded them with fuch Marks of Infamy, that I may fay of them as was faid in another Cafe, What need any farther Witneffes? Let  $L_{--}$  D of St. A—'s, the beautiful Lady of --, the modeft and better taught Abr—, and more I could name, go home and fee what havock vock this conjugal Lewdnefs has made among their otherwife pretty Families; I fpare Names, becaufe I defire the Reproof may be Matter of Reflection to themfelves, rather than Scandal.

As to fome others, who I could mention too both Chriftian and Sirname, and who richly deferve it; who are fo far from Shame, that they make it every Day the boafts of their Coffeehoufe-chat, their Table-talk, and ordinary Converfation; I leave them to the difinal Time of Reproach, when those unhappy Children which they now are not assumed to show one another as the Examples of their Wickedness, shall again remind them of it, and curfe them to their Faces.

THE Cafe indeed will not bear entering farther into Particulars; nor will it fo much as allow the neceffary Expoftulations which I fhould otherwife make here with those married Chriftians, (for fuch I am talking to) who I would perfuade to reflect upon it; 'tis hard, that neither the Cafe itfelf will bear an enquiring into, nor the Perfons guilty bear to be talked to. How can any Perfons who are really guilty of this conjugal Uncleannefs, reproach an Author for the Sin of naming what they are not ashamed of doing? I look upon the Crime with Abhorrence, and I could refer you to the Scripture, where it is branded with a Title that deferves it; as I fay, I look on the Crime with Abhorrence, fo I add, that I look on the Perfons with fomething beyond it, and can only add this of them, that as they were not to be touch'd under the Law, fo they are not to be named under the Gofpel. GoD would not take them for Jews till they were wash'd, and I fhall shall never take them for Christians till they reform; let them read their Reproof at large in Levit. xv. to which I refer.

I cannot quit this Part without making fome Reflections upon parallel Cafes. I have heard fome ferious and learned Divines fay, that it is a worfe Crime, and deferves a feverer Cenfure from Man, (obferve they did not fpeak of what either of them merited above) for a Man and Woman under Promifes of Marriage to lie together before the Marriage is compleated, than a fimple or fingle Fornication between two who have no defign of Matrimony, that is in fhort, between what we ordinarily call a Whore and a Rogue; and I confefs, though at firft I hefitated a little at it, I am fully fatisfied it is fo; and the Reafons the faid ferious Divines gave me confirm me in that Opinion.

FOR a Man to commit a fingle Fornication, fay they, he Sins against GOD, and his own Soul, there is no Room to deny that; the Scripture is clear, and the Laws of God and Man concur in the Cenfure, as they do in the Prohibition : But for a Man to make a Whore of the very Woman who he intends and really defigns to make his Wife, or, in plain English, to make a Whore of his Wife; he defiles his own Bed. pollutes his own Seed, fpreads Baftardy in his own Race, and fhews a most wicked vitiated Appetite, that could not with-hold himfelf from her meerly as a Woman, till the Performance of a lawful Marriage might make it feafonable, as well as lawful; fuch a Man fatisfies the brutal Part at the expence of his Wife's Fame, his Child's Legitimacy, and to the fcandal and offence of all good People, that fhall hear it. F and and who cannot name it without pity, or abhorrence, on account of the Circumftances.

[ 66 ]

THIS is the Cafe indeed, where a Man acts fuch a wicked and fcandalous Part; he apparently expofes and diffionours his Wife, as well as himfelf; nor is it fufficient to fay, that the Woman diffionours her felf too, or that there is much more of the Blame lies on him than on her; for as fhe fufficiently bears her Share of the Reproach, fo fhe bears more of the Scandal, than the Man; nay, fhe expofes her felf, not to the World only, but to her Husband afterward; and much might be faid to that: Nor is it out of the queftion, for it is indeed a Matrimonial Whoredom in the literal Senfe.

BUT as fuch I shall speak of it again. I am now naming it as it is a parallel Cafe to that I had been just now speaking of, wherein there is a just equality, and a proportion of Particulars very apposite to one another; for here is a horrid Complication of the like Crimes, the Man defiles his own Bed, exposes his own Wife, contaminates and corrupts his own Blood, fpreads Diftempers and Poifon upon his own Race, and all this from one of the groffeft Pieces of Immodefty, and worft of Brutality, that can be express'd in Words; an infamous kind of eagernefs or appetite, ungovernable by his Reafon, being unable (or pretending to be fo at leaft) to with-hold himfelf from her till other Particulars might take off the little Reftraints, and leave him at liberty.

LET fuch Men go not to the Foreft and the Beafts only, for they act from a much better Motion, but to the more rational, more moderate and better governed Savages of the Indies, Eaft or Weft, to the Negroes of Africa, the Poti67]

Potiguara's of Brafile, nay, to the very Hatters tots of Monomotapa, and the Cape of Good Hope: they will find Reafon and Nature too prevails among them to act quite otherwife, and that while Reafon and Nature concur in arming them against it, fo they more punctually obey the command of both, and have this horrid Practice in the greatest detestation. But here, let us blush, and fay no more, for no modest Language can fully express it.

I return to the Principle, which is the Proposition in this Chapter, That there is a needful Modefty and Decency requifite even between a Man and his Wife after Marriage, and not deftroyed by their Matrimony. Certainly People do not by Matrimony cease to be Men and Women, nor do the Man and Woman ceafe to be rational Creatures, much lefs do they ceafe to be Chriftians; let every marry'd Couple remember those three Things, and I am fully affured they will take care not to deferve the Reproof of this Chapter.

THIS is then that Circumstance in the married State, where, I fay, a Referve is placed between the Sexes, even between the Man and his Wife; where that which we call Modefty remains as an indelible Bond upon them both, even after Marriage: They that fay there is no Modefty to be named after Matrimony, but that there is a perfect unlimited and unbounded Liberty on both Sides, either do not know, or do not rightly confider the Laws of Nature, the Conftitution Bonds, which, as Matrimony does not remove from the Sexes, fo neither does it remove the Obligation from either Sex to regard them. One would think indeed the Power of Nature should be fuch, and the Senfe of these things be be fo plainly ftampt in the Minds of reafonable Creatures, that there fhould be no need, or indeed room for the Caution. But as the Breach of this Law, however fcandalous, is fo vifible among us, it merits to ftand foremoft among the conjugal Crimes I am now to reprove.

I forefee what fome of my merry Readers will think they are to hear of next, viz. that I shall preach Lectures of matrimonial Moderation, or Satyrize fome of their boafted Exceffes; but they will be unhappily difappointed, my Care of avoiding to reprove in Words at length; what fome of them are not afhamed to boaft of in Words at length, will perhaps leave fome People to go more unreproved than they deferve.

YET let  $\mathcal{F} - \mathcal{A}$  - take a modeft Hint upon the groffeft Indecency of that kind, which this Part of the Town has ever fhown, and which he acted in fight and hearing of more of his Friends than approved the fcandalous Practice; when, with the groffeft Immodefty, he gave the detail of his Marriage Night's Performances, to a grave and eminent Magistrate of the City upon the open Exchange, and was handfomely reproved and exposed for it, as he deferved. When Men glory in their Shame, they make Indecencies of that which might otherwife not be fuch, and they break the Rules of Modefty without Doors, when perhaps they did not within. But this Part of the Satyr goes no farther than the Fact, I return to the Subject it felf.

EVERY wife Man would act the Part of a wife Man, were there no Law to reftrain him. Prudence dictates to Men of Prudence, and Modefty Modefty to Men of Modefty; the great Law of Matrimony is a ftrict Union of the Perions; this Union extends to many other Things, as well as to the Union of Sexes, and, among the reft, there is, or fhould be, a Union of Kindnefs moving to a gentle and tender using one ano-ther in Matters of Civility and Courtefy, as well as in Matters of Modesty. Certainly the Rules of Civility are not abolifhed by Matrimony; Should not the Man and his Wife be civil and just to one another, because they may be free ? That's a strange Freedom that obliges us to be rude and difobliging.

Now these Rules of Decency which, I fay, are not destroyed by Matrimony, extend to many things even between a Man and his Wife, which I have not yet mentioned, and which I have with regret obferved to be broken into by fome who had been better taught, and who ought to have known by the Laws of good Manners how to have acted after another fort; the Branches I point at now may be touch'd more clofely, and will admit of fpeaking plainer English than those I have just now mentioned; and though the Immodefty may in many Things be as great, and that it comes from the fame corrupt, vicious Original, either in the Man or the Woman, yet they are not express'd in so open and so scandalous and offenfive Terms.

THE first Case is, when either the Man or Woman make injurious Reproaches upon one another for natural or accidental Infirmities, incapacitating them to answer and fatisfy mutual Expectation; that is to fay, to answer conjugal Duties; and this more efpecially when those Infirmities have not been Ante-matrimo-F nial. nial, not before Marriage, but occafioned by Diftemper or Difafter afterward, and those Diftempers or Difafters such as are truly cafual, and to be honeftly accounted for. There must certainly be a great defect of Modesty in the Man or the Woman, who can reproach the Wife or the Husband in such a Cafe as this.

A Lady, whofe Name I reflect on with difdain, but conceal it in Charity, after having had five fine Children by her Husband, having, tho' with Civility too, been deny'd fomething which fhe defired, and which he thought a little too expenfive for his Circumftances, after fome warm Words, but lefs criminal, turned from him with fcorn, and told him, he might let it alone fince he was grown fo faving fhe would not accept of it now, be might keep it for bis next Child.

THE Gentleman had about two Years before had a Fit of Sicknefs, which had brought him very low, and by which he was grown a little Paralitick, how it affected his natural Powers, could not perhaps be underflood fo well by any Body as by his Wife: But fuppofing the worft, it was not without the utmoft Breach of Decency and Modefty, fuppofing none to have been prefent but themfelves, that fhe could reproach him with that Part of it in fuch a manner; but it was infinitely more fo, and fhe was inexcufably guilty, that fhe did it in the hearing of others, and with fome kind of Additions of Banter and Raillery too, which fat very ill upon her Tongue at that time.

IT is true, the Folly of it retorted exceedingly upon her Fame, and foon got into the Mouths of fome of her fatyrical Neighbours, who failed not to make herv ery angry, I had rather rather I could have faid afhamed, upon hearing of it again : But it had no Effect upon her as to her Conduct to him, nor could the refrain doubling her Reproaches between themfelves, which her Husband, being a Man of Spirit, refented to the highest Degree: This put an end to all conjugal Kindnefs between them, and ruined their Family-Peace, till fhe at length made him her Jeft, and that in Company too; yet fhe got nothing by him this Way neither; for he taking the Jeft with a finile of Contempt, as indeed it deferved, frequently answered, that he would hire her a Journeyman, fince she took fuch Care to let every Body know the had Occafion for one, that if one was not enough for her, as he thought it would not, he would provide her two or three, that, if it were possible, she might be fatisfied, though he very much doubted it. This was very bitter upon her, 'tis true, but fhe extorted it from him; indeed till he took this Courfe with her, he could by no Perfuafions, by no Arguments, nor by any Ways that he could use, prevail with her to hold her Tongue, nor indeed did those Reproaches, however fevere, put an End to it, but they went on continually bantering and making a Jeft of one another, and fuch like undecent and unkind Things as thefe pafs'd fo openly, and fo often between them, that at length it occafioned a Separation for a time, and the Husband being too hard for her, it ruined her Character and Reputation, and though it did not her Virtue, as those believed who had Charity for the Lady, and I, among the reft, yet fhe re-tained the Blot of it almost as much as if she had had the guilt, and that as long as fhe lived.

THESE

THESE are fome of the Things which Modefty and Decency forbids between a Man and his Wife; the contrary is a Debt to conjugal Affection on one hand, and to Laws of Decency and good Manners on the other, both which no matrimonial Familiarities or Intimacies can deftroy.

AND here give me leave to observe, though not with the fame Reflection, and without any Satyr upon the Thing as Criminal and Immodeft; that, however the matrimonial Intimacies between a Man and his Wife, may difcharge them of much of the Bondage of Ceremony in their Conversation, yet I can by no means agree, that becaufe a Woman has given her felf up to him without any referve, all tendernefs and regard to her as a Woman, and all diffinction in Company fhould be taken away; that fhe fhould have no refpect fhown to her in whatever Circumstances she is confidered, but, on the contrary, that therefore her Husband fhould treat her with Rudeness and Indecency, want of Manners, and even of Respects ever after. There are fome remains certainly of the first Civilities due to the Wife after Marriage, which were paid to her in her diftant Circumstances. as a Maid, before, and in the time of Courtship; and unlefs the Wife her felf forfeit them by any brutish disobliging Things on her Side, they are not entirely obliterated by Matrimony, no not to the laft.

ON this Account, though I cannot fay that a Life of Ceremony between Man and Wife fhould be recommended, yet certainly a Life of Civility fhould; they fay that Ceremony deftroys Affection, and, in fome refpects, I don't know but it may, and when we fee a Man and his his Wife, however great, always bowing and fcraping and finking to one another, we are apt to fay there's more Manners than Affection between them.

BUT on the other hand, when the Husband and Wife are fo far from treating one another with Ceremony, that they cannot keep up common Civility, but that they treat one another with Difdain and Contempt, there's a certain lofs both of Affection and good Manners too.

For this Reafon I would advife all the good Husbands and Wives that will accept that Advice, never to mingle their Difcourfes, efpecially before Company, with Raillery and Jeft upon one another; when a Woman once comes to make a Jeft of her Husband, fhe is loft, fhe is gone; and when the Man makes a Jeft of his Wife he is a going, at leaft in my Opinion : I fhall explain the Words gone and going prefently; when a Man makes a Jeft of his Wife every Body believes he hates her; when the Woman makes a Jeft of her Husband, they believe fhe cuckolds him.

At leaft 'tis a fatal Sign that all conjugal Affection is dead and buried from between them. I frequently vifited my Friend M-----, when his Wife and he had been married about two Years, but I was most irkfomely entertained every time with his Banters and Turns of Wit, his Sarcass, Jests, and indeed Buffoonry, all upon his Wife; I observed at first the took it well enough, and now and then gave him a smart return, which was not to his Advantage; for she had a World of Wit, but her Modestry and Sense convinced her, without any Bodies reproof, that it was no Part for a Wife [74]

Wife to act; that her Husband was wrong in it, and fometimes that would fetch fome Tears from her: But fhe would not imitate that in Practice which fhe thought fo ill became her Husband, fo fhe bore it all as an Affliction.

I had in Friendship feveral times gently hinted to Mr. M———, that I thought he was too hard upon his Lady, that he knew she was a Woman of good Breeding, and had an uncommon share both of Wit and good Humour; but he might easily see the was not pleafed with it, and that he seemed really to oppress her with it.

HOWEVER, he went on, and putting one time very hard upon fomething in her Behaviour, which he pretended not to like, though really without Caufe; fhe coloured at his Words, which fhew'd fhe refented them, and was mov'd; but fhe immediately recovered her felf, and keeping back all her Refentment, fhe, with an inexpreffible Goodnefs in her Face, and a Smile, faid to him, My Dear, you would like it in any Body but your Wife.

I was indeed furprized at it, but her Husband much more; and after the Converfation was over, he came to me eager to fpeak : Well, fays be, you heard what a Blow my Wife gave me; I acknowledge fhe has conquered me; I fhould have really liked it if it had been any one elfe, and I was entirely wrong; but I'll take your Advice, a Man fhould never make a common Jeft of his Wife, and I'll do it no more I affure you.

I was mightily pleafed to fee the Effect it had upon him; for this Humour of jefting with his Wife, or rather making her the conftant Subject ject of Ridicule and Jeft, came up to this at laft, that fhe could do nothing that would pleafe him; but, in fhort, every thing that his Wife did was to be laught at, becaufe his Wife was to be laught at.

THIS is the familiarity which the Proverb fays breed Contempt, and it does fo; for Men prefently jeft away their Refpect for their Wives, and after that their Affection; though Ceremony between Man and Wife leffens Affection, or rather fhews it was wanting before, yet Affection does by no means leffen Civility, Ceremony may leffen Affection, but Difrefpect murthers it, ftrangles it. A Man can never pretend to love his Wife and have no Refpect for her at the fame time; that would be to love her, and not to love her altogether, which is incongruous in its Nature.

MIRTH between a Husband and Wife is the heighth of Affection, but that's no Mirth that is always running down, bantering and playing the Buffoon with his Wife; a chearful Affection is the Beauty of a conjugal State; but what Chearfulnefs is there in making a Banter and Jeft of one another, what Mirth when they make game, not with one another only, but at one another.

It is really an odd kind of Converfation between a Man and his Wife, when they come into publick Company, to have them turn their Drollery one upon another, and run out in Banters againft themfelves; the World will not fail to make a Jeft of thofe who firft make a Jeft of themfelves, and to take all the Jokes, Turns and Returns which they pafs upon one another, to be founded upon Fact, and that every Jeft fo rais'd is a true Jeft; in fhort, 'tis a molt most preposterous Piece of Folly, and deferves more Satyr than I have Room to bestow upon it here; I may speak of it again in its Place.

I knew a Couple of married Wits who frequently jefted thus with one another till they quarrelled, and indeed, it generally ended in a Quarrel; when it was come up to its highth, they went to their feparate Apartments, and perhaps did not fee one another for feveral Weeks, one living at one End of the Houfe, and the other at tother End; half a dozen times a Day, or more, they would fend Letters to one another, filled with bantering bitter Sarcafms and Satyrs, fometimes in Verfe, in Song and in Diffichs, other times in Profe, with scandalous Reproaches, filled with immodeft Expressions of the vileft Sort, and not fit to be repeated, unless I should break the Rules I have prescribed both to my felf and others.

IN this manner they would fometimes live for a Month or two together, never fparing to give the utmost Provocation, and to receive it with the extreamest Indignation, till they run one another out of Breath with their ill Ufage; and then, as Storms, when they have fpent their Strength, and their Fury is abated, it would gradually wear off, the Fire and Brimftone being exhausted, they would begin to cool again, and so come with as little Ceremony to an Accommodation, as they had with little Decency fallen out.

WHAT need is there of abundance of Difcretion as well as Affection between a Man and Wife, to preferve the Rules of Decency, and to keep up the Bounds of Modefty in their Family Family-Conversation? This is a Reafon why it is fo effential to Matrimony, that the Perfons should be Lovers as well as Relatives, that there should be an engaged affured Affection before there be a Political Union between them: Without this 'tis very difficult to render the married State a Scene of happy Circumstances, and a Condition truly calculated for humane Society; but of that also in its Order, for I must give you a whole Chapter upon that Head.

IUSTICE is another of the Particulars which Decency still requires between a Man and his Wife; he is far from acting decently with a Wife that will not on all Occasions do her Juftice: To be injurious to a Wife deftroys all Family-Peace between them; and whether this Injuffice be occasioned by and relating to Matters of Property, or Matters of Duty, 'tis all the fame; there is no Decency can be preferved where Juftice is not done; if the Wife be oppreffed, if her Right and Allowances expresivy capitulated for are unjustly detained from her, or if she be any way stript, either of her Ornaments, or of her Settlements, thefe are injurious things which deftroy Affection, and the deftroying of Affection ruins the Peace of the Family.

BUT I am a little gone beyond my Subject, which relates only to perfonal Virtue, and the Referves which Modefty ftill makes neceffary between a Man and his Wife; and there are fome Things even of that kind which ftill remain. It is true, fome of them are fuch as cannot bear the mentioning without Breach of the Modefty which I am fpeaking to protect, and breaking into those Bounds which I refolve folve not to offend againft: Other Things may be fo explained as to be underftood by thofe, efpecially to whom they belong, for the guilty will fee the Arrow flot at them which others cannot perceive.

THE Indecencies and Immodefties of the Tongue deferve a Place here, and I infift that, even between a Man and his Wife, there are due Bounds to be obferved in both thefe, effecially when they fpeak not only to, but of one another in the hearing of others.

THERE is a Modelty of the Tongue which never forfakes a Woman of Virtue, no not in her most intimate conversing with her own Husband, but much more at other times; all Breaches of this kind touch even her Virtue it felf, and are Branches of that which I call conjugal Lewdness, which is to be carefully avoided among Christians.

NOR is the Man exempted from this Modefty of the Tongue, not only with his Wife, but efpecially when of or to his Wife before Company: Nothing is more unworthy a modeft and Chriftian Man than to talk lewdly of, or to his Wife before Company; a Man ought never to force Blushes from his Wife on account of their own Privacies and Intimacies; this is to make those Things criminal which in themfelves are lawful. I know not any one Thing that fits worfe upon a Man's Tongue than to laugh at, jeer, and flout his Wife with what had pass'd between them in their retired Converfations, and this before other People; 'tis the most odious, hateful, and, to a modest Ear, naufeous, of all Difcourfe, and yet nothing is more frequent, and even among People of Figure too, which, I must confess, I have often wondered wondered at, confidering the Pretences we now make to polite Conversation.

[ 79 ]

BESIDES, 'tis a Breach of Decency as it refpects his Wife of the vileft and most fcandalous kind, and if she is a modest and virtuous Woman, as well as a good Wife, is fufficient to make her abhor his Society, and to refuse to appear in Company with him, even in his own House, nay, and if continued, will not fail in time to make her hate him, which is the worst Condition an honest Man can ever wish to be in with a Wife.

IT must be confessed 'tis a wife Man's Bufinels after Matrimony, by all means poffible to preferve the Affection of his Wife entire, to engrofs her to him, and to make and keep himfelf the fingle and entire Object of her best Thoughts. If she is once brought to hate him, to have an averfion to him, to loath and abhor him, fhe must have an uncommon Stock of Virtue, and be more a Chriftian than he ought to expect of her, if fhe does not fingle out some other Object of her Affection; and can a Man think his Wife, who is thus every Day difobliged, in the groffeft manner ill used, and, in spite of her Resentments, exposed to be laught at by him, will long preferve an inviolable Affection to him; but I may touch this again.

I return to the Subject. There are yet greater Offences againft Modefty than thefe; As I faid above, that giving unjuft Retorts, and making unkind and indecent Reproaches in cafe of cafual or accidental Weaknefs and Impotence, are fcandalous Breaches of Modefty between a Man and his Wife. So befides this, there are yet a numberlefs Variety of of Violences, as I may call them, committed, likes Rapes upon Nature, in which nothing is more frequent than for a Husband to prefs a Wife to fuch and fuch Things as Morality and Modefty forbids.

T 80 T

THIS is highly injurious to the conjugal Affection, and exposes the Person guilty to a just Censure, nay, even to the Censure mentioned of Matrimonial Whoredom. Whether these Excesses or Violences consist in Negatives, or in Affirmatives, they are in their kind equally criminal.

It muft be confeffed that Language is wanting here, and Words cannot fully express the meaning, fo as to preferve the Decency I profess; and I may be asked what I mean when I cannot explain it, not for want of knowing my own meaning, but for want of Words to express it; and therefore, as above, I choose to be filent, I'll come as near the Case as I can without giving offence, and what cannot be faid with Decency must be omitted; I had faid, that perfonal Weaknesses and Infirmities on either Side ought not to be retorted between a Man and his Wife, much less exposed, fo I now fay, they much less ought to be oppress'd on that Account.

N. B. I am fpeaking now, not of natural and original Impotencies, which, being before Marriage, ought to have been difcovered, and which our Law makes fufficient to diffolve the Contract, and feparate the Perfons.

THERE has been foul Work enough made with these Things in print by particular, lewd, and obscene Publications, which modest Ears are fick of, and the Nation mourns for the Offence of it; but my Discourse looks quite another Way.

BE-

BESIDES, our Office of Matrimony folemnly charges and adjures the Perfons who come to be joined together, that if they know any fuch Impediments they fhould declare them at that time; and, in a manner, protefts against the Validity of the Marriage in Cafe of a failure, and therefore and from that very Protest, fuch Marriages are afterwards frequently made void by Parliament.

BUT as the Subject of my Observation is more nice, so it is also more modest, and may with more decency be confidered of. The Infirmities on either Side which human Body is subject to are many; I distinguish them not here, only that I profess to mean such Infirmities as regard the Sexes only, Physicians, Acouchers or Surgeons, and Anatomists understand, and can defcribe them; 'tis none of my Business, much lefs my Design.

IT frequently does, or at least may happen, that when a young Couple come together their Conftitutions may, as too often their Tempers may and do, differ from one another, with refpect to these Things, to the greatest Extreme ; one is weak, faint, the Spirits low, Nature unable to answer what is expected; another perhaps is reduced by Child-bearing, too thick and and too long together, by Accidents in often hard and difficult Travels, Injuries received by unskilful Hands, or many other Incidents and Circumftances not to be named; by thefe, I fay, the Perfon is reduced, debillitated, and render'd unfit to give the Satisfaction which has formerly been found : On the other hand, the Man is reduced by a tedious, lingring decay, which Phyficians call a Confumption; or by other acute Diftempers, which he can, as is Gaid faid before, account for without Scandal; and to which Men are as frequently fubject, and as much difabled by them, as Women are in the Cafes mentioned juft now; fuch as Stone, Gout, Palfies, Epilepfies, Rheumaticks, Dropfies, and fuch like.

IF either or any of thefe Circumftances in Man or Woman happens, where they are joined refpectively to another that is ftrong, robuft, in perfect vigour, the Spirits high, the Blood hot, and perhaps boiling; Nature forward, and craving Defire unfatisfied; I need go no farther to explain it; What wretched Work does this caufe between the ill-match'd Couple? I can openly fay I know a beautiful young Lady after bringing her Husband feveral Children, yet actually deftroyed, I might have faid murthered, by thefe conjugal Violences, to fay no worfe of them; and I make no difference 'tis the fame on the other Side; many a Man finks under the Weight of his own Deficiencies; he is afhamed to decline the Duty of the Marriage-bed, difdains to be thought unable to fatisfy, Sc.

I can go no farther, and the Reader will excufe the Interruption. I refer you to a ftated and acknowledged Declaration in the Cafe, and which is direct to my purpofe; and tho' it is among the Turks, yet the reafon of the Practice is not the lefs or the more. The Turks think this very Cafe, whether of the Man's Side or the Woman's, to be fo weighty, as that it deferves the interposition of Authority; 'The Grand Visier in Perfon, where he can be applied to, and in more extraordinary Cafes hears the Caufes himfelf; in other Cafes the graver Kadeleschers, and Judges determine it, it, where both the Man and Wife are fully examined, and Judgment given as the Circumftances require. I am affured alfo, that Judgment is given in those Cases, not in a ludicrous manner with game and fporr, and a Court, or rather Croud, standing round, to laugh and make a jeft either of one Side or other; but with a folemn Gravity, fuitable at least to the Dignity of the Judge who passes the Sentence, and to the Reverence which both Sides pay to the Laws themselves.

NOR is the Method wholly Turkis, and to be objected against as a Piece of Mahometan Original; but 'tis founded upon the antient usage of all the Eastern Countries, in whose Customs it is to be found, though with some Variation, even as far back as the Phenician and Carthaginian Empires, and as the Egyptian and Persian Government and Monarchies. Hence the Phrase made use of in the Scripture by the Apostle Paul, called Due Benevolence, on one hand is commanded; while on the other hand Chambering and Wantonness, which is supposed to relate to the pretended lawful Intimacies between a Man and his Wife are forbidden.

IT may be expected I fhould explain my felf upon those Scripture Expressions, and there is fufficient room for it, and that with decency too; but I refolve not to come to the brink of the Offence, nor shall the Reader be able to fay, I go all the length I might go.

THE Scripture Expressions are expounded by the Reverend and Learned Annotators, and to them I refer; and as to the Courts of Justice under the Grand Seignior, deciding fuch Cafes as thefe, where Complaints are made by either Sex, I could give large Accounts of them, but G 2 they would break in upon me in the grand Difficulty, and offend the Reader; except a Sort who I am not at this time about to pleafe. Here therefore you muft allow me to omit a large and, in its kind, ufeful Part of the Defign it felf, namely, the Reproof of fcandalous Violences on both Sides even in the Marriage Intimacies, which cannot be fpoken of with Decency, and therefore muft go unreproved. One would hope it is a fufficient Reproof to thofe who underftand what I mean.

We are but too forward to fay, that no one ought to prohibit what GOD has not prohibited; that what is lawful may lawfully be done, where Nature dictates, fay they, and Heaven has not forbid, what can be pretended, that the Rule of Modefty is express'd by Mr. Dryden thus:

" By Nature prompted, by no Law deny'd,

THAT all things within that Compass are to be allowed, and to reftrain farther, is to bind heavy Burthens, which we will not bear our felves.

BUT my answer is short, where-ever an unreftrained Liberty feems to be given, yet we ought to remember that GOD gave his Laws to us as to reasonable Creatures, not as to Brutes; that we are to act in no Cafes out of the Bounds of Reafon and Juffice, no nor of Modefty and Decency; if the Circumstances of it feem to be left to our Difcretion, that Difcretion fhould be limited by our reafoning Powers; if the Man or Woman, for I fpeak of, and to both, will tell me, that in the Extafies of their Paffion, or Affection, or Appetite, or call it what you will, they are at liberty to lay lay afide the ufe of Reafon, and act unlike a Man, or a Chriftian, or even a Brute; that he is to be a Fury, outrageous, unfatisfied, and entirely out even of his own Government; That he or fhe is to lay afide all Confiderations for the fhe or be they are concerned withal; all compafilon for Circumftances, Infirmities, Weaknefs, &c. of whatfoever kind, or proceeding from whatfoever Caufe; that they are at liberty thus to be furious, and to act meerly in gratification of their own Pleafures, without any other or better Confideration, and to do whatever they think fit in the purfuit of their prefent guft of Appetite, even to the ruin and deftruction of the Husband or Wife; I fay, if this can be made appear to be juft, then I am anfwered.

BUT if not, then Reafon, and Modefty, and Virtue ought to be liftened to; and the cravings of Nature, if they are extravagant, fhould be governed by the Rules which Nature is fubjected to. The thing is a Difeafe and a Diftemper in it felf; and though it may be called Conftitution and Nature, 'tis a miftake; 'tis not Conffitution, but a Plague in the Conffitution; 'tis a kind of Fever or Calenture in the Blood; 'tis, in a word, to carry it no farther, a Frenzy in the Creature; whether in the Head or elfewhere, is not to the purpofe, but fuch it is; and they ought to apply to Art, I mean Phyfick, to abate the Acrimony of their Blood, reftrain the Exceffes of high feeding, hard drinking, and luxurious living; reducing themfelves at leaft fo, as to bring under the Flefh; bring Nature under the Government of Reafon, and, in fhort, bring the Body under the command of the Soul, for that is the whole Cafe.

[ 86 ]

I might give fome Examples of this Moderation as it has been happily practifed among Chriftians in our Age, and that even among Men of the higheft Rank, and above the Reftraint of Laws. Take one particular Relation which I had from an unquestionable Author, that is to fay, from a grave Minister who had been converfant in the very Houfhold, and the Truth of whole Relation I cannot doubt. " There " was a certain reigning Prince not long ago " alive in the World; I do not fay there are " many fuch left, who after having had five " Sons, and most of them Men of Fame as " well as high Birth, and ftill living, had this " particular Circumftance attending his Mar-"riage-bed; his Princefs was reduced to fuch "Weaknefs, by frequent Child-bearing, that " fhe was not able to receive the Embraces of " her Lord without the utmost Extremity of " Pain and Diforder; and it went fo far, that " fhe was at last obliged to difcover it to him, " but did it with fo much Modefty and Goodnefs, " that fhe offered him to confent to his taking any other Lady, which he might approve 26 66 of to fupply her Place.

"SHE infifted upon the reafonablenefs of it, and that the believed her confenting to it, and from fuch evident neceffity, might make it lawful; nay, the prefs'd the Prince to it very earneftly, offering her felf to find out an agreeable Perfon for him, and to bring her to him.

"THE generous Prince received her first Dede claration, intimating her own Weakness and Infir[ 87 ]

" Infirmity, with a concern of Pity and Af-" fection as became a tender Husband, which " he always had been to her, and affured her " he would not oppress her, or offer any thing " to injure or diforder her. He fmiled at her " Propofal, but told her, No; fince Providence " had thought fit to deny him the fatisfaction " he used to have in the Embraces of his own " Wife, he hoped he was fo much of a Chri-" ftian as not to break GoD's Laws to gratify " natural Defires; and that he had fo much " the Government of himfelf alfo as not to " let his Appetite get the Maftery of his Rea-" fon ; and with this noble Refolution declined " the Offer his Wife made him of another " Lady, and kept himfelf fingle, as it may be " called, to the laft.

I give this, among many Examples, wherein conjugal Modefty has been preferved, and the Example is moving. The Prince I mention was in the highth of his Strength, the prime of his Age, between the Age of thirty and forty; ftrong, vigorous, full of Fire in the Field, and, in proportion, elfewhere; the Thing was an Accident, and to Nature was doubtlefs a Difappointment; but the Chriftian prevailed above the Youth; Reafon conquered Nature, and that Reafon had the Government of all his Inclinations.

CERTAINLY we are to act according to our Reafon and our Underftanding in all Cafes, where the Laws either of GOD or Man leave us at liberty; nay, those Laws feeming to leave us at full liberty, give the ftronger Force to the Government of our Reason; They feem not to fay you are in this left to what your own Will directs, but the Language of the  $G_4$  Law Law of Nature it felf, and of the fubfequent Laws of GOD in the fame Cafe is. Here you are left to act as Reafon and Religion fhall direct, and as the Circumftances that may happen fhall make reafonable.

THE Excelles and Extremes of our Paflions are in almost all Cafes the fcandal of the rational Life, the principal Caufe of which is, becaufe Reafon is given to Man as a guard to him against all the Exorbitances of Nature. Reafon is the Rule of Life to a Man, as Religion is to Christians; he that is not guided by the last is an Infidel, as he that is not governed by the first is a Brute. 'Tis a shame to a Man that wears about him a Soul, to fay, that he is not guided by his Reafon; as 'tis a shame to a Christian to fay, he is not guided by the Principles and Dictates of Religion.

As Reafon therefore is our guide in Matters fubjected to its Laws, foin this more particularly, namely, in governing and directing our Affections, our Appetites, our Paffions, and our Defires: Take it in more indifferent and ordinary Cafes, we are allowed to Eat and Drink, GOD gave the Bleffings and Encreafe of the Field to Man; He is, under his Maker, the Lord of the World, and he is left at full liberty not only to fupply his Necessity, his Hunger and Thirst, but he is at liberty to folace himfelf with his Food, and eat or drink what is most agreeable to his Palate : But as Reafon is the guide of his Appetite, fo far as to direct him how much to eat or drink upon all Occasions, fo he that gorges himfelf beyond what is reafonable, expofes himfelf to the just Cenfure of a brutal Appetite; thus, in all other Cafes, a Man out of

[ 89 ]

of the government of his Reafon is, in a word, a Monster rather than a Man.

METHINKS the modeft Reader may take this as it is intended, viz. to extend to the Exercife of a brutal ungoverned Appetite, in any other Cafe, to which this of eating and drinking is apposite, and may apply it fuitably, though Decency forbids me to do it.

WE fhould all blufh to be told, in other Cafes, that we had no Government of our felves; that we were infatiably Covetous, or unboundedly Ambitious, or Vain, and much more fhould we have reafon to blufh, as being infatiable in any other Appetite.

DECENCY also puts another Difficulty upon me here, viz. it obliges me to speak of this Article, as if the Man was the only guilty Perfon, and that the Modesty of the Woman was a sufficient reftraint to her upon all Occasions: Nor will I make so much as an attempt in Prejudice of that Charity; if it happen otherwise on any Occasion 'tis so much the worse, because, I think, of the two, the Extream on that Side is the most fatal, as well as shameful.

THERE is a Part of this Circumstance, which, as it is neceffary to be mentioned, fo it may be mentioned without Offence, tho' it regards even the niceft Branch of the Argument; and that is, How fatal this Exorbitance is, when it meets, not as it were in a kind of Conjunction, as where neither the Man or the Woman have the Government of themfelves; but where the Extream is on one Side only, with a coldness and indifferency equally extream on the other; I fay, this may be mentioned without offence, because it must not be deny'd but there is an Error Error both ways, of which Reafon as well as Duty and Affection, are to be the Directors and Guides : It is, no doubt, a Duty on both Sides to yield, to pleafe, and oblige one another, where no just Objections are to be made; and those Husbands or Wives who decline one another criminally, ought to confider the matrimonial Vow and Duty in all its Particulars; but efpecially upon the ill Confequences which fuch a Coldness may produce; which, though not juftifiable at all in the Perfon that may fo fly out, yet 'tis what we ought to avoid, as we are not to lead one another into Temptations; and this is one of the Things which, as I faid, those Courts of particular Juftice take cognifance of among the Turks. But of this more at large in its Order. I am now chiefly talking of the Extreams of the first kind, and of an unreftrained Brutality.

90

I bury all the hateful Particulars which thefe Reproofs are pointed at, in the refpect I preferve for decency of Expression; and conclude with faying, that those Branches of conjugal Diforder are the fcandal of the Marriage Bed ; every Chriftian, as well as every prudent and wife Man, will be afhamed, to think he should want a hint to restrain himself. As to the brutal World; Men and Women who give a loofe to their Defires, of whatever kind, and hate all Mortifications; who defpife Reftraint and Rules; that fcorn to think they want Advice, and are above Reproof; I have one Hint more for fuch, and that is this, let them go on and act with a full Guft; let them ftrain Nature to the utmost; and let them see whether if the Laws of God or Man do not reftrain them or punish them, Nature her felf will not complain, openly expose expose them, and make them confess the Crime when it is to be read in their Punishment.

WHENCE come Palfies and Epilepfies, Falling-Sicknefs, trembling of the Joints, pale dejected Afpects, Leannefs, and at laft Rottennefs, and other filthy and loathfome Diftempers, but from the criminal Exceffes of their younger times? 'Tis not enough to fay that it was lawful, and they made ufe of none but their own Wives; the natural Courfe of things go on their own way; Nature's Streams flow all in the fame Channels; if the Fountain is drawn dry, if the Vitals are exhaufted, the Engines of Nature worked with unreafonable Violence, the Parts feel the fame unreafonable Force, and the Confequences will be the fame, whether the Facts were juftifiable, and lawful in themfelves or not.

THUS, as above, 'tis lawful to eat and drink; and the Kinds and Quantities of Food which we are to eat are perfectly left to our own Dif-cretion; nay, we are left, as I have faid, even to regale and divert our felves both with Eating and Drinking. But the Epicure, who gives himfelf all manner of Liberties, that gives a loofe to the guft of his Appetite, that gorges his Stomach with rich Sauces and furfeiting Dainties, that rather devours than feeds upon what is before him, and knows no Bounds to his eating but the meer mathematical Dimenfions of his Bowels: What comes of him? He fwells up with Fat, is over-run with Rheums, Catarrhs, and all fcorbutick Diftempers, and at last finks under the Weight of his own Bulk, is choaked with the very Food he eats, and dies in the middle of his dainty Meats: and the Drunkard, gorged with Wine, does the fame.

THUS

THUS they deftroy themfelves in the use of lawful Things, or, if you please, in the abuse of them; and while they please themselves with having been doing nothing but what it was lawful to do, they perish in the Excesses of it, and murther themselves by the unlawful doing of lawful Actions.

IN the fame manner, those Men who pretend there are no limitations of Modesty between a Man and his Wife, that their Reason is not needful to be called in to the Government of their Appetite, but that they are at liberty to act in all Things as meer ungoverned Nature, however vitiated, shall direct. What Effects do they ordinarily find of it, and where does it end? How do we find them loaded with Difeases, contract early Infirmities? How does exhausted Nature feel the fecret Defects, and how hard do they find it to recover the Vigour and Strength which they have push'd to the utmost, in a thoughtless Excess?

NAY, How often does the boiling Blood ferment into Fevers, Ulcers, and the most incurable Difeafes? How do the vital Parts feel the Wound, till the Dart ftrike through the Liver, as Solomon most excellently describes it; and the difinal Confequences feldom End but in the Grave? Nor is that all, but the tottering Head, the Rheums, Catarrhs, the Fluxes, Inflammations, and all the fatal Confequences of an ungoverned vitiated Youth, how often and generally do they appear fo openly, that't is eafy, efpecially to Men of Judgment, to read the Caufe in the Confequences, the Sin in the Punifhments? nay, fome will tell you, that even the foul Difeafe it felf, has been the Effect of immoderate Heats and Surfeitings of the Blood, without what what we call Contamination or Infection from others, and where none other has been concerned but the Man and his Wife fingly and alone.

93

IF I were at liberty to explain myfelf upon this naufeous Subject, I could, from clear and rational Confequences, convince the ungoverned Criminal, how he lays the Foundation of the ruin of his Conftitution, how he poifons his Blood, and fpreads the corrupt Seeds of Difeafe into the very Veins of his Posterity; but the Occasion is too foul for my Pen: Let it fuffice to admonish Christians, and Men of Senfe, that they fhould remember they are fo; that they have reafoning Powers to affift them in fubduing their inordinate Heats; that they fhould fummon Virtue and Modefty, Reafon and Christianity to their aid, and act in all Things agreeable to reafonable Beings, not like enraged Lunaticks, though they are not under the reftraint of Laws.

THEY are greatly miftaken likewife who expect I fhould give Rules here, and prefcribe to them what I mean by Moderty and Moderation in fuch Things as thefe; in fhort, fuch would pleafe themfelves if they could bring me to enter into Particulars of any kind, on one Side or other, for they love to dwell upon the Story. But Verb. Sap. Sat. 'Tis enough; I have pointed out the Crime as far as Decency will permit, the Bounds are eafily prefcribed, fo as a common Underftanding may reach them ; Reafon will tell you where the Limits are to be placed between lawful and unlawful; as follows, namely,

No Violences upon Nature on one Side or another; no pufhing the Conftitution to Extremities, no earnef Importunities, no immodeft PromptPromptings; let all that Nature dictates be free, fpontaneous, voluntary and temperate, fo Vigour is preferved, Affection encreafed, and Abilities too, for it was a fignificant Exprefion of the Duke of Buckingham's, in a Poem of his call'd The Enjoyment,

" Love makes Men able as their Hearts are kind.

'Tis certain, all Intemperance, all outrageous Exceffes, debilitate and exhauft the Spirits; weaken Nature, and render the Perfon unfit for many of the Offices of Life, befides the fame Article; whereas a moderate ufe of Nature's Liberties have quite contrary Effects.

CHAP.

[ 95 ]

CHAP. IV.

Of the abfolute Neceffity of a mutual Affection before MATRIMONY, in order to the Happiness of a married State, and of the Scandal of marrying without it.

A R RIAGE is a ftate of Union, and the ftricteft of its Kind that can not only be found, but that can be conceived of among Men. Adam emphatically expresses it, when God brought the Woman to him; This is now Bone of my Bone, and Flesh of my Flesh, Gen. xi. 23. and again, verse 24. and they shall be one Flesh.

So folemn the Inftitution, fo fimple the Conftruction, fo faft the Bond, fo loofe the Perfons bound! It would be much too ferious for the reading of thefe Times to enter into a Differtation upon the folemn Engagement, and upon the Weight and Significance of the Obligation on both Sides, how firm the Bond, how indiffolvible the mutual Ties, and how important to the Felicity of Life it is that they fhould be religioufly obferved.

I know too well who I am talking to, and at what Time of Day; how the Subordination tion of one Sex is laughed at and bantered, and the Dominion of the other abufed and turned into Tyranny and Opprefilion; how the Women, inftead of Submillion, reign; and the Men, inftead of a Government in Love, and a fuperiority of Affection, in which that Government fhould chiefly confift, infult and opprefs their Wives; how the Obligation of forfaking all other, is ridiculed and made a Jeft of, and that of keeping your felf only unto her, declared to be a meer Church Impofition, a Piece of Prieftcraft, and unreafonable.

Do you think, fays blufhing  $G_{----}$ , to his poor fubjected but modeft Wife, Do you think that ever I intended to meddle with no more than one Woman? No, no, I never promis'd any fuch Thing, if I did I never intended to keep to it, then he turns and fings a fcandalous Song out of Rochefter, too grofs to repeat:

But to live with her all a Man's Life, Till fhe grows _____ Good faith, Mr. Parfon, I thank you for that; I thank ye for that:

AND whence comes this Contempt? I fay, it does not proceed fo much from the Wickednefs, as from the Ignorance of the Age; Ignorance of the real Felicity of their very Kind; how all that can be called happy in the Life of Man, is fumm'd up in the ftate of Marriage; that it is the Center to which all the leffer Delights of Life tend, as a Point in the Circle; that, in fhort, all the extraordinary Enjoyments of Life are temporary and trifling, and confift chiefly in the ftrange and uncouth Pleafure fure which, fome Men fay, they find in doing what they ought not to do; which, at beft, lafts but till they are wife, and learn to know what it is to repent. But the Pleafure of a married State confifts wholly in the Beauty of the Union; the fharing Comforts, the doubling all Enjoyments; 'tis the Settlement of Life; the Ship is always in a Storm till it finds this fafe Road, and here it comes to an Anchor: 'Tis the want of a tafte of Life makes Men defpife that Part of it which Heaven at first conftituted to compleat the Happinels of his Creatures.

To argue againft Marriage, becaufe fo many Matches are unhappy, and fo few exemplify the Cafeasitought to be, is only arguing the Ignorance and Corruption of Mankind, which as it is the Caufe, fo it is fully difcovered by this unhappy Confequence. Did Men expect Happinefs in a married Condition, they would Begin and End it after another manner, prepare for it beforehand with more nicety, and take much greater Thought about it before they engaged in it.

POLITICE Matches are Weddings for Princes, and for Perfons of high Birth, where the meer Interefts of the Families are the Confideration of the Alliance, and where it is not effential to the Match, whether the Perfons love one another or no, at leaft not fo effential as in Perfons of a meaner degree.

But as the Perfons of a lower Station are, generally speaking, much more happy in their Marriages, than Princes and Perfons of Distinction, so I take much of it, if not all of it, to confiss in the Advantage they have to choose and refuse.

H

MARRIAGES of Princes and Perfons of Rank, are rather Leagues and Treaties of Alliance and Confederacy than Weddings, and they are transacted accordingly; the Lady is courted at a Diftance, viewed in Effigy by her Picture fet with Diamonds, contracted by Envoys Extraordinary, married by Proxy, and then travels a thousand Miles perhaps, or fomething lefs, to find out her Husband.

THUS indeed Abraham fent the Steward of his Houfhold to fetch his Son Ifaac a Wife, about three or four hundred Miles off, and the came with the Meffenger: But the Cafe was plain there; Rebecca faw the vifible Finger of GOD in it, and the Words of Laban her Brother, though himfelf an Idolater, confeffed it, Gen. XXIV. 50. then Laban and Bethuel anfwered, and faid, the thing proceedeth from the LORD, we cannot fpeak unto thee bad or good; and upon this Foundation the Lady ventured to go with the Meffenger.

BUT yet even Rebeccab herfelf, when fhe acted the like Part for her Son, and defired to take a Wife for facob from the fame Country; fhe fent no Servant of the Errand, but made him go in Perfon, and choofe for himfelf, and he did fo, and pitched upon his well-favoured beautiful Rachel, had not Laban cheated him, and laid a blear-eyed Leab in her Place.

As Marriage is a flate of Life in which fo much of humane Felicity is really placed, and in which Men may be fo compleatly happy or miferable, it feems to me the moft rational thing in the World, that the Parties themfelves, and them alone, fhould give the laft Strokes to its Conclusion, that they only fhould be left to determine it, and that withall possible Freedom, that that they might be able to fay to one another, and that with the utmost Sincerity, at reciting the Office of Matrimony, not I take thee, but Ichoose thee; thou art my Choice; that the Man may be able to fay, not only she is the Wife of my Youth, but she is the Wife of my Affection; and the Woman the same.

How little is this which is the effential Part underftood in the World, how little of Love is there to be found in Matrimony, as 'tis now managed; and what is the Confequence but unfaithful performing the Marriage Covenants; difloyalty, breach of Faith and Honour, and the worft Sort of Perjury on both Sides? for as the Marriage Covenant is a folemn Oath, and perhaps the moft folemn of all Engagements upon Earth, fo breaking it is the worft of Perjury, and ought indeed to be punifhed as fuch.

WHERE there is no Pre-engagement of the Affection before Marriage, what can be expected after it? And what do we find comes after it, but at beft continued Jars, Quarrellings, Scolding, and perhaps Fighting? never to be abated, never to be altered, no not by length of Time, not forty Years wedlock has been fufficient to tire out the jangling, ill; matched Tempers; but the Evil takes Root with Time, till the Hatred grows riveted, and becomes natural, they even die with the perpetual Difguft upon them, and carry their Feuds, as it were, along with them to the Grave, as if they refolved to renew the Strife in the next World.

It was a miferable Example of this which a near Relation of mine was an Eye-witnefs to in the Town of Sherborn in Dorfetschire, or very H 2 hear near it: A Man and his Wife had lived a wretched, continued Life of Contention for almost fifiy Years; at length the Woman fell fick and died; while fhe lay on her Death-hed her Husband came up into the Chamber to fee her, as a good Husband ought; the Woman fretful, though fick, found fault with him upon fome Occation of no great moment, and grew angry. Pray, my Dear, fays the Man, don't quarrel to your last Moment. The Woman flew into a Paffion that he fhould fuggeft it was her last Moment, which, she faid, he did not know. This put the Man into a Paffion too, and he faid, rafhly enough, that if it was not her last Moment he wished it was, or it would be happy for him if it was, or to that purpofe. What! lays fhe, do you Infult me with that, depend upon it you shall be at no Quiet on that Account, for if ever the Dead can come to the Ouick, I'll be with thee again.

WHETHER fhe kept her Word with him or no, I know not; but 'tis certain she died in two or three Days after, nor did the Man venture to go up to vifit her any more. This was indeed carrying on what we may call an eternal Feud; it was a mortal Breach indeed, for nothing ever cur'd it, and yet the Couple were not fo exafperated against one another, but that they lived together, were People of good Subftance, and some Sense, and even too much Wit; but married, it feems, without the grand conftituting Article called mutual Affection, which is indeed, in my Opinion, the effential Part of the Contract; the Woman profes'd fhe never loved him, and yet fhe married him; the Man declared he never asked her to love him; or cared one Farthing whether fhe did or no; fo fo he had but her Money, which was, it feens, what he took her for. Now, was this Matrimony? No, no, it might be Marriage, but I deny that it was Matrimony; here was nothing of GOD's holy Orainance, or taking one another according to that Ordinance; it was all a contradiction of the main Defign; in fhort, it was a fomething that wants a Name; and what can be faid to contradict me if I should call it a Matrimonial Whoredom ?

WELL might this Couple answer or fay after the Parfon, I N. TAKE thee N. But they could never have been married if the Office had run, I N. choofe thee N. out of my fincere Affection to thee, and for that Reason take thee, Sc. What would have become of us all if this had been the folemn Part or Oath of the Marriage Ccvenant, and that it had been taken upon Pain of Perjury? How few are there that would dare to be married upon that Foot?

SOME are of the Opinion, prudential Matches, as they call them, are beft. They tell us, 'tis the Parents bufinefs to choofe Wives for their Sons, and Husbands for their Daughters; that let them be tied together first, they will toy together till they love afterwards; that Property begets Affection, and that if all other Things hit, they may run the rifque of the Love with less inconvenience.

BUT I muft enter my Proteft here : I think they that make a Toy of the Affection, will make a Toy of the Matrimony; they feem to know little of the Mifery of those Matches who think they are to be toyed into Love after Confummation: how often are they cloyed with one another's Company before the Affection comes in? How little Force has the fport of Mar- $H_3$ riage, riage, (fo a wife Favourer of those prudential Matches was pleafed to call it) in it to contract Affection? I have feen enough of it, to make me venture faying, there is not One in Ten of those Kinds of Marriages that fucceeds.

NOR is the Surface-Love, which takes fo much in the World at this time, any part of the pure, the folid, the rivetted Affection, which, I infift, is fo effential to the Felicity of a married Life. Where is the Union of the whole Defire, or even of the Soul of Defire, that which Mr. Milton fo very nobly expatiates upon from Adam's Words, They shall be one Flesh, Gen. xi. 24.

"And they shall be one Flesh, one Heart, one Soul.

Is this to be obtained after Marriage, and that Marriage made perhaps by the choice and at the imperious arbitrary Command of Superiors? If not, as indeed I think it not rational to imagine, is it fo flight a Matter, and of fo little Confequence, as that Matrimony fhould be ventured on without a due Provision for such a Union? Certainly, if any Action of Life is of Confequence, 'tis that which determines the Man for Happiness or Misery : And fuch is this of Matrimony; for I think I may affirm, Marriage without Love, is the compleateft Misery in Life. Besides, I must fay, it is to me utterly unlawful, and entails a Curfe upon the Perfons, as being wilfully perjured, invoking the Name of Gon to a Falthood, which is one of the most provoking Crimes that Mankind can commit. He or fhe who, with that flight and fuperficial Affection, ventures into the matrimonial Vow, are to me little more than legal Profti[ 103 ]

Profitutes: Political Views may make a Marriage, but, in the Senfe of GOD and Nature, 'tis my Opinion they make no Matrimony.

NOR does all this outfide, skin-deep Affection, which fuch Matches at first appear with, protect them against the Deficiencies of their own Tempers, and the Eruptions of their Paffion; it fortifies none against Family-Breaches, supplies no Forces against the Attacks of the Passions, and the Unkindness which innumerable Circumstances introduce in the subfequent Conduct of both Parties.

THESE Matches indeed generally produce a great flow of Affection, and the Fondnefs of the Honey-Moon hangs about them a great while, on fome more, fome lefs. This I call the Pageantry of Matrimony, and the Cavalcade of Love. But the Strife breaks out infenfibly; the Contention, the Contradiction, and all the little Thwartings and Wafpifhneffes, which lay the Foundation of eternal Difcord; thefe all, like Weeds, grow and fpread under the decaying Plant called Love, till at laft they check and fmother it entirely, and leave the Family a kind of Hell in Miniature.

A late Poet expresses himself upon this Subject with great Elegancy and Affluence of Wit; whether he spake feelingly or not, I cannot fay:

Thus a feeming happy Pair, Who Hymen's early Fetters wear; In Publick fond as Turtles are.

The unwed with Envy their Careffes view,

But, Oh! what would the amaz'd Beholders do? If as they fee their open Loves, their private Feuds they knew.

H 4

AND

[ 104 ]

AND whence proceeds all this, and ten thousand times more than Heart can conceive, or Pen fet down, but from the want of a fincere rivetted Affection between them before Matrimony? The Man that marries without it must be a Knave; the Woman that marries without it must be a Fool; and let me not give hard Words neither, without a fufficient Authority for it, but I'll make it out immediately.

I fay, that Man must be a Knave: No honest Man will promise and engage, nay, fwear to do a Thing, which he is fully refolved not to do; or which he is not fure he is able to perform, and does not funcerely intend to perform.

IN the Terms of the Marriage Vow, the Minister asks the Man these concise Questions:

Wilt thou have this Woman to be thy wedded Wife? He anfwers, I Will.

Wilt thou love her? I Will.

Wilt thou live with her? I Will,

THE Interrogation Wilt thou, is underftood as much as if the Minister repeated it every time; and though he answers with but one I Will, 'tis as effectually underftood to mean a particular Answer to every Interrogation, as if it was gepeated to them all, and the meaning is the fame; the Man can by no means come off of it; no, nor the Woman either, for her Engagement is equally firm and binding.

THIS I Will is not only a Promife obligatory, a folemn Engagement and Vow, but 'tis done under the Sanction of Religion, and of an Ordinance of GOD; it is a facred Oath, 'tis what the Scripture calls the Oath of GOD, and the married Man may justly fay, the Oath of GOD is upon him; in fhort, every time he fays, I Will, 'tis the fame thing, pardon the Expreffion, as to fay, BY GOD I WILL. He that takes this folemn Oath, without being fure he can fincerely love the Woman, and fo perform the Oath, muft be a Knave, he cannot be an honeft Man; And how can he be certain, if he did not really and fincerely love her before? I think the Cafe is plain, and anfwers for it felf.

AGAIN, take the Woman's Obligation; her Anfwers are the fame to Queftions not much differing; and when the Queftions are fumm'd up, (I need not repeat them here) fhe anfwers, and fays, or, if you will, fhe anfwers and fwears, as above,

I Will.

You will! What will you do, Madam? Will you live with a Man, and lie with a Man you don't love ? As I faid before, that fuch a Lady must be a Fool, I fay now 'tis worse ; 'tis but a kind of legal Proftitution, in the plain English of it, too grofs and wicked to express. We must not fay the is a Whore, becaufe the Law makes it a literal Contract and Marriage. ButGop forbid I fhould ever fay 'twill pafs for Matrimony in Heaven; the young Lady, in fhort, is willing, or has a mind, or defires, (call it what you pleafe) to lie with a Man; and fhe takes a Fellow that is just in the fame Condition, under the Influence of fome lewd Appetite, and he defires to lie with a Woman. They are both willing to gratify their vitious Part in the formality of a legal Appointment, and fo they agree to marry in form, and they are called Man and Wife; as fuch the throws off the Mask of Modefty, goes into the naked Bed to him, or Inffers e :

[ 106 ]

fuffers him to come to Bed to her; and as they came together upon the meer Principles of Defire, as above, fo they act the feveral Exceffes, and all the conjugal Madneffes, Chamberings and Wantonneffes, mentioned or pointed at above, and all this while not one Ounce of Affection, not a Grain of original, chaft, and rivetted Love, the Glory of a Chriftian Matrimony, and the effential Happinefs of Life, is to be found between them.

Is this Matrimony! Is this a Marriage made in Heaven! Is this being joined together according to God's holy Ordinance! Forbid it, O Heaven! that I should call it by that honourable and religious Title: On the contrary, it merits, if I may be allowed to give my Judgment, nothing lefs or more than the Title of a Matrimonial Whoredom, or, at least, of a Matrimonial Profitution.

IT would make a Story too long for the prefent Work, and a little too grofs for my refolved Way of writing; if I should enter into a Defcription of the conjugal Conversation of two Perfons, coming together upon this Foot; that is to fay, of meer Nature, and the promptings of the Sexes, without any previous and perfonal Affection; I fay, to defcribe the manner of their Conversation after the first Principles of their Conjunction are evaporated or exhaled, after the Fire is out, and the combustible Matter that kindled it is confumed when the Vapour is exhaled, the airy Part fpent and evaporated, and the humid Part fully condenfed, how coldly they meet? How they look at one another, as a furfeited, cloyed Stomach relifhes a full-fpread Table? How they nauseate one another as a fick Body that is gorged gorged with Phyfick, or a confumptive Perfon fick of his Cordials.

How their very Mirth is dull and infipid, and they are fo far from diverting one another, that their Happiness confists very unhappily in being as much absent from one another as they can. Unwarily talking once to a Gentlewoman of my particular Acquaintance, whofe Circumftances in Matrimony, tho' very good, have yet a Defect of this kind at the Bottom. Madam, faid I, you are very happy in fo kind a Husband, fo tender, fo obliging; pray let us have his Company; the Gentleman was but in the next Room; and I was for calling him in. Let him alone, fays the very coldly, let him alone, you han't fo much of his Company as I have; I had rather be without him; he would have made any Woman in Ergland a good Hufband but me.

WHY Madam, faid I, does not he make you a good Husband? We are all of Opinion he is an extraordinary good Husband. I don't know, fays fhe, it may be I an't fo good a Wife as I thould be. O Madam, faid I, don't fay fo; I believe you are a very good Wife. Indeed, fays fhe, I an't fo good a Wife as I fhould be; we married young, and the main Ingredient was wanting: We did as we were bid, but we were never troubled much with the Thing called LOVE; and I find, by fad Experience, Wedlock is a miferable Thing without it.

WHY, Madam, fays I, your Circumftances are good, and you live very eafy on both Sides.

THAT'S true, faid fhe; but I tell you, the main Ingredient is wanting. I never lov'd him; and I always thought he never could love me; for indeed, I never did go about to oblige oblige him, becaufe I had never any real Value for him.

[ 108 ]

Тнат's a very unhappy Cafe indeed, Madam, faid I.

So unhappy, fays fhe, that I would never advife any Body to marry without they know on both Sides, how things ftand as to Love; for 'tis all nothing but a Banter to talk of Happinefs without it; they that don't love before they marry, will never be happy when they are married.

BUT, Madam, you have been long married, faid I; methinks kind and good Ufage on both Sides fhould have made Love by this time.

I don't know how it may do in other Folks, fays fbe, but 'tis not fo with me; Mr. W is as kind and tender of me as I can defire, and yet I don't know what ails me, I never did, and I never can love him; it won't do; I would advife no Body to marry before they Love; let them depend upon it, if they don't Love before-hand they will never love afterward; it is not to be done; I have found it by fad Experience.

WHY, Madam, fays I, the World thinks you are a mighty happy Couple.

WHY then we have cheated the World, fays be, as we did one another; for, I can affure you, as I fpeak to you in Confidence, we are a very unhappy Couple.

WHY, Madam, you don't Quarrel, Jays I.

No, fays fhe, never; good Manners, and good Breeding keep us from that : But what are all those Negatives to make a Couple happy? There's no Happines without Love, and that on both Sides. Oh! fays fhe with a Sigh, and to concluded the Discourse, let no Body marry and come together without Love; 'tis nothing but but what is not fit to name without it; 'tis all fcandalous and fhameful; and fo we called up other Difcourfe; for I had enough of it, and the Lady fell into Tears, and yet fhe confefs'd all the Fault was her own too.

AND what generally fpeaking is the End of fuch prepofterous Conjunctions as this was, but a Birth of Monfters? Pardon me, I don't mean that the Children born between them shall be Monsters in shape, imperfect, unfinish'd, wanting their Limbs, or with more Limbs than Nature directs, as in many monftrous Births is the Cafe; though I could fay fome pertinent Things upon that Subject too, if the Age could bear it : But my meaning is, thefe Conjunctions generally break out in monstrous Confequences; Family Confu-fions, violent Contentions, unfufferable Paffions, raging at one another in vile Language, Quarrels, Feuds, Fightings, or at least Infultings of one another; in all which they act Furious, as in their original Gufts of another kind, reproaching themfelves with that very criminal Part which brought them together, upbraiding one another with the very Things which threw them precipitantly into one another's Arms, from whence proceeded the Ruin they bear. Thefe, and a thoufand mon-ftrous Paffions, ungoverned like the Fire of their early, blind and hafty Defires, are the Effects of that prepofterous Matrimony that is contracted upon fuch Foundations as thefe.

How is it possible any thing but this, or fuch as this, can be the Issue, fince when the first Defires are gratified, Dissider and Averfions, hateful Regret and Repentings, as naturally succeed such corrupt and half-born Love 20 Love; as Hatred fucceeded the fame kind of Affection in Ammon, when he had ravished his Sister, and which made him, as it were, kick her down Stairs.

A true Affection can never be the Product of a vitious Inclination, any more than an evil Tree can bring forth good Fruit, 'tis contrary to the Nature of the Work ; a chaft, affectionate Embrace is quite another Thing; the one is from Heaven formed in the Soul for the good of Mankind, by the glorious Hand of a beneficent Power, and directed for the Propagation of a chaft and virtuous Breed, fitted with inbred original Modefty and Principles of Virtue, as it were, convey'd by Blood to the Honour of the very Ordinance of Matrimony it felf, and of the primitive Inftitution of it in Paradife: Shall we conftitute a vitious or vitiated Defire in the room of Love, and a corrupt Combination of two enflamed Pieces of Pollution under the fhelter of legal Forms, and call this Matrimony? It can produce nothing but Mifchief and Confusion, the Nature of the Thing dictates no other.

To fay Love is not effential to the Form of a Marriage, is true; but to fay it is not effential to the Felicity of a married State, and confequently to that which I call Matrimony, is not true; and you may as truly fay, that Peace is not effential to the good of a Family; as that the Harmony and Conjunction of Souls are not effential to the Happiness of the Persons joyn'd together.

IF the Man or Woman that is to marry do not value whether they are Happy or no, or whether they live with the Perfon they are to marry in a ftate of War or Peace, always Jarring, ring, Fighting and Contending, or always Agreeing, Uniting and Joyning in their Defires and Defigns : If it is indifferent whether they are as Doves always brooding under one another's Wings, or Serpents hilling at and ftinging one another, fuch may marry Blindfold, and expect the Confequences; fuch a Woman may take a Man as the Sow takes the Boar in her Seafon, meerly to raife a Litter, meerly to gratify her brutal Part; and when that is gratify'd, and he or fhe perhaps furfeited with the Perfon, may run away to an adulterous Bargain with another, for the meer guft of Variety, as is often the Cafe; In fhort, what is Marrying, and what is the meeting of the Sexes, where Love and an original Affection is not concerned? 'tis too wicked to mention, too vile to name ; to defcribe it would run me into the worft Sort of Levity; and I must talk as vitioufly as they act that do fo.

CONCEIVE of it then in the groffeft Terms you can, in Terms fuited to the beaftly Part, in Terms fitted to give your Thoughts the greateft Difguft, and to fill you with Deteftation; for, in a word, there is nothing of Decency or Modefty, nothing Chaft or Virtuous, can be faid about it. It is true, every Body that does marry in this manner does not confult the Reafon of the thing, and do not perhaps confider what they are doing.

THEY do not look into the Scandal of it, or weigh the Confequences; they defire a Man; that is indeed the Fact; 'tis in the Nature of the Thing, and cannot be denied: But the Lady does not confider what Confequences attend its being defired in fuch a manner; fhe takes the Thing as it appears; the Man offers to her upon honourable Terms, as they are corruptly called, that is, he will marry her; fhe neither enquires of her felf whether he is the Man of her Choice, whether fhe loves him, and upon what Reafon and Foundation the Love fubfifts, whether upon his Perfon as a Man, or his Merit as a Man of Virtue and Senfe. But fhe ignorantly paffes over thefe Things, and does not fee that fhe lies open to all the Cenfure, which, I fay, is juftly due to fuch a kind of Matrimony.

1127

THIS is faying as much in her Favour as the Cafe will admit, as much as indeed it is possible to fay for her: But let her ftrip the Cafe naked of all the falfe Gloffes which 'tis perhaps covered with, and then look upon it; or let her look into it after a Year or two, worn out in the odd, uncouth, retrograde Wedlock that fhe is engaged in, and then fhe will fee with other Eyes; then fhe'll fee fhe wedded a worthlefs, fenfelefs, vain and empty fhadow of a Man, in gratification of the Humour which fhe was at that time in for a Bedfellow; that fhe has the Man, and no more, and that now all the reft is wanting; that fhe has the Man but not the Husband, not the Companion, not the obliging, affectionate Relative that the ought to have looked for, and to have fixed her Choice upon; and what bitter Reproaches does the load her felf with when the fees her felf in the Arms of a Fool inftead of a Man of Senfe; of a Brute and a Boar inftead of a Man of Breeding and Behavour; of a Churl and a Fury inftead of a Man of Humour and Temper; and all this occafioned by her following blindly and rafhly that young wanton Inclination, which the knew not how to govern. Тніз

THIS is treating the Crime with tendernels, and the Criminal with pity, that muft be confefs'd, and I am very willing to do fo in Compaflion to human Infirmity. But when all that is done, I muft be allowed to fay, the Fact deferves the fevereft Reflection, let the Ignorance or Rafhnels, or whatever other Infirmity of the Perfons, be pleaded in their Excufe.

It may be farther fuggefted, that fometimes thefe unhappy Confequences do not follow, or, if you pleafe, it is not always fo bad. But this argues nothing in favour of the falfe Step taken, or the groß Conduct fpoken of. Providence may, in Compafilon to the Infirmities of his Creatures, deal with them better than they deferve, and may mercifully fpare the Punifhments which they ought to expect; but this Mercy is far from a Reafon why they flould offend; on the contrary, it is the Reafon why they fhould not.

ON the other hand: Now view but the Felicity of a married Couple, engaged before Marriage, by a mutual, a fincere, and well-grounded Affection; who Love, and know why they do fo; love upon the folid Foundation of real Merit, perfonal Virtue, fimilitude of Tempers, mutual Delights; that fee good Senfe, good Humour, Wit, and agreeable Temper in one another, and know it when they fee it, and how to judge of it; that make each the Object of a reciprocal Choice, and fix all the View of their future Felicity in the Poffetfion of the Perfon fo loved; whofe Affection is founded in Honour and Virtue, their Intentions modeft; their Defires chaft, and their Defigns equally fincere,

WHEN

WHEN these come together, there's Matrimony in its Perfection; if they marry, they can answer the Minister, when he asks them, Will you love him? Will you love her? The Man can fay, I will, because I do; I will, and she is affured I will; I will, for she highly merits all my Affection.

IT would call for a Volume, not a Page, to defcribe the Happiness of this Couple. Possififion does not leffen, but highten their Enjoyments; the Flame does not exhaust it felf by burning, but encreases by its continuance; 'tis young in its remotess the Age; Time makes no Abatement; they are never furfeited, never fatiated; they enjoy all the Delights of Love without the criminal Excesses; Modess and Decency guide their Actions, and fet Bounds, not only to their Motions, but to their Defires; and, as Mr. Milton emphatically expresfes it:

" Shall to his Wife adhere, " And they shall be one Flesh, one Heart, one Soul. Milt. Par. lib. 8. fol. 214.

NOTHING criminal can creep in between, or among the Pleafures they enjoy; their Delights are full, yet they are chaft, temperate, conftant, and, in a word, durable.

THEIR Children are like their Parents, as Streams are from Fountains, formed in the Mould of Virtue and Modefty; not Furies and little Devils, that partake of the Rage they were form'd in, with their Blood boiling before it comes to the confiftency of its due Vigour; but they hand down Virtue to their Pofterity by the due Courfe of Nature, and the Confequence quence of due Calmnefs and Serenity in their own Spirits; for it is certain, that Humour and Temper defcend in the Line of Families as well as Difeafes and Diftemper; 'tis a juft Encouragement to Virtue. that it is fo, and 'tis juft to let fuch know it for the Encouragement of their good Conduct.

How bleft is the Houfe where fuch a Couple inhabit ? and all this Difference flows meerly from this one Branch, viz. Love before Marriage; Love is the conftituting Quality of their Matrimony, the Reafon of it, the Foundation on which it was built, and the Support of it after it was built. Such Families are happy by the meer natural Confequence of Life; their Tempers have nothing in them to form any Difcord or Strife from; they cannot Differ, Contend, Rage, Quarrel, Reflect, Reproach, Provoke, it is not in them; Nature has no fuch thwart Lines drawn over their Conftitution; they are united in Good, and can never be united in Evil too; these Contraries would not illustrate, but destroy one another; in a word, they are all Love, and because they are all Love, therefore their Behaviour is all Peace the Calm is in the Soul, and when it is fo, there can never be a Storm in the Mind; Love is not in them a Paffion but a Quality; 'tis rooted and riveted in their very Beings, they have a Difpolition to it in their very Nature.

THIS being a fettled Principle in them, both natural and habitual, it comes of courfe to exert it felf in the Article of Matrimony. I. They refolve not to marry but where they are fure, and fully fatisfy'd they can Love, that is to fay, that as they refolve it to be a Duty, fo they refolve to practice it. 2. In order to this, I 2 Prudence [ 116 ]

Prudence directs them to reject every Offer where Love does not concur with the other Circumftances, and make the Perfon perfectly not agreeable only, but the Object of their fincere and compleat Affection, and that upon good Foundations too.

WHEN these Things happen, then they mar-ry; if the Person thus marry'd meets with a Difappointment, as how often is the fincerest Affection abused, be it that the Lady marries a bad Husband, is miftaken in the Object, fixes her Mind upon an unworthy Fellow that feigned Love, and Honour, and Vertue, in his Addreffes, and proves a Hypocrite in them all; what is the Confequence? She is made miferable indeed, and wretchedly fo; But we do not fee the Houfe made a Bedlam; it is not Fire on one Side and Tinder on the other; it is not Sulphur and Nitre, which meeting makes Thunder; the Brute behaves as Brutes will; but the poor Lady mourns, fees her felf made miferable by the Man fhe loves; bears it as Chriftians bear remediless Sorrows, perhaps pines under it and dies, as is the fate of many a faithful, tender, affectionate Wife: And 'tis the fame thing in the Man, he takes a Lady, in appearance good; fhe is to him the Wife of his Youth, of his Affection, of his first and pureft Love, whom he made his Choice before Marriage, and places his Delight in afterward: But as none can fee the Infide and Soul of the Object, fhe proves a Piece of Froth and Vanity; is idle, luxurious, expensive, thoughtlefs in her Affairs, cold and indifferent in her Affe-Etion, and, at laft, loofe and light; and, in a word, any thing, or every thing, that is foolifh and wicked.

IT is not eafy to defcribe the anguish of his Soul at the difappointment: He had fixed his Love with a firm and riveted Force as a wife Man would and ought, long before he married her, nay, perhaps before he courted her; he had chosen her from the beautiful, the wealthy, the virtuous, and the good-humoured, among whom his Circumstances being good, he had room to choose.

As he loyed before Marriage, he refolved to love her afterwards, becaufe he was fure he fhould; and thus he refolved to make her happy, and make himfelf happy, in having her. But how is he difappointed when he finds a Traitor in his Bofom, a Fury in his Bed, a Serpent in his Arms, that neither loves, values or regards him? That, after a few Years, or perhaps Days, forgets all her Matrimonial Vows, the ftrongeft Ties of the folemneft Oath; thinks of nothing but Pleafure and Folly, defpifes the Entreaties of her Husband, and at laft himfelf, as a Husband; and, it may be, clofes all with running away from him, or with ruining him, breaking both his Heart and his Fortunes together.

THESE are fome of the Difafters where the Love is on one Side without the other. What muft then be the Confequences where it is of neither Side? How miferable, how diftracted a Family does it make! And in what wretched Doings does it frequently End? To marry without Affection! It feems to be like two Bulls chained together, that being tied fo clofe as that they cannot gore and kill one another, yet are always firiving to do it, wifhing to do it; and, if they break the Bonds, never fail to bring it to pafs.

I 3

I cannot think, and have fo many Reafons for my Opinion, I believe I fhall never alter it; I fay, I cannot think the Marriage can be lawful where there was not a refolved fettled Affection, fincerely embraced before the Matrimony was contracted. I will not follow Mr. Milton, and carry it up to this, that it may be diffolved again upon that fingle Account: No, no, I fhall open no Doors to the vitiated Wifhes of the Times; where Men would have Marriage be a flated Contract; where as the Parties agreement made the Bargain, fo the fame mutual Agreement might diffolve it; where as infincere Love joined them, a fincere and perfect Hatred should part them again. This would fill the World with Confusion, would pollute the Ordinance of Matrimony inftead of keeping it facred as God's holy Ordinance; 'twould make Marriage a Stale, a Convenience, to gratify the fenfual Part, and to be made ufe of as a thing not to be named; and when that worft Part of the Affections was fatiated, the Parties be left to pleafe and gratify their wicked Appetite with Variety.

THIS is not talking like Chriftians, or like Men of Virtue, no, not like Men guided by human Prudence, or by civil Polity, much lefs Reafon, for this would corrupt the Blood of Families, level Mankind with one another, confound Order, and, in a word, would fill the World with Whoredom.

No, no; if you will rush like the Horse into the Battle; if you will be mad, and follow rashly, and without Consideration, the raging heat of corrupt Inclination only, and go hoodwinked and blinded, you must take the Consequences to your felves; if you will wed without cut Affection, you must be content to live without Affection; if you come madly together, you must expect to live madly together; as King Charles faid to his Brother, the Duke of Tork, when he had married the Lord Chancellor's Daughter in private, and would have difowned her in publick, you must Drink as you Brew; in fhort, the Bond is too facred to be broken at pleasure; the Chain too ftrong for the two Bulls to break; as you are once bound you must remain in Bonds; once in Algier, and ever a Slave; nothing releases you but a Redemption by Death, on one Side or other.

How foolifh then, as well as wicked and unlawful, is it to marry before you love? To rufh into a ftate of irrecoverable Life without the only Article that can make it tolerable? They that marry without Affection go to Sea without a Rudder; launch into the moft dangerous Ocean without a Pilot, and without a Compafs: Love is the only Pilot of a married State; without it there is nothing but Danger in the Attempt, nothing but Ruin in the Confequence.

THE dirty Part of it I have mentioned; and I ftill infift upon it, that it is not a Matrimony of a right kind; to me it is no Matrimony at all, but a corrupt, rafh, hot-headed (and worfe) Bargain, made to gratify the worft Part of the Man or Woman, to pleafe the groffeft Part of his Conftitution, and for nothing elfe. Let a modeft Woman, if fuch the can be, ftand forth, and anfwer this one fhort Queftion:

PRAY, Madam, what do you marry this Gentleman for?

SHE cannot fay, fhe marries him to take care of her Affairs, as is generally the Plea of the young forward Widows, for the is a maiden Lady, and has no Affairs.

14

the

[ 120 ]

SHE cannot fay, fhe marries for Maintenance, for fhe is rich, and has a plentiful Eftate.

SHE cannot fay, fhe marries for Affection, for the declares the don't love him.

<sup>5</sup> SHE cannot fay, 'tis to have Children, for the fays fomething elfe to that, of which our next Chapter thall fpeak more fully.

PRAY then, what do you marry this Man for? Her Anfwer, if fhe will fpeak Truth, must be this: Truly, because I want to lie with a Man. Horrid Plea! Is this a just Reason for Matrimony! And can it be honeftly called Matrimony; whatever it may be called in the Sense of legal Forms, can it be called fo in the Sense of Confcience and of Honour? Is it not much more proper to fay, 'tis a Matrimonial Whoredom?

I fee but one Anfwer that can be given to this Argument, or be made a Plea for this kind of Matrimony, and this is a coarfe one for either Party, I confefs, but much more fo for the Ladies, viz. That Marriage is faid to be appointed to prevent Fornication; and that 'tis a Scripture direction to marry, rather than to burn. Let them that marry upon this Foundation acknowledge it then, and tell one another fo before-hand, and fee how the Tale will fit upon the Tongue of a young Gentleman, when he courts a Lady, and begins to addrefs her thus;

MADAM, I have a great defire to marry you.

PRAY Sir, fays fbe, what do you defire me for? You don't love me, I hear.

WHY

[ 121 ]

WHY, no truly,  $\int ays \ be$ , I can't fay I have much love for you, or for any Body elfe.

WHY then do you marry, pray? Jays she.

WHY, Madam, to tell you the truth,  $\int ays$ be, I want a Woman, and I am loth to go to a Whore; fo I will fupply my felf in a lawful way.

THIS would be very Impudent, you'll fay, it may be; but I muft add, 'tis honeft, and much honefter, than to fwear he loves her above all the World, damns himfelf over and over if he don't; tells her a thoufand Lies to draw her in, and when he is married, tells her the Truth in a Brutifh and infolent manner, that he never cared one Farthing for her; that he wanted a Woman, and took her for his Convenience; and that now he has had his fill of her, fhe would greatly oblige him if fne would difpefe of her felf out of his way, offering her one of his Garters for the Occafion.

IT would lead me into the grand Error of Language, which I have profess'd to avoid, if I fhould pretend to give this wicked vile Part, a full Delineation; 'tis difficult to express fuch a dirty Subject in clean Words; and therefore I avoid giving the Ladies the Anatomy of a Couple come together without a previous Affection; or the Difcourfes that pass between them when perhaps, one Side or other are difappointed in the grand Expectation. It would furfeit the Reader to hear a certain Tradefinan's Lady call her Husband — Dog, and ask him what he thinks fhe married him for? Nor fhould I mention fo foul a Story, did not Mrs. _____ give all her Neighbours leave to hear her fay a thoufand Things, in plainer English, to him every Day, of a groffer kind.

ф. Ф. с. с. IF the Ladies will fpeak, the Boys and Girls in the Street will never hold their Tongues. When the Secrets of the Bed-Chamber become no longer Secrets, and the Wife fhall publifh her own Shame, who can fhe think will conceal it? When fhe ceafes to Blufh, who will Blufh for her?

BUT 'tis enough ; let us touch this vile Part with as light a Stroke as poffible, and you muft be content to go without the modeft Lady  $S_{--}$ "s Story; as alfo the diverting Complaint of Madam Arab. — with that of the new-married Alderman — 's Lady, and feveral more of the difcontented Part of this modeft Town, unlefs you pleafe to get an Account of them from their own Mouths, which they are moft ready to do on all Occafions, as publick as you pleafe, Men, Boys and Midwives, being prefent.

THIS is the Effect of marrying without Affection, without a ferious, preingaged Soul, without mutual and unfeigned Complaifance and Delight one in another; in a word, this is what I call Matrimonial Whoredom; if I mifcal it, let me be convinced by the better Behaviour of the Perfons, that I flander the ftate of Life thus entered into, and then I fhall acknowledge my Error; and it cannot be reafonably expected of me before.

1000

激淡淡

CHAP.

[ 123 ].

CHAP. V.

Of Marrying, and then publickly profeffing to defire they may have no CHIL-DREN, and of using Means physical or diabolical, to prevent Conception.

H A T Matrimony was inftituted for the regular Propagation of Kind, I have noted already, and need repeat no Part of it; I only add, that the prefent vitiated Humour of the Times has brought up our modern Wits to cavil at the Words regular Propagation. They will allow it to be proper for the Regularity; but not effential to the Propagation, and fo they would have Matrimony be only taken for civil Regulation of Government, appointed meerly by humane Polity, and the Contrivance of Statefmen, to keep the People in a kind of formal Subjection to Conffitutions and Government, and to make the Lawyers Work, to order Inheritances and Succeffions, as they think fit.

For, fay they, in the Beginning it was not fo; and then they bring us the Story of Abraham and his Maid Hagar, Jacob marrying two Sifters, and then lying with both their Maids, and the like. These Examples, they fay, prove that ProPropagation, being a general Work, ought not to be brought into Bondage, and under the Subjection of these Conftitution-Regularities, but that Successions and Inheritances should be wholly Patriarchal, the Father dividing his Substance among his Children, as he thinks fit; and then they add Mr. Dryden, a leud Poet, upon that Subject:

"When Man on many multiply'd his Kind, "'Ere one to one was cursedly confin'd.

IF I was upon the Subject of Poligamy in this Chapter, I fhould, perhaps feafonably too, anfwer this corrupt Way of Reafoning here; but it may come in its Place; at prefent my Thoughts and Applications are another Way.

THE Laws of our Country, and the acknowledged Principles of the Chriftian Religion which we profefs, have united their Force to lay us under Subjection to this Part of Conftitution-Government, as those Men call it; and be it right or wrong in its own Nature, be it better or worfe in it felf, and in its Circumftances, we are under this Regulation, born in the reach of it, the Laws of GoD and of our Country bind us to it, and there is no room to make that a Pretence; the Cavil can have no force among us in this Nation.

LET me explain a little upon this Subject, and if it be too grave, I fhall be the fhorter, but it is abfolutely neceffary to be underftood: It is plain, whatever Silence we may pretend the Scripture has fhewn, our Laws have determined it to be fixed faft upon us; no Man may have two Wives at a time here.

I. BE-

[ 125 ]

1. BECAUSE the Laws of the Land forbid it, and make it criminal.

2. BECAUSE both the Man and the Woman bind themfelves against it by mutual Agreement, and marry positively upon that Condition.

Firft, THE Lawsof the Land. Every Law is, as I may fay, of our own making : Every Man is bound by the laws of his Country, he is bound to the Obligation, that is, to obey and fubject himfelf to them; and he confents in the making to fubmit to the Punishment in Cafe of a Breach of these Laws: The Parliament is a true Rep elementative of the whole Country; every Subject is prefent at the making every Law that paffes, though not perfonally, yet he is present representatively in his Representative, and actually makes every Law that paffes; he confents to it, and fubmits, or promifes to fubmit to it; and this makes his Punishment just and rational too, if he breaks the Law, becaufe he first yielded to be governed by it.

Now the Laws of our Country are of two Kinds in this Cafe; the Common or Statute Law, and the Divine Law, which we call Confcience; the first makes what we call Conftitution, and is founded upon what our Legislature supposed to be the meaning and defign of the Laws of GoD; for the legislative Authority of our Country never are intended to contradict either the Law of Nature or the Divine Law.

As then the Laws of our Country enjoin it.

[ 126 ]

As these Laws of our Country are confonant to, or at least are supposed to be founded upon the Laws of God, and the Laws of Nature.

AND as we are all bound, as Members of the Conftitution, to fubmit to, and be governed by the Laws of our Country.

AND, laftly, we are bound by the Laws of GOD, to obey the lawful Authority of that Government and Country we live under.

So by all thefe Obligations we are obliged against Poligamy, and it would be a finful Excursion for us to come into it.

Secondly, Becaufe both the Man and the Woman bind themfelves against it by mutual Agreement, and marry positively upon that Condition.

WHAT we are mutually engaged by Contract to perform, and which it is lawful to perform, it is unlawful for us not to perform. It is a Vulgar, but well-founded Proverb or proverbial Saying, Every honeft Man is as good as his Word. Certainly a mutual Compact is mutually obliging; nor can it be pretended, that there is any Force in it, for the Man knows he marries upon that Condition; if not, let him but tell his Wife he will, notwithstanding his Agreement, marry another while fhe is living; and let him fee who will take him upon those Terms; if the Lady confents to it, that's another Cafe. I shall then fay this only, (viz.) that he does not offend her; he commits no Breach, no Trefpass upon her; as to his difobeying and breaking the Laws of God and of his Country; let him answer for that where those Things are to be answered for : But as to his his Wife, he does her no Wrong, if he takes ten Wives together, becaufe fhe confented to it, and took him under the express Condition.

[ 127 ]

THIS, I think, is a true ftate of the Cafe, and confirms this Point; that let us pretend to what Excufe we will for Poligany, from the pretended Silence of the Scripture, yet we are effectually prohibited and fore-clofed by the Laws of the Land, and, by our voluntary Confent, expressed in the folemness of all Oath, the Marriage Contract.

BEING then under the Obligation of finglehanded Matrimony, let us talk of it as it lies, and go back to where we left off: This Matrimony is at leaft the only, lawful, eftablished and regular Means of Propagation of the Species. All Births out of this Circle are, as it was in the old fewish Conftitution, out of GoD's Congregation, for a Baftard was excluded to the fourth Generation; and all our Births extra Matrimonial, or, as the Scots call it, on the wrong Side of the Blankets, are spurious, illegitimate, and given up to the Reproach of Baftardy, efteemed Corrupt in Blood, and carry the Blot or Blend in the Efcutcheon to the End of Time, fo that the Brand is indelible; no Time, no Merit of Perfons, no Purchafe of Honours or Titles, can wipe out the remembrance of it.

THIS then being the Cafe, I need not tell the Ladies that this is the only Way by which they are allowed, with Honour and Reputation, to bring forth Children; 'tis the only Protection to their Characters when they are with Child, viz. That they have a Father for it; that it was born in Wedlock; fuch a young Lady is big with Child, there Scandal begins to open its Mouth: Well, what then, the is married! There's an immediate Anfwer that ftop's every body's Mouth; and the Virtue of the Lady is no more ftruck at, nor can be; for 'tis the Road of Nature, joined with the direction and limitation of the Law, and that as well the Laws of Gop and Man; of which at large in its Place.

BUT how then comes it to pass that People marry that would have no Offspring? And from what Principles do these People act who marry, and tell us, they hope they shall have no Children? This is to me one of the most unwarrantable and preposterous Things that I can think of in all the Articles of Matrimony; nor can I make out; if I were to set up to defend it, I fay, I could not for my Life make it out, that there is the least pretence in it to Honesty, or to Modesty, nay, I would not undertake to justify the Morality of it.

BUT let us first fee if it can be reconciled to Modesfy; for that is the particular Point I am upon, and whether it does not come justly under the Reproach of the Matrimonial Whoredom that I am speaking of.

IF you fhould come to a Lady of the greateft Modefty and Virtue in the World, and put it clofe to her upon any weighty Part of the Subject, as about Settlements, inheriting Eftates, and the like, fhe would not fcruple, tho' perhaps with fome little Reluctance, at that Kind of the Queftion, that fhe expects to have Children when the Gentlemen and fhe comes together: Modefty obliges the Lady to fhun and avoid the Difcourfe as much as fhe can; but fhe tacitly owns fhe is to be underftood fo in the very Nature of the Thing; and if fhe is talked to among her own Sex, where fhe could be free, and they were fo weak as to ask her fuch a Queftion, Queftion, which I think few Women would do, as, whether fhe expected to have any Children? She would fay, Yes, to be fure; what do you think I marry for elfe?

Now take a married Life, with all its Addenda of Family Cares, the trouble of looking after a Houfhold, the hazard of being fubject to the Humours and Pathons of a churlifh Man, and particularly of being difappointed, and matching with a Tyrant, and a Family-Brute; with still the more apparent hazard of being ruined in Fortune by his Difasters if a Tradesman, by his Immoralities if a Gentleman, and by his Vices if a Rake: I fay, what Woman in her Senfes would tie her felf up in the Fetters of Matrimony, if it were not that fhe defires to be a Mother of Children, to multiply her Kind, and, in fhort, have a Family?

IF fhe did not, fhe would be next to Lunatick to marry, to give up her Liberty, take a Man to call Mafter, and promife when fhe takes him to Honour and Obey him. What! give her felf away for nothing ! Mortgage the Mirth, the Freedom, the Liberty, and all the Pleafures of her Virgin-state, the Honour and Authority of being her own, and at her own difpofe, and all this to be a Barren Doe, a Wife without Children; a Difhonour to her Husband, and a Reproach to her felf! Can any Woman in her Wits do thus? It is not indeed confiftent with common Senfe.

TAKE it then on the Man's Side, 'tis the fame Thing. I have known indeed a Man pre-tend to profess fuch an Averfion to Children in the Houfe, and to the Noife and Impertinences of them, as he called it, that he could not bear the Thoughts of them. But then this Man Man did not pretend to marry; and fo far he was in the right; his Conduct was congruous, and confiftent with it felf, and he was all of a Piece.

N. B. BUT then pray note, by the way, this Man married afterwards, and then he was ready to hang himfelf that he had no Children; that he was not like other Families; that he look'd like a Houfe that Heaven had blafted; that others had Children enough, and fome more than they could keep, but he that had a plentiful Fortune, a beautiful Woman to his Wife, and both of them in Health, and Years fuitable, fhould be barren.

AFTER fome time, that, as if to punifh his unjuft Averfions, his Wife was with-held Chilbearing, fhe brought him two Sons at a Birth; the Man was over-joyed and thankful for them, and the fondeft Father in the World: Thus he ftood reproved for his former Error, and was a living Witnefs againft himfelf.

THE first Part of his Conduct was scandalously wrong, as I have faid; the aversion to Children was unnatural; but then he acted the rational Part so far, that he did not marry. But for a Man or Woman to marry, and then say, they defire to have no Children, that is a Piece of preposterous Nonfence, next to Lunacy.

IF A. G. a grave Jefter at Matrimony, who tells us, 'tis the only Reafon he does not marry, that boafts the Ladies are every Day dying for him, and that he would marry but that he hates Children; I fay, if he will pleafe to have one of those modern witted Ladies that defires to marry, but would have no Children, they may certainly marry, and yet refolve upon the wholefome Negative between them for a certain tain Space of Time, viz. to Number fifty, or thereabouts; and tis great odds but they may obtain the feeming Anfwer to their Request, and go barren to the Grave.

BUT if any doubt the Sincerity of the Ladies who make those Pretences, let the Gentlemen who has a mind to try them effectually, and who professes to love a pretty Lady's Conversation, but hates this foolish thing called Coition, as Religio Medici calls it; I fay, let him put (Origin) upon himself, and then Court one of those chast Wou'd-be-barren Ladies, and see if any One of them will take him. My Word for them, and no venture neither, not one of them would care to be seen in his Company.

SIR Roger l'Estrange in his Æsop, in the Moral of one of his Fables, has this fhort Story very well to my Purpofe : " Well! I am un-" done, fays a certain grave Widow Lady, to " another Lady of her Intimacy; I am un-" done, I fay, for want of a good honeft under-" ftanding fober Man, to look after my Af-" fairs. Every Body cheats me, no Body will " pay me; Mr. ---- has left me in good " Circumstances, but 'tis all abroad in Debts " and Accounts; and I am but a Woman, and " every Body impofes upon me; What ihall I " do? I think verily, if I could but find fuch a " Perfon as I really want, I fhould be almost " tempted to Matrimony. But then that ugly 55 nauseous Business of a Husband and a Bed-" fellow, and the reft of it. I profess my Sto-64 mach turns at the Thoughts of it; the very " mention of it makes me Sick; it puts me " quite off all my Thoughts again, fo that, in " fhort, I fhall be ruin'd, I know not what to do. K 2 WELL!

WELL! however, as fhe had told her Mind to the other Lady, and bid her think of it, and find out fuch a Man for her, if fhe met with any thing fuitable to her Circumftances, the Lady comes to her one Day full of Joy, and big with the Difcovery.

"Oh Child, fays fhe, I have thought of "what you told me the other Day about your "Circumftances, I have found a Man that will "fit you every way to a tittle; fo grave, fo "fober, fo honeft, you can never put your felf "into better Hands; he is a Mafter of Bufi-"nefs, and Bred to it; he underftands Ac-"compts, making Leafes, letting Farms, knows "every Thing, and, in fhor+, you can never "have fuch an Opportunity while you live; "for he will fuit your other Propofal too, about "that ufual Affair of Matrimony; you under-"ftand me, Madam; I can affure you, he will "never difturb you that Way, he has no "Thoughts of that Kind, nor is he in a Condi-"tion for it.

THE Lady heard her with Smiles till fhe comes to the very laft Words, when fhe turns up her Nofe with a fnuff. Away! away! fays fhe, I thought you had known better than that too; I love the Virtue, as I told you, but I hate the Infirmity.

Now when I fhall fee any one of those Ladies who are for marrying, but fay, they hope they fhall have no Children; I fay, when I fhall fee them marry an Origin, or fuch a Man as this Lady recommended to her Friend, and, knowing him to be fuch, then I fhall no longer doubt their Sincerity.

OR when one of those Ladies, professing an Aversion to Children, shall also maintain an AverAverfion to Matrimony becaufe of it, and fhall reject all the beft Offers, the handfomeft Gentlemen, fuitable Settlements, agreeable Figures, and the like, and refolve the Celibacy of her Life, purely becaufe fhe would have no Children; this indeed, however it may reflect upon her Senfe, and her Wifdom, will yet reflect nothing upon her Virtue, or upon her Sincerity, becaufe fhe acts according to her profefs'd Sentiments; and all her Conduct is of a Piece.

BUT to pretend to all this Averfion for Children, to naufcate the Nurfing, the Watching, the Squaling, the fatigue of bringing up Children, which, as they call it, makes a Wcman a Slave and a Drudge all her Days; to be perpetually exclaiming againft this, and then MARRY, what muft we call this?

FOR a young, handfome and agreeable Lady with all the Blufhes and Modefty of her Virgin Years about her, and under the beft of Education, to marry, go naked to Bed, and receive the Man, as it were, in her Arms, and then fay, fhe hopes fhe fhall have no Children, and fhe defires to have no Children, this is a Language I cannot underftand ; it will bear no modest Construction in my Thoughts, and, in a word, is neither more or less than acknowledging that fhe would have the Pleafure of lying with a Man, but would not have the least Interruption from her usual Company keeping; the Jollitry and Mirth of her younger Years; that fhe would not abate her Pleafures, fhe would not be confined at home, or loaded with the Cares of being a Mother.

IN a word, fhe would have the Use of the Man, but she would not act the Part of the Woman; she would have him be the Husband, but fhe would not be a Wife, and, if you bear the blunt Stile that fome People put it into, fhe would only keep a St____n.

band

[ 134 ]

THERE is indeed no diffembling the Matter, 'tis neither better or worfe; fhe would pleafe her Appetite with the bare brutal Part, but would be freed from that which fhe calls the trouble of Matrimony Child-bearing; which, by the way, the most virtuous, modest, chast and valuable Ladics in the World, haye, in all Ages, efteemed to be the Blessing of a married Life.

I remember there was an Example of a Lady in a certain neighbouring Country, who married a Person of Quality, but conditioned with him not to cohabit for a certain Time, I think it was for a Year or two; and the Reafon she gave for it was, that fhe would not fpoil her Shape; but then, as above, the conditioned not to cohabit, and yet when fhe did cohabit, her Lord did not find her fo chaft, or that her Virtue was of fo much value to her as her Beauty ; and fhe ventured, if Fame lies not, the fpoiling her Shapes, in an extraordinary manner, when the declined the Enjoyment of her own Husband, and ran the rifque of her fmall Wafte in the ordinary way. But that Part is not to the prefent Cafe.

 $I_N$  all the Examples I have met with, where the Conduct of the Perfon has been juftifiable, they have joined to their Averfions for Childbearing the proper Remedies, namely, abftinence from the Men; if the Lady that defires to be no Breeder, keeps her felf fingle and chaft; if the preferves her Virtue, and remains unmarried, I have no more to fay, let it be to her as the defires; no doubt the will not be trou-troubled with Children if the knows not a Man; if the with-holds the Means, Nature will certainly with-hold the End, and if the dies Virtuous. I warrant her fhe dies Barren.

But here is a farther, and yet more fatal Mischief attending, and which, if the Wish is real, as I am to suppose it is, I fee no room to forbear fuggefting, that fhe will certainly ufe fome Means to prevent it. The Truth is, there is not much Senfe in the Difcourfe without it, as there is no Honefty with it : For what can a Woman fay to her felf that lies with a Man every Night, and yet really wifhes and defires to have no Children? 'Tis most natural to fay, why I must either take fome Method or other with my felf, or I shall certainly be with Child.

A certain Lady, not a hundred Miles from St. Ann's —, and who was one of the merry Club, called, The Assembly of Barren Does, had an unpleasant Dialogue with a Friend of hers, who fine thought to be a Privy-Councellor of Hell, but proved not quite wicked enough for her, upon this very Subject; another Lady being prefent, who protefted against the Propofals, though fhe was not averfe to the Thing, for which they were proposed, Lady. O Coufin, fays the first Lady that was newly married, I am glad to fee you, for I want fadly to talk with you a little.

Coufin. Well, Child, what is the Matter, are you with Child yet?

Lady. No, thank GOD, I an't, but I am ready to die with the Thoughts of it.

Cou. Why fo frighted, Child; what's the Matter ? Lady.

K 4

[ 136 ]

Lady. O! I would not be with Child for all the World.

Cou. Not with Child, and not for all the World. What do you mean?

Lady. I mean as I fay; if I am with Child, I am undone.

Cou. Why, what are you afraid of ? I warrant, you have a Notion that you fhall die with the first Child, han't you ? Why all the young married Women fancy fo.

Lady. No, no, I don't trouble my felf with that, I might do as well as other Women for that; but 'tis an odious, hateful Thing, I abhor the Thoughts of it.

Cou. I never heard the like. Why, what did you marry for?

Lady. Nay, that's true; but every Woman that marries an't with Child prefently.

Cou. No not prefently, no more are you. Why, you have been this half Year almost?

Lady. Yes, feven Months.

Cou. And not with Child! Why, what have you been doing all this while? Why, it may be, you will never have any ?

Lady. Oh! if that could but happen, I fhould be happy then.

Cou. What do you mean? Are you in earneft?

Lady. Yes, I am in earneft; I would give five hundred Pounds if I could be fure never to have any.

Cou. I could have given you an infallible Method to have prevented it a little while ago.

Lady. What was it, Coufin? Law! you would oblige me infinitely; It is not too late yet, is it?

Cou. My Method was this, Child, not to have been married.

Lady,

[ 137 ]

Lady. Phoo, that's faying nothing; befides, you know I had a mind to marry.

Cou. Ay, Coufin, I know you had, and to be with Child too, as well as other Women. Why not?

Lady. No, I vow and fwcar to you, I always had an Averfion to the very Thoughts of Children.

Cou. Nay, then you fhould never have married.

Lady. Well; but I could not help that: I tell you, I had a mind to have a Hufband.

Cou. I don't know what to fay to you, Coufin. Why, if you had a mind to lie with a Man, you might be fure you would be with Child? Prithee don't talk fo fimply; why you make a Child of your felf, as if you underftood nothing.

Lady. But, Coufin, is there no way to prevent it now ?

Cou. To prevent it now ! Let me fee, you fay you are fure you are not with Child yet.

Lady. Yes, I am fure I an't.

Cou. Why then, I'll tell you how you shall prevent it.

Lady. Oh how, Coufin ! Do, tell me that valuable Secret.

Cou. Why don't let Mr. _____ come to you any more, Child.

Lady. Pshaw, that — that won't do. How can I help it?

Cou. Why can't you pretend Indifposition, and lie away from him.

Lady. Ay, that's true, but that is not the Thing, I can't abide that neither; that would be be parting Beds: No, I can't think of that neither; I can't abide to lie away from him.

[ 138 ]

Cou. You are a pretty Gentlewoman indeed; you would not be with Child, and yet you would lie with a Man every Night. Is not that the Cafe now ?

Lady. Why, truly, I can't fay but it is a little of the Cafe. But what can I do?

Cou. Nay, I don't know; you must e'en run the Venture, as, I suppose, you do, and as other Women do.

Lady. Then I fhall certainly be with Child : And what will become of me then?

Cou. Become of you. Why, you will be brought to Bed, have a fine Boy, and half a dozen more after that, and do bravely, as your Neighbours do, and as your Mother did before you, Child.

Lady. Law ! Coufin, you diftrefs my very Soul; I cannot bear the Thoughts of it.

Cou. There's no help for it, Child.

Lady. Sure there is, Coufin; fomething may be done: I heard of one Mrs. Pleaf...t that did.

Cou. Why, you little Devil, you would not take Phyfick to kill the Child, would you, as, they fay, fhe did?

Lady. No; but there may be Things to prevent Conception; an't there?

Cou. Why, look you, let me fee, I don't know *.

* Here she muses, as if to consider of it, and that she knew of some Measures that might be taken to answer.

Lady.

- [ 139 ]

Lady. Do, Coufin, if it be possible.

Cou. Nay, fince you are fo much in earnest.

Lady. Indeed, I am in earnest.

Cou. Why, there are Things to be taken

Lady. What! to make Folks mifcarry. Oh! I would not do that neither; I dare not do that.

Cou. What! you mean to prevent your being with Child, I fuppofe.

Lady. Ay, ay,  $\bar{I}$  do mean that ; but I wou'd not take Things to deftroy the Child, that wou'd be murther. I wou'd not do that by no means, Coufin.

Cou. Why look ye, Child, I would not deceive you, 'tis the fame Thing.

Lady. What do you mean?

Cou. Why, I mean as I fay; I tell you, 'tis the fame Thing, Child.

Lady. What ! the fame Thing to prevent a Conception as to deftroy the Child after it is conceived : Is that the fame Thing?

Cou. Yes, I fay, 'tis the fame Thing.

Lady. Explain your felf, Coufin, for I don't underftand you, indeed; it does not feem the fame Thing to me.

Cou. Why, in the firft place, you would prevent your having any Children, though you married according to GoD's holy Ordinance; which Ordinance, as the Office of Matrimony tells you, was appointed for that very End; to take Medicines therefore to prevent, or to deftroy that Conception, are equally wicked in their Intention, and it is the End of every thing, that makes it Good or Evil; the reft differs only in the degree.

Lady.

[ 140 ]

Lady. I cannot underftand your Niceties; I would not be with Child, that's all; there's no harm in that, I hope.

Cou. That is not all the Cafe, Child; though I do not grant that there is no harm. Now you have, as I faid, married a Man, and he, no doubt, defires and expects Children by you.

Lady. Yes, Mr. C---- is mighty defirous to have Children.

Cou. And what do ye think he would fay to, or think of you, if he knew you would be taking Phyfick, to prevent your being with Child.

Lady. He would be very angry, I believe indeed, very angry.

Cou. Ay, and have very ill Thoughts of you, I venture to fay that to you, Child; therefore be cautious, and act very warily in what you do.

Lady. Well, Coufin, and fo I will, but that is not the Cafe, I don't fear his knowing it; but as to what you were faying before.

Cou. Why, as I faid before, I fay again, your taking Phyfick before-hand to prevent your being with Child is wilful Murther, as effentially and as effectually, as your deftroying the Child after it was formed in your Womb.

Lady. How can that be? when there is nothing to deftroy, I can deftroy nothing.

Cou. The Difference, as I faid before, lies only in the degree ; for Example.

Lady. Ay, pray let me have an Example; for I do not reach it indeed.

Con. Why thus; you was with Mr. — your Husband laft Night; I'll fuppofe then, that if you do nothing to injure it, and though you were 1 141 ] were never to lie with him more, you would be with Child.

Lady. Oh ! you hurt me but with fuppofing it.

Cou. I understand you, Child, but don't interrupt me.

Lady. Well, I won't; tho' you wound * me deep every Word you fay; but pray go on.

Cou. I must suppose, as before then, that you conceived as lately as you can imagine; whenever fuch a Thing happens, it must take its Beginning fome where or other.

Lady. Well, what then?

Cou. Why then, if you take a Medicine to prevent it after 'tis done, is not that deftroying it?

Lady. You fright me, Coufin. Cou. I can't help that, I had rather fright you than deceive you; the Difference is only here, that by this Medicine you deftroy a younger Conception than you would do in the other Cafe; but it is no lefs a real and an effectual Child in Embrio, than the other.

Lady. And is not that a Difference ?

Con. What Difference in Murther, whether the Perfon killed be a Man grown, or a little Boy?

Lady. What must I do then? Coufin.

Cou. What must you do? Why, be quiet and eafy, Child, and take your Lot in the World, as other Women do.

* Here she cries, fearing she is with Child, and dreade, ing to hear that it is not lawful to defiroy it.

[ 142 ]

Lady. Oh! I can't bear the Thoughts of Children.

Cou. Then you should not have married, Child. Why, did ever any Woman marry, and not with for Children?

Lady. Yes, yes; I know feveral that married, and refolved to have none, if they could help it.

Cou. Why then you know feveral Monfters of Women? why 'tis prepofterous. Lady. Well, I know two in particular, and they took Things to prevent it, as I would fain do.

Cou. Then they flould have taken them before Marriage, and honeftly told the Man fo. and fee if any honeft Man would have meddled with them.

Lady. But, dear Coufin, go on with your Difcourfe: Why may I not take fomething to prevent my being with Child now, when, as I tell you, I am fure I am not with Child, except for a Night only? And why fhould I be with Child just now more than all this while?

HERE the Difcourfe ftopt a-while; and the Coufin, though the had faid it was against her Confcience and Judgment, was prevailed with to tell her of a Medicine, and a devilish one it was, if the had fet down all the Particulars. N. B. You are to note, that it was a Medicine indeed for the wicked Purpofe; but the other Lady that gave it her kept out the main and most dangerous Ingredients, and gave her, as appeared afterwards, nothing but what, if fhe had been with Child, fhe might have taken with the greatest Safety in the World. However, the other having believed fhe had taken other other Things, her Imagination made it work other Effects than it would have done.

[ 143 ]

WHEN fhe had taken the Medicine it made her very fick, and, in a word, fet her a Vomiting and Purging most violently, and that threw her into a high Fever.

IN her Fever fhe was exceedingly ftruck in her Confcience with the Fact; and I could give a very pleafing Account from her own Mouth, of her after Reflections upon the criminal Part, which fhe was then convinced of, and began to be penitent for. But that Part is too ferious for this Time of Day, and few of the Readers of our Times may be grave enough to relifh it.

But the Story turns upon another Part, being extremely afflicted at what fhe had done, and having no Body to give vent to her Mind about it, her Coufin, who had unhappily given her the Direction, being gone into the Country; I fay, the want of her to vent her Thoughts, and eafe her Mind to, joined to the Fever, made her delirious or light-headed; and in one of her Fits of Talking fhe knew not what, fhe unhappily betrayed the Secret, told what fhe had done to the Nurfe that tended her, and fhe had Difcretion little enough to tell it to her Husband's Mother, and fhe to her Son, the Lady's Husband.

It moved him with a variety of Paffions, as, in particular, an Indignation at the horrid Fact, Anger at his Wife, who, though he loved to an Extreme, and had never fnewn the leaft Unkindnefs to her before, yet he could not refrain, fick as fhe was, and even at Dcath's Door, to reproach her with it, and that in the bittereft Terms, which put her into a violent Agony, fo that every one about her thought he had killed her; and then he was as Angry with himfelf at the impatience of his Temper.

144

HOWEVER, to make out the fhort Hiftory in a few Words, the Lady recovered, the Fever went off, and the was reftored to health, but that was not all, fhe was reftored to her Senfes in the Point in which fhe had trefpaffed, as I faid, upon her Modefty. But fhe fuffered fome Affliction in that very Article, that fhe had been blamed for; fhe lived near two Years more with her Husband, and never was with Child; and all the while fhe was under the greateft Affliction for not being with Child, much more than fhe was before for fear of it, and indeed with much more Foundation.

HER Apprehenfions now were, that her Hufband should suppose either that she still used Art with her felf to prevent her being with Child, or to deftroy a Conception after it had taken place, or that fhe had injured her felf fome Way or other, by what fhe had formerly done in fuch a manner, that now it was pro-bable fhe might never be with Child at all; and thefe Thoughts, effectially the laft, did really make fuch an Impression upon her Hufband, before fhe could eafily perceive a great alteration in his Conduct and Carriage to her, that he was colder, and, as fhe thought, very much changed in his Affection to her, carried it with indifference and flight, looked upon himfelf as greatly injured and abufed by her; frequently talked as if he thought the Ends of Matrimony being really unjuffly deftroyed by her with defign, and wilfully, their Marriage was void in Law, and ought to be diffolved in form; and once or twice, if not oftner, intimated mated to her, that he thought of bringing it into Parliament, in order to obtain a diffolution of their Marriage.

[ 145 ]

THIS terrified her to the last Degree; she behaved her felf to him with great fubmillion, and indeed, more than he defired ; frequently, and on all Occafions, protefted to him with all possible folemnity, that she had not taken the leaft Step, or entertained a Thought of doing fo, towards any thing of that kind, fince her late Fever; affured him of her being fully fatisfied that it was unlawful, and that the had committed a great Crime in what fhe had done before; that it was a Sin against her Hulband; that fhe had injured him in it, difhonoured her felf, and offended against the Laws both of GOD and Man. He could not fay more to her than fhe did to load her felf, and managed fo well, fo humble, upon the main Subject, and fo obliging to him, that fhe convinced him of her Sincerity, and he became fully fatisfied of that Part, as indeed he had great Reafon to be upon many Accounts.

BUT for what was pafs'd, there was no Anfwer to be given to it; fhe hardly knew what the had done, and what the had not done; fhe did not know what fhe had taken, except the Names of fome of the Drugs, what Effect they might have had, fhe was as ill able to know, as any Body elfe was to tell her; fhe might have fpoiled her felf for ought fhe knew; nor was fhe able to give him any Affurance that it was not fo.

THIS left him very uneafy, and, as I faid above, he did not fail to let her know it, which extremely afflicted her, for though, as above, he was a very kind Husband yet it [ 146 ] was a Thing fo very difobliging, and fnewed fach a Contempt of him, when he was by all possible means endearing himfelf to her, fo that he refented it exceedingly.

UNDER this diffreffed Circumftance of her Affairs, and dreading the being exposed, as above, by her Husband's bringing it before the Parliament, though he was foon fatisfied the Houfe would not have engaged in it one Way or other, unlefs it had been to vote it fcandalous, which would have done him no fervice at all; I fay, in this Diffrefs her Coufin came to Town, and fhe no fooner heard of it, but fhe flies to her; and their firft Meeting produced the following Difcourfe:

Lady. Oh! Coufin, now I am undone indeed ; I am compleatly miferable *.

Con. What is the Matter, Child, what is it ? pray tell me, Are you with Child ?

<sup>1</sup> Lady. Oh ! miferable to the last Degree; I can't defcribe it to you *.

Cou. What is it, Coufin? I entreat you compole your felf.

Lady. Oh! that curfed Dofe of Phyfick you gave me.

Cou. Nay, Child, don't fay I gave it you.

Lady. No, you did not give it me; nor I did not follow your Directions in it.

Con. Why? Did you take it when you were with Child?

Lady. I don't know, I am afraid I did.

* She could fay no more for Crying, nor could fbe fpeak a good while.

+ Cries again vehemently.

[ 147 ]

Cou. Nay, then you made mad Work with your felf indeed; I am fure I directed you just the contrary. But to tell you the Truth, if you took nothing but my Directions, it was a very innocent thing; it would have done you neither good nor harm.

Lady. Ay, but it purged and vomited my Life away almost, and threw me into a † violent Fever.

Cou. Why, you were certainly with Child then, and the fright put you into that Condition.

Lady. I believe it did; for I had no fooner fwallowed it down, but I was in the greateft Agony imaginable, at the Thoughts of what I had done; I was ftruck as if an Arrow had been fhot thro' me; I was all horror and diforder, Soul and Body.

Cou. Ay, you frighted your felf Sick : I am fure what I gave you Directions to take would have done you no hurt, if you had been with Child.

Lady. Are you fure of it?

Cou. Don't you remember how earneftly I perfuaded you against the Thing it felf.

Lady. Yes, very well.

Con. And how I argued with you, that it was as much Murther as if the Child had been grown to its maturity in your Womb.

Lady. Yes, yes, I remember it particularly.

Cou. Well, Coufin; And do you think then I would have given you a Dofe to kill the Child † Here she tells ber the whole Story as it happened, and as related above.

1 2

within

[ 148 ]

within you, when you know how I urged you against it fo earnessly, and told you 'twas wilful Murther ?

Lady. Well, but you did give me the Directions.

Cou. Ay, ay, let any Phyfician fee it; I'll appeal to the beft of them; I gave it you to put a Stop to your doing worfe, and for nothing elfe.

Lady. And could it do me no harm?

Cou. No, I'll anfwer for it, if you took nothing but what I directed.

Lady. Nay, I neither added or diminifhed, I can affure you.

Cou. Then let any Body fhew the Receipt to the Doctor, and I'll ftand by it, that as I gave it you to be rid of your importunate wicked Defign, fo I gave it you to prevent your taking fomething worfe of fome Body elfe.

Lady. Oh! Coufin, if that could be made out, I with Mr. _____ knew it, for he is difobliged fo by it, that I believe he will never be reconciled to me; I believe he will expofe me for it, and we fhall feparate about it *.

Cou. It is a lamentable Story indeed, Coufin, and Things have been very ill managed among you.

Lady. But, dear Coufin, what fhall I do? Are you fo fure of what you fay, that I may depend upon it I have received no Damage?

Cou. I will go to any Phyfician with you, and convince you.

* Here the tells the whole Story of her Deliriums, and of dear Husband's being told of it, as before.

Lady.

[ 149 ]

Lady. Nay, if you did cheat me, then it was a kind of a happy Fraud. ShallI let Mr. ____ know it, if there is any Occafion?

Cou. With all my Heart; I'll juftify every Word of it, and fatisfy any reafonable Man.

Lady. I don't know whether any thing will fatisfy Mr. _____ now, for 'tis hard to remove a Fancy of fuch a Nature when once it has taken Root in the Mind: Nor do I believe all the Arguments in the World would be of any Weight with him.

Cou. Well, however, I defire one Thing of you for your own fatisfaction, and mine too.

Lady. What is that ?

Cou. Why, let you and I go to fome eminent Phyfician, and fhow him the Recipe, and tell him the plain Matter of Fact; and let us hear his Opinion. Lady. We will go to Dr. _____ then.

Cou. With all my Heart.

ACCORDING to this Agreement they went to the Doctor, and he read the Particulars : He affured her, that he who gave her the Medicine to caufe Abortion, or prevent Conception, or to do a breeding Woman the leaft harm, deceived her; for that there was nothing in it but what a Woman with Child might freely take without the leaft Danger, and that nothing in the Medicine could do her the leaft Injury.

THIS gave the Lady her felf full fatiffaction, and made her very eafy: But fhe did not fee any room to bring this Part about with Mr. ——— her Husband, for that his Refent-ments were run high, and he grew warm at but the mention of the Thing; but fhe thought to tell L 3 tell him all this Story would but lay the Weight heavy upon her felf, fo fhe refolved to let it reft where it was, and wait the Iffue. And thus fhe wore out, as I faid, above two Years, tho with many hard Struggles and frequent Reproaches from her Husband, who was extreamly foured in his Temper by it, and did not flick to ufe her hardly enough about it upon all Occafions.

AT laft, to her particular fatisfaction, and his too, fhe proved with Child indeed, and that put an End to it all, for it removed the grand fufpicion, that fhe had poifoned or vitiated her Womb, fo that fhe could never conceive, and fhe ftill wifhed to have no Children, which indeed was the reverfe of her Cafe now; for fhe earneftly defired to be with Child, to put an End to all thefe Diffatisfactions. And thus ended this melancholy Affair.

FROM the whole Story, uleful Obfervations may be made very appointe to the Cafe before us. The wretched Humour of defiring not to be with Child, appears here in its proper light. How direct a Crime it is in its felf, is proved from the Office of Matrimony, which is Gon's holy Ordinance, appointed and inftituted by himfelf for the regular Propagation of the Species.

THE Argument against taking Medicines to prevent or deftroy Conception, which is the fame thing, is very just; fince, in the Nature of the Crime, it is as much a real Murther to deftroy the one as the other, as it is as much a real Murther to kill a little Boy as a full grown Man.

WHAT then are those People doing who talk of Phyfick to prevent their being with Child? It is, in fhort, neither more or lefs than a ftated, premeditated Murther; and let those that act fo confider of it, and come off of the Charge of Murtherers, if they can.

I could illustrate this by feveral other Stories or Relations of Matters of Fact, but I have not room to fpare on that Head. A certain Lady of noted Fame, is, I hear, making her felf more than ordinarily remarkable upon this very Principle, and affures the World, that the not only thinks it lawful to with the fhould have no Children, but to use all possible Means to prevent it; nay, fhe declares, as I am told, that fhe not only thinks it no Injury to any Body; but that it is far from being a Crime to deftroy the Birth or Embrio conceived within her, and that fhe has frequently done it.

HERE she learnedly enlarges in her Discourse, (for fhe is open enough upon that Subject) and difputes upon the Question, Whether it is a Sin to kill any Thing which has not a Soul? And when fhe thinks fhe has conquered the Difficulty, and has proved that every Creature may be deftroyed by Man, that has not in it a human Soul, the brings it down to the Cafe in hand: She fays, that it is no Offence to Gop or Man, to deftroy a Cat, or Dog, or any other fuch Creature, tho' it be not for Food, and tho' it be done arbitrarily, without any provocation given or hurt done by the Creature, but even if it were in fport.

THEN, I fay, bringing it down to the pre-fent Affair of a Child conceived in a Womb, fhe begins a new Enquiry, which the learned Anatomists, and the most skilled in the Pro-L 4 ductions ductions and Operations of Nature, have not yet been able to determine, namely, When, and after what particular Time, and in what Manner the Embrio or Body of a Child conceived in a Woman, receives the addition of a Soul? How the Union is made? And when the Infufion of Soul is appointed.

THIS fhe determines to be at a certain Time, and defcants critically upon it, in order to eftablifh the curfed Hypothefis of her own Invention, viz. that all the while the Fatus is forming, and the Embrio or Conception is proceeding, even to the Moment that the Soul is infufed, fo long it is abfolutely not in her Power only, but in her Right, to kill or keep alive, fave, or deftroy the Thing fhe goes with, the won't call it Child; and that therefore till then fhe refolves to use all manner of Art; nay, she does not confine her felf to human Art, to the help of Drugs and Phyficians, whether Aftringents, Diureticks, Emeticks, or of whatever kind, nay, even to Purgations, Potions, Poifons, or any thing that Apothecaries or Druggifts can fupply : But the goes farther, and joins with the Poet, nay, fhe has the Words at her Tongue's End from that famed Author, tho' in another Cafe,

Acheronta Movebo.

IN Ergliff fhe tells them plainly, if Drugs and Medicine fail her, fhe will call to the Devil for help, and if Spells, Filtres, Charms, Witchcraft, or all the Powers of Hell would bring it about for her, fhe would not foruple to make ufe of them for her refolved Purpofe; highly approving of that known Spaniff Proverb, fuited to the ordinary Occafions only of [ 153 ] of using dangerous Medicines from Quacks, and unpractifed, unacquainted Hands; I fay, the Spanish Proverb, (viz.)

Let the Cure be wrought, though the Devil be the Doctor.

Now this is an Example flagrant, and, as I faid, notorious, her Practice comes up to the heighth of it, or elfe fhe is lefs a Devil than fhe pretends to be, and boafts of being much wickeder than fhe really is; in which Cafe, I muft own my felf to be of the Opinion of the learned and witty Dr. Fuller, viz. that he that openly profeffes to be wickeder than he really is in fact, is really and effentially, whether in fact or no, as wicked as he profeffes to be.'

BUT, not to difpute with this She-murtherer, for it is not my Bufiness here to decide either of her Queftions, Either when the Soul is infufed into the Embrio in the Womb of her that is with Child, or whether it is lefs criminal to deftroy one than the other; I fay, not to difpute with a Murtherer, I am to go on with the Relation, viz. that the professes the lawfulness, and owns fhe practifes it, though not the last fo freely as the first. Let us enter a little into the Circumstances and Character of a Woman that does thus; that the Picture being fet in a fair View, those whose Blood is less inflamed with the Rage of Hell, may look a little before them, and confider, before they act the inhuman Part with themfelves, what they are doing or going to do, and what they may reafonably suppose to be the Confequence.

FIRST,

FIRST, Thefe desperate Medicines which are usually taken for fuch Purposes, what are they, and of what Kind? Have they an effect only upon that particular Part which they are pointed at? Are they able to confine the Operation of the Phyfick to the very mathematical Point of Situation? And fhall the Poifons extend no farther? Are they fure they fhall affect no Part but the Conception? Shall the Phyfick, like a Meffenger fent upon a particular Bufinefs, knock at no Doors in his Journey going or coming? Shall it affect no other Part? Shall the murthering Dart kill just the Part, strike a mortal Wound just there, and no where elfe, and innocently paffing by every other Place, do no more than just the Errand 'tis fent about.

WHAT if you fhould miftake, and the Application being mifplaced, the Arrow fhould mifs the Child, and kill the Mother? I have heard of a certain Quack in this Town, and knew him too, who profefs'd to prefcribe in this very Cafe; the Villain, for he muft be no other, had his Preparations of the feveral following particular Kinds, are for the feveral following Operations, and accordingly, gave the Directions to his Patients, as follows:

'N^.1. IF the Party or Woman be young with 'Child, not above three Months gone, and would 'mifcarry without Noife, and without Danger, 'take the Bolus herewith fent in the Evening an Hour before fhe goes to Bed, and thirty 'drops of the Tincture in the Bottle, just when 'fhe goes to Bed, repeating the Drops in the Morning before fhe eats; take the Drops in 'Rhenifh Wine, right Mofelle.

Nº. 2.

[ 155 ]

• N°. 2. IF fhe is quick with Child, and defires to mifcarry, take two Papers of the Powder here enclosed, Night and Morning, infufed in the Draught contained in the Bottle _____; taking it twice, fhall bring away the Conception.

'N°. 3. IF the Party be a Man, and he would 'have the Child the Woman goes with preferved 'againft her Will, let her take the Decoction 'here directed every Morning for three Weeks, 'and one of the Pills every Night; but when 'her Travail approaches, leave off the De-'coction, and let her take three of the Pills, the 'Child thall certainly be brought into the 'World alive, though it may be fome danger to 'the Mother.

THAT was, in fhort, he would kill the Woman, and fave the Child.

THERE were likewife Recipe's, with thefe Directions: If the Party only fears the is with Child, but is not certain, take thefe Powders Night and Morning, as directed, her Fears thall be over in four times taking.

IF the Party is not with Child, and would not conceive, take one Paper of the Powders in a Glass of warm Ale, every Morning after the Man has been with her, and the shall be out of danger.

I need give no Vouchers for this Account; there are People ftill living, who fent feveral poor Servants to him, pretending this or that Part to be their Cafe, and craving his learned Advice, and fo have had his hellifh Preparations, and given him his Fee or Rate for them, and and fo brought them away, in order to have him profecuted and punifhed.

[ 156 ]

But I leave the Mountebank, my Bufinefs is with the unhappy Ladies, who venture upon thefe dark Doings, in purfuit of the wicked Defign against Child-bearing; they run great risques in taking fuch Medicines; and 'tis great odds but that, first or last, they Ruin themselves by it. This Wretch of a Quack could, it feems, kill the Child or the Mother, which he pleafed; and you may, by a wrong Application, do both, kill the Child and the Mother both at once, and fo be a Self-murther, and a murtherer of your own Offspring both together; at least, 'tis an Article worth a little of the Lady's Thought when the goes about fuch a doubtful Piece of Work as this is; and if fhe fhould come to a Mischance, she would perhaps support the Reproach of it but very hardly; I mean, if fhe has any referves of Confcience and Reflection about her.

AGAIN: If it does not reach her Life, it goes another length without Remedy; fhe poitons her Body, fhe locks up Nature, fhe damms her felf to a certain and eternal Barrennefs for the Time to come; and as boldly, as fhe fays, fhe defires it to be fo, does not value it, and the like. She might confider, that it may fo happen that fhe may alter her Mind; nay, fhe may come to the Extream the other Way, and I have more than once, nay, very often, known it to be fo.

NOR is it improbable but that her Mind may be the moft likely to alter, when fhe knows fhe is brought to an impoflibility of altering it. Nothing is more frequent than for a Woman to reject what fhe may have, when fhe may have have it, and long and wifh for it when it can be no more obtained; the defires (of that Kind efpecially) are generally very impetuous; the Stream runs rapid and furious; and if fhe fhould come to be as defirous of Children as fhe may be now to deftroy them, 'tis odds but the violence of that Defire turns a Diftemper, and that to fuch a degree, as may be very troublefome as well as dangerous, and often proves mortal.

SOLOMON fays of the Grave and the Barren Womb, that they are never fatisfied; they never fay, it is enough: And what an Object will fuch a Woman be, and, under fuch Reflections, either by her felf, or by others, that torments her felf, and perhaps fome Body elfe, to be with Child, after fhe has already dried up the Juices, ftagnated the Blood, and fettered Nature, foas that no fuch Powers are left by which the Operation can be performed.

THE Lady I mention indeed, laughs at all thefe Things, and bids defiance even to GOD and Nature, contemns Confequences, and fcorns the fuppofition of a change of Mind, and a return of Defires; from whence I infer only this, viz. That fhe knows little what Nature means; what the various Extreams are Nature is fubject to; and in that abundant Ignorance fhe muft go on till fhe comes to be her own Punifhment, her own Tormentor, and to expofe her felf as much in one Extream as fhe does now in another; and if that fhould never happen, it will be only faid of her as it has been of many a Criminal of a worfe kind, viz. that fhe died impenitent.

BUT to go back from the Perfon to the Thing, for Examples import nothing, but as they they confirm the fubject, the Story may pleafe, but'tis the improvement of the Story, that fixes the Truth of the Argument, which it is brought to fupport: This horrid Practice, I mean, of applying to extraordinary Means to deftroy the Conception, has yet many Things to be faid to it.

As it poifons the Body, and, as I have faid, locks up Nature; fo let me remind the Ladies whofe Vanity prompts them to the Practice, efpecially too if they have any fuch thing as Religion about them, that 'tis a kind of curfing their own Bodies, 'tis Blafting themfelves; and as they take upon them to do it themfelves, how juft would it be, if Heaven,taking them at their Words, lays it home farther than they would wifh or intend it ? And that feeing they defire to bear no Fruit, Heaven fhould fay, in the Words of our Saviour to the Fig-Tree, No Fruit grow on thee benceforward for ever.

It muft be a Temper unufually hardened, that could bear fuch a Blaft from above without fome Horror: Let any Lady, I mean Chriftian Lady, for I direct my Speech now to fuch, though they may be ignorantly or rafhly pufhed on by the Folly of their Circumftances; I fay, let any Chriftian Lady tell me, if fhe fhould hear thofe Words really and audibly pronounced from Heaven to her, could fhe look up with fatisfaction, take it for a Bleffing, and fay, Amen? I cannot but hope we have very few of the moft audacious Atheifts among us, could go the length.

AND now I have accidentally named that Word look up, that is to fay, look up to Heaver, for fo I understand it, however, that Lan[ 159 ]

guage is pretty much unknown among us, I could almost venture to put in a grave Word to the Ladies that marry, and would have no Children; those preposterous, not unthinking but ill-thinking Ladies, I fay, that will marry but would have no Children; as 'tis most certain that they expose their Modesty in it, fo they likewise expose their Christianity; and let me ask them but this short Question; Pray, Madam, what Religion are you of ?

By asking after the Lady's Religion, I do not mean whether Protestant or Papist, Church of England or Presbyterian, but whether Chrifian or Pagan, a worshipper of GOD, or of the Devil; of one GOD or a thousand Gods, nominal Gods; in a word, have you, Madam, any such Thing as Religion about you? It is indeed a Question, which, in a Christian Nation, should pass for an Affront; but when People act counter to Principle, and counter to Profession, they open the Door to the Question, nay, they make it rational and necessary.

BUT I will fuppofe the Lady fhall anfwer, I am a Christian, and a Protestant.

WELL, Madam, then you will allow me to fay, that fometimes you pray to GOD, or, to give it you in the Language of the Moderns, you fay your Prayers.

YES I do, fays the Lady; and what then?

WHY then, Madam, you suppose, or grant, that God can hear you, when you say your Prayers?

 $\mathbf{Y}_{ES}$ , I know he can, fays the ; what then ?

WHY then, Madam, you believe he will anfwer your Prayers too, and grant your Requefts alfo, becaufe he has promifed he will, if what we ask be agreeable to his Will, 1 John v. 14.

WELL

160 ]

WELL — ! And what do you gather from all this ? fays the Lady.

GATHER, Madam; why, I gather this, that as you are a married Woman, and would fain be Barren, and have no Children, never give your felf any trouble about Phyfick, and taking Drugs to prevent Conception; but kneel down, and very humbly and fincerely pray to GoD to curfe you with Barrennefs: Tell him, that you are one of his Creatures who HE, at H1s firft Bleffing Mankind, had allowed to encreafe and multiply, but that you defire no fhare in that Bleffing; and fo beg, that he would be gracioufly pleafed to blaft the Child you go with, if you are with Child, and fhut up your Womb, if you are not; for that you defire none of his Bleffings of that Kind.

IF the Lady I have been fpeaking to above, is, as fhe fays, a Chriftian, and prays to GOD at any time; if fhe knows and believes that GOD knows her Thoughts, can hear her Prayers, and will grant her Requeft, if it be according to bis Will; let her, I fay, if fhe can do thus without trembling at the Thoughts of it, go to her Knees, and pray devoutly that fhe may have no more Children, or no Children.

IF GOD is fo merciful to her, as to deny the vile, wicked Requeft, fhe ought to be very thankful that her Prayers are not heard; but if it fhould be granted, fhe muft and ought, with the fame humility, to acknowledge 'tis righteous and juft, and that the Judgment, for fuch it muft be, is of her own procuring.

THIS would be putting the Matter to a flort Iffue; and we flould fee whether the Ladies are ferious enough to carry their Folly to fuch a highth, or no.

BUT there is another Length that fome of these Ladies go, and this indeed carries Things beyond all the fuggestions of my Title; instead of Matrimonial Whoredom it should be called Matrimonial Witchcraft; the Truth is, I dare not enter into Examples here, no not where I may have fome Reafon to fufpect, nay, to believe, nay, where I have been informed it has been fo, becaufe I would not point out any One as Criminal to fuch a degree, unlefs the Fact was as plain, as admitted a Conviction in the way of Juffice.

NAY, when my Friend M affured me, that his next Neighbour Mrs.  $G_{----}$  boafted in Publick, that fhe intended to do fo and fo, nay, though I heard her own fhe had done it; yet, as the Witches in New England went fo far in acknowledging their own Guilt, and their familiarity with the Devil, that at last they could not obtain to be Hanged, no not upon their own Evidence, or be believed upon their own Confession, fo I cannot perfuade my felf to tell you, that I believe Madam W_____ really guilty of fo much Wickednefs as fhe pretends to, or that fhe deferves the Gallows fo eminently as the boafts the does.

To go to the Devil to prevent Go D's Blef-fing! I must confess 'tis very audacious; and if Providence takes no particular Notice of fuch, and gives no publick Teftimony of Refentment, it would feem very ftrange to me, I fhould only fay, there is the more behind, the Wretches have the more to expect; let 'em think of it.

SOME will tell us, there is nothing in it; that really the Devil has no Power to do any thing in it, one way or other, and that all the Notions tions of Charm, Spell, Filtres, Magick Knots, E. are Jugglers Tricks, and have nothing in them; they reach the Fancy indeed, and affect the Imaginations of weak, vapourifh People; but that really thefe Things are out of the Devil's way, and that he knows nothing of the Matter, and can do nothing to help or hinder; that the Devil has no skill in Midwifry, and can neither tell a Woman when fhe is with Child, or when fhe is not; he can no more make her Mifcarry, unlefs it is by frighting her, than he can make her Conceive; that 'tis all a Cheat, contrived by a Gang of artful Knaves to get Money, pick Pockets, and deceive the ignorant Women.

How far this may be true or not, I leave to those that are well enough acquainted with the Devil, to know how, and to what Degree, he can or does act in these Cases. But the Crime of those People that go to him for his help, is the same, whether he can affist them or not; with the addition of Fool, if he cannot.

I might ask here, whether this Practice is confiftent with Honefty? As for Religion, Modefty and Reputation, that I think I have mentioned to fatisfaction; but as to the Honefty of it, there is fomething more to be faid: Firft, as I faid above; to a Husband it cannot be honeft by any means: We'll fuppofe the Man to be an honeft, fober and religious Husband; he married, no doubt, as Men of honeft Principles, and of the utmost Modefty, do, that is, in view of raising up a Family as well to inherit his Eftate, fuppofing that Part to be fufficient, as to preferve a Name and a Posterity, as other Gentlemen do.

FIND

FINDING his Wife barren, at first he prays heartily, as he may do lawfully, that he may be fruitful, and have Children. Mark the Harmony ! he prays for having Children, and she prays against any; he looks up to Heaven to entreat he may be blefs'd and encreas'd; she goes to the Devil for help, that his Prayers may be frustrated; he marries in expectation of Children; she marries him, but endeavours by all the helliss, diabolick Arts and Tricks she can to prevent it, and disappoint him. And where is the Honesty of all this, pray? At least, how is she just to her Husband?

IF fhe had told him of it before Marriage, it had altered the Cafe; or if fhe had acquainted him with it when fhe did thus, and he had confented, it had been another Thing; at leaft, as it regarded him, there had been no Injuftice in it, becaufe of his voluntary affent to it: But then it is foolifh to fuggeft, for no Man in his Senfes would ever agree to fuch a ridiculous Propofal, and therefore 'tis highly difhoneft and unjuft to her Husband.

IT is likewife an immoral Action in it felf, as it is inconfiftent with the Reafon and Nature of Things, and clafhes with feveral ftated Rules of Life, which are of divine Inftitution. But that is not, as I faid before, the proper View of this Difcourfe.

As it is not honeft or moral, fo, on the otherhand, it feems not to confift with the Character of a modeft and virtuous Woman : If a Whore acted thus, I fhould not wonder at all; for her Bufinefs is to conceal her immodeft, criminal Converfation, and, if possible, to hide her Shame; for her to apply to Physicians and Apothecaries, take Drops and Draughts, and M 2 Physicians Phyfick her felf from Day to Day, I fhould make no Wonder at it; 'tis what her Circumftances make not rational only but neceffary.

BUT for an honeft Woman! openly and lawe fully married! whofe Husband is publickly known; who lives with, and acknowledges her to be his Wife, and Beds with her, as we call it, every Night; for this Woman to defire to be Barren, much more to endeavour to prevent, or, which is the fame Thing, to deftroy the Conception, blaft the Fruit of her own Body, poifon her Blood, and ruin her Conftitution, that fhe may have no Children! This can have nothing in it but Witchcraft and the Devil; 'tis fcandalous to the laft Degree; 'tis feeking the Man meerly as fuch, meerly for the frailer Part, as my Lord Rochefter calls it, and that brings it down to my Subject, (viz.) the Lewdnefs of it, which entitles it, in my Opinion, to that I call Matrimonial Whoredom.

THEY may gild it over with what Pretences they will; they may use their Female Rhetorick to set it off, and to cover it; such as sear of the Dangers and Pains of a hard Travail, weakness of Constitution, hereditary Miscarriages, and such like. But those Things are all answered with a Question, Why then, Madam, did you marry? Seeing all this was known before, they were as folid Reasons for not marrying, as they can be now for not breeding. But the Lady, as above, would venture all to have the use of the Man; and as for her Reasons why she would have no Children, she must account for them another Way.

HAD the Lady been with Child, and had a angerous Travail; had the been frequently with with Child, but always fubject to Abortions, or conftant and dangerous Mifcarriages; had fhe received any hurt in the Delivery of her former Children, which threatned Dangers if fhe came again; or had feveral other Circumftances a tended her, lefs proper to mention than thole; had fhe been abufed by Midwives, or weaken'd by Diftempers or Difafters, this would alter the Cafe.

But the Circumstance I infift upon is, when the Woman marries, takes a Man to Bed to her, with all the Circumstances that are to be underftood, without obliging us to express them; lives with him, and lies with him every Night, and yet profess to defire the may have no Children: These are the Circumstances I infift upon, the Aggravations of which admit no abatement, and for which I do not know one modest Word of Excuse can be faid. This is what I call Conjugal Lewdness, nor can I fee any thing elfe in it; 'twas the plain End of her marrying; 'tis in vain to call it by other Names, and cover it with other Excuses; 'tis nothing but Whoring under the shelter or cover of the Law, we may paint it out, and dress it up as we will.

藏滚滚

M 3

CHAP.

[ 166 ]

CHAP. VI.

Of being Over-rul'd by Perfwafion, Intereft, Influence of Friends, Force, and the like, to take the Perfon they have no Love for, and forfake the Perfon they really lov'd.

H E Subject of this Chapter is very particular, and the Effects of it fometimes very difinal; one would think it was hardly to be named among Chriftians, that in a Country where we pretend fo much to perfonal, as well as national Liberty, any fuch Violences could be offered, or at least be fuffered.

As Matrimony fhould be the Effect of a free and previous Choice in the Perfons marrying, fo the breaking in by Violence upon the Choice and Affection of the Parties, I take to be the worft kind of Rape; whether the Violence be the Violence of Perfwafion or of Authority, I mean, fuch as that of Paternal Authority, or otherwife; for as to legal Authority, there is nothing of that can interpofe in it; the Laws leave it where it ought to be left, and the Laws of Matrimony, in particular, leave it all upon the Choice [ 167 ]

Choice of the Perfon, and in the Power of their Will; and therefore, as by the Office of Matrimony appears, it does not fay to the Perfon, Thou fhalt take this Man, or thou fhalt take this Woman, but Wilt thou take this Man, and Wilt thou take this Woman? and unlefs the Perfon fays, I WILL, which is a Declaration of free Confent, and indeed ftrongly implies a free Choice, there can be no Matrimony.

HENCE I might enter into a long Difcourfe of the Juffice of young People on either Side, refifting the Perfwafions, nay, indeed the Commands of thofe who otherwife they ought to obey, in a Cafe of this moment. I fhould be very loth to fay any thing here to encourage Breach of Duty in Children to Parents; but as in this Cafe the Command feems exorbitant, fo the Obedience feems to be more limited than in any other, and therefore I may go farther here than I would do in any of the Points of Subordination in other Cafes.

It is a Maxim in Law as well as in Reafon, there is no Duty in Obeying where there is no Authority to Command; or, if you will, thus: There is no Obligation to Obey where there is no Right to Command; the Parent has, no queftion, a right to Command, nay, to govern and over-rule the Child in all lawful Things: But if the Parent commands the Child to do an unlawful Action, the Child may decline it; for a Thing cannot be lawful and unlawful at the fame time.

It is evident in the Cafe before me, if the Parent commands his Child to marry fuch or fuch a Perfon, and the Child either cannot love the Perfon, or at the fame time declares he or fhe is engaged in Affection to another, the M 4 ComCommand of the Parent cannot be lawfully obeyed, becaufe it is unlawful for the Child to marry any Perfon he or fhe cannot love; nay, the very doing it is deftructive of Matrimony, and they mult either lie one way or other, or elfe they cannot obey it, for they cannot be married: For example,

A Father fays to his Son, I would have you marry fuch a young Lady.

OH! Sir, fays the Son, I beg of you don't defire of it me, fhe is a Woman that of all the Women in the World, I would not marry upon any Account whatever.

DON'T tell me you will not marry her, fays the Father, I have good Reafons for your having her.

BUT, Sir, fays the Son, I hope you won't infift upon it; for I can't do it.

WHAT do you mean? You can't do it, fays the Father angrily.

WHY, Sir, Jays the Son, I can't love her.

O, well; you must venture that, fays the Father, marry her first, and you'll love her afterwards.

INDEED, I can't marry upon that Foot Sir, fays the Son, but refpectfully, it would be a Sin to marry a Woman I can't love.

I tell you,  $\int ays$  the Father, I have fingled her out for you, and I expect you should have her.

I am forry, Sir, you fhould choofe a Wife for me, fays the Son, and never let me know it.

I think 'tis your Duty to fubmit, fays the Father, as long as I think fhe is a fuitable Match for you, and for the Family.

BUT,

[ 169 ]

But, Sir, fays the Son, 'tis impossible: I can never be married to her; no Clergyman dares marry me to her.

WHAT d'ye mean by that? Says his Father.

WHY, Sir, fays the Son, either I must Lie and be Forsworn, or he can't marry me, and I hope you would not defire me either to Lie, or to be Perjured.

Don'T tell me of Lying and Perjury, fays the paffionate Father, I don't enquire into your impertinent Cavils, I tell you, fhe will make a very good Wife for you, and, I fay, you fhall have her.

WELL, Sir, fays the Son, if you can make any Minister marry me to her.

WHAT is it you mean, fays the Father, to offer fuch Stuff to me? If you don't take her, it fhall be worfe for you; I tell you, you. thall have her.

WHY, Sir, fays the Son, when he asks me, if I will take her? I may anfwer, I Will: But when he comes to fay, Wilt thou love her? I muft fay, I Will not; I muft lie, if I fhould fay, I Will; and if he can marry me fo, let him.

I don't make a Jeft of it Son, fays the Father, I expect you go and wait upon her, for I will have you marry her, I tell you.

THUS the Father laid it upon him hard; he put it off with this a great while, that he could not love her; but the Father infifted upon it, and threatened to difinherit him; and fo he wickedly complied, married the Woman he hated, and forfook a young Lady that loved him, and that he was in love with; and he was unhappy, and curfed his Marriage to his dying Day; and fo was the Woman he inarried alfo.

[ 170 ]

alfo. Indeed, he did not go fo far as the Son did in the Example I gave you before; he did not marry them both, but he was very unhappy.

 $T_{HE}$  Limits of a Parent's Authority, in this Cafe of Matrimony, either with Son or Daughter, I think, ftands thus: The Negative, I think, is theirs, effectially with a Daughter; but, I think, the Positive is the Childrens.

IF the Child looks Retrograde, and would throw her felf away upon a Scoundrel, upon her Father's Coachman, or Book-keeper, or upon any thing unworthy of the Family and Fortune of the Lady, much more if the Perfon fhe inclines to marry is fcandalous, a Man of Vice, a Man of an ill Character, a Drunkard, a Gamefter, a Rake, or what elfe is to be called fcandalous, the Father, or Mother, or next Parent or Guardian may, I believe with Juffice, interpofe their Authority, and may command her not to take fuch or fuch a Perfon, the Father may put the Negative upon her; nor is it fufficient for her to fay, fhe loves the Man, or is in love with the Man.

But when the fame Father or Parent comes and directs her the faid Daughter, and fays politively, you fhall marry fuch or fuch a Man whether you love him or not; there, I think, the Cafe differs extreamly; and the young Lady telling them, fhe does not like the Man, that fhe cannot love him, and won't marry him for that Reafon, is a juftifiable Reafon, and the ought not to be forced: Or, if fhe fays, that fhe is in love with another, and that other is not yet difcovered, 'tis neverthelefs a fufficient Reafon, and fhe ought_mot to be forced; nor can the Command of a Father or Mother, bind her to marry marry the Man fhe cannot love, becaufe it would be an unlawful Action, unjust and injurious both to the Man and to her felf; and no Command of a Parent can be obliging upon her, to do an unlawful or unjust Action.

THE Parent therefore may command her not to marry this or that Perfon, but may not command her to marry any particular Perfon, who fhe declares her felf not to love; for this would be to command her to lie, and be forfworn, in the express Terms of the Marriage Contract.

AGAIN; it were to be wifhed, that every one that marries before they fix their Affection fincerely upon the Perfon they are to have, would confider what I just mentioned above, (viz.) the Wrong they do to the Perfon they take; fuppofe it be the Woman, who, at the Book, they promife upon Oath to love, and yet afterwards perhaps, tell them to their Faces, they never loved them at all; This is an irretrievable Injury to the Perfon, who perhaps was, as it were, fnatched out of the Arms of those that did love her, and of another that would have loved her, and who perhaps fhe loved alfo, and, perfuaded or over-ruled by Parents, to take one who pretended as much to love as any one, but only took her for her Money, and venturing upon those Pretensions, fhe or he is now deceived and difappointed, the Wrong is irreparable; the Lady that might, if he had let her alone, been made happy, is abufed, is made miferable, is injured in the groffeft manner, and he had much better have ravished her, and been hanged, as he deferved, I mean better for her; then she had been free again, and though the had been abufed, the Injury jury had been at an End; but here fhe is abused daily, the Crime is renewed, and the is made unhappy to the End of her Life.

172 7

THIS marrying without Affection, or contrary to Inclination, has a variety of complicated Mifchiefs attending it, and efpecially confidering that, upon the leaft difagreeablenefs between the Perfons married, former Objects, and former Thoughts revive in the Mind; they are always comparing their Condition with what it might have been, with what others are, and with what, at leaft, they fancy others are; ever repining at what is, ever withing what can never be. Every thing they have is difagreeable and unpleafant; they look on their Life as a Slave at Algier looks upon his Chains, they fancy themfelves as Perfons only bought and fold, as Perfons committed by Warrant, and made Prifoners for Life.

THE State they are in is imbittered by every Circumftance, and every Circumftance imbittered by the want of Affection, the Thing is bad in it felf, and want of Affection makes every Part of it worfe.

NOR is it probable that fuch a Marriage fhould iffue otherwife; I had almost faid it is not possible: But the Nature of the thing directs it, and the difagreeableness can hardly fail to happen, because there is not only no Fund of Affection to build upon, but a kind of a pre-ingaged Aversion, which is certain to assist and to render every thing worse, rather than better.

I could give a long Hiftory of a Family, within the compass of my own Observation, where both the Man and the Woman were thus ftated; that is to fay, brought together by the AllureAllurement of good Circumftances, and the over-ruling Directions of their immediate Governors and Friends; when, on both Sides, their Choice and Affections were guided, at leaft againft the refpective Object, if not to other Objects; and though perhaps those other Objects were not indeed fo fuitable as to Birth and Fortune, for this Breach happened in a Family of fome Figure, and among that we call Quality, yet the Choice they had made for themfelves had certainly been more fuitable to them as Man and Woman, and had tended infinitely more to their fatisfaction.

IT feems they had had frequently Rufflings and Rencounters, as they might be called, upon the Subject before, and as they went upon an old Mob Rule, That few Words among Friends were beft, and those very spiteful, fo if they did fall out, it was short, but bitter, and this Battle, which I happened to have the following Account of, and which was one of the worst they ever had, may pass for a Specimen:

It happened to be at Supper, and the Gentleman had drank to his Lady with a kind of a fnear and a bow, and My Service to your Ladyfbip (for fhe was a Lady). Ay, ay, fays fhe, Service! Service! repeating the Word two or three times; it's well where there is no Love there can be a little good Manners; and fo the Battle was begun.

Knight. Love! Love! nay, the D...l take your Ladyship, you know l never lov'd you in my life.

Lady. Nay, Iwas pretty even with Sir Thomas, for I hated you heartily from the first Hour I faw you.

1 night.

[ 174 ]

t

Knight. Equally yoked ! Madam, that's true; equally yoked ! *

Lady. Ay, ay! a Yoke indeed, and two Beafts to draw in it.

Knight. Good Words, Madam, why didn't you fay Whore and Rogue?

Lady. And if I had, it had been but plain English.

Knight. And plain Truth, you mean, I sup-

Lady. Nay, what was Sir Thomas, to marry a Woman that he could fwear he never loved in his life?

Knight. And pray, what was my Lady, to go to Bed to a Man she hated most heartily?

Lady. The more innocent of the two, for I was never married.

Knight. Not married! Why, what have you been doing then all this while? What's the English of that, Madam?

Lady. The English of what? I could make it fpeak English if I would; but good Manners, rather than regard to the Person, ftops my Mouth.

Knight. Nay, let it come out, Madam; there can be no lois of good Language between you and I: I have lain with a Woman I did not love, and you have lain with a Man thefe four Years, and were never married. What will my Lady call her felf next?

Lady. Not a Whore for all that; fo I have the better of Sir Thomas ftill.

Knight. What can it be then? No Magick, I doubt, will bring your Ladyship off.

* To that be added an Oath or two.

Laly.

[ 175 ]

Lady. Yes, yes; I fhall bring my felf off fairly; I fay, 'twas no Marriage, 'twas all Force, a Rape upon Innocence and Virtue.

Knight. A Rape! Didn't you go to Church and repeat the Words, and fay, I Will?

Lady. Go to Church, No, no; you may fay indeed, I was dragged to Church, I did not go; I tell you, 'twas no Matrimony, tho' 'twas a Marriage; I was ravifhed, and nothing elfe.

Knight. But who forced you, and who dragged you to Church; I'm fure I went to Church with as ill a Will as you.

Lady. I don't know what you did; but I went like a Bear haul'd to a Stake, I know.

Knight. And I think you have been a Bear ever fince, I fuppofe that made you fo.

Lady. Whether I have been a Bear or no, I have been baited like a Bear; that's true enough.

Knight. Well, your Ladyfhip's even with me there indeed, you give me the Dog for the Bear.

Lady. You must drink as you brew, Sir Thomas; you know that 'twas you began it.

Knight. It is just upon me indeed; I broke my Faith and Honour with the Angel I lov'd; for the curs'd Thirst of Money: My Father knew not what he did, when he perfwaded me to it: But I must marry a Fortune !

Lady. Yes, and I muft be tickled with a Feather, and wheedled up with being a Lady. If I had taken the Man I loved, I had had that which few Ladies enjoy; I had had the Man that loved me, and he had had the Woman that loved him, and both been happy; and now, here's the Baronet and the Lady, as wretched as a Foot Soldier and his Trull.

Knight.

[ 176 ]

Knight. I faw nothing in you at first to make a Man happy.

Lady. And I defired no Happiness fo much, when I went to Church, as to have been delivered from you.

Knight. I was bewitched with the Money indeed, but never with the Lady, I affure you.

Lady. And my Mother was fond of the Knighthood indeed; I'm fure I was never fond of the Knight.

Knight. I might have had as much Money, it may be, fomewhere elfe.

Lady. And I might have made the Man I loved a Knight with my Money, whenever I pleas'd; but my Mother had her Failings.

Knight. If I had had lefs Money, I might have had a better Wife.

Lady. And I could never have had a worfe Husband.

Knight. Well, I'll find fome Way to put an End to it, I'll warrant you: At worft a Piftol and half an Ounce of Lead, will deliver me at once.

Lady. The fooner the better, Sir Thomas, Heaven keep you in the mind.

IN fhort, the Lady had the better of him, and put him in a Rage, and then he left her, and went out of the Room; but about the ufual time of going to Bed, they came a little to themfelves again, and were preparing to go to Bed, when a few Words rifing the Wind, it blew up into another Storm, and they fell out more furioufly than before.

SHE told him, the had had but two Children, and the thanked Gon they were both dead. - HE told her, he defired no more of the Breed.

SHE replied, fhe defired all the World to take notice, that if ever fhe was with Child again, it would be a Baftard, and none of his.

He turned round from her, and bad her turn her back to him.

SHE faid, with all her Heart, and did fo.

Now curfe your felf, faid he, if ever you turn your Face to me again.

SHE faid, fhe knew a better Way for it than that; fo fhe called her Maid, took her leave of him, and went to Bed by her felf.

THE next Day fhe took her Coach, and went to a Relation's Houfe, took fome Jewels with her, and fent for her Cloaths. And thus ended a Mother-Made Match on one hand, and a Money-Made match on the other hand; On both hands without Affection, and where they had been mutually pre-ingaged to other Objects: And what was all this, pray, but a Matrimonial Whoredom!

IT would take up too much of this Work, to give the fhort Hiftory of the remaining Life of thefe two paffionate married Enemies, for fuch they were. As they were People of good Fafhion and Figure, they might have quarrelled with fome referve to good Manners; but, on the contrary, fhe purfued him with all the fpite and rage of her Tongue that it was poffible for a Woman to invent; faid all the Bitter and difdainful Things of him that Ill-nature could infpire her with; fcorned all the Motions of Friends towards a Reconciliation to him, which at firft he was not averfe to; and, at laft, gave out, that he kept a Whore, and that fhe intended to fue him to a Divorce: IN return, after he found her oblinate, he put all the Contempt upon her he was able, and in all Company where he could possibly come at her; made Ballads and Songs of her; and, in a word, they took all possible Ways on both Sides to make it impossible they should ever come together again.

AFTER fome Time, he went abroad into France, when he did the fpitefulleft Thing that it was pollible for him to do, or that, I think, a Man could ever do by a Wife: Being, (as he had given out) at Paris, he caus'd a Rumour to be rais'd that he was very Sick, and a little after that he was Dead. This he carried fo far, that his Servants and Dependents, who he left at his Houfe, were all put into Mourning, and the Lady was firmly convinced that he was Dead; nay, he employed a fubtle, managing Fellow, to come to the Houfe where the Lady lodged, to give an Account of his Death, and that he was at the Funeral.

 $I_N$  a word, Things were carried fo far, that the Lady was courted by another Gentleman, and, at length, confented to be married; but all things being prepared for the Wedding; Settlements made, the very Day come, and her Friends about her, he fends a Meffenger to tell her, that he was coming to the Church to fee her married, that he would have remained in his Grave a little longer, but that he was refolved fhe fhould not have fo much Pleafure as that of one Day's Delufion; and that he would not do the Gentleman the Injury, of letting him ignorantly marry a She-Devil, as he had done.

THIS was managed fo wickedly, and with fuch a keennefs and feverity of Spight, that it almost [ 179 ] almost cost the Lady her Life; and it might have gone farther, for the Gentleman was affronted fo, that he demanded Satisfaction of him, and it went up to a Challenge; but fome Friends interposed, fo that they did not fight.

THE enraged Lady fell fick with Difdain; and the Fury that this Piece of Management put her in was fuch, that fhe continued languifhing near two Years, but then recovered. A great many Friends interposed, if possible, to reconcile them; but there was no room for that, it was gone too far.

Ar length they brought it to a Truce, tho' they could not bring it to a Peace; they brought them to an Agreement of Civility, viz. not to Infult or Affront one another any more; and this was all they could ever be brought to; nor was it eafy to bring them to that, fo exafperated were they on both Sides, fo irreconcileably provoked, efpecially the Woman.

THIS is one Example of a Marriage by force of Friends, and by motives of Avarice and Pride, where the Parties were pre-ingaged by their Affection to other Objects. I could give many Inftances in their degree equally unhappy, though perhaps not carried on to fuch an extravagant Length, but all ferve to convince us, how fatal it is for Men or Women to engage their Perfons one Way, and their Affections another.

CERTAINLY those People who have the least value for their own Ease, that expect any Felicity in a married Life, should think before they take this Leap in the Dark, I fay, they should think a little, how, in the Nature of the thing, they can expect Happines in a Woman they do not love; and in a Woman who they N 2 shall fhall be tied to live with while they Love another, and fhall be Night and Day wifhing their beloved Rachel were in their Arms inftead of the blear-eyed Leab, which they have taken in her Place.

BUT thus it is, and that too frequently to wonder at, that Men love the Perfon they do not marry, and marry the Perfon they cannot love.

Tell me, ye facred Powers, which Rule on high, If Love's a Heaven-born Passion, Tell me why, Do Mortals love, and Heaven so oft deny?

Unhappy Man ! by Laws unequal tye, Bound to poffefs the Object he would fly; And left to Love what he cannot enjoy.

CHAP.

[ 181 ]

CHAP. VII.

Of Marrying one Person, and at the fame time owning themselves to be in Love with another.

O Love and not to Marry, is Nature's Averfion; to Marry and not to Love, is Nature's Corruption; the firft is Hateful, the laft is really Criminal; and, as has been faid in its Place, it is, in fome Refpects, both Murther and Robbery; it makes a Man Felo de fe, with refpect to all the Comforts of his Life; and it makes him a Robber to his Wife, if fhe be a Woman that has the misfortune to Love him. And this I have fpoken to at large in the laft Chapter.

BUT to marry one Woman and love another, to marry one Man and be in love with another, this is yet worfe, tenfold worfe, if that be poffible ! 'tis, in its kind, a meer Piece of Witchcraft; it is a kind of civil, legal Adultery, nay, it makes the Man or Woman be committing Adultery in their Hearts every Day of their lives; and can I be wrong therefore to fay, that it may be very well called a Matrimonial Whoredom? if I may judge, it is one of the worft Kinds of it too. Ir is (first) a plain downright Crime in the beginning of it; if both the Man and the Woman are in it, they indeed cheat one another; first the Man thinks the Woman has the worst of it, and that he only cheats her; she fancies he has the worst of it, and that she cheats him; but, in short, 'tis a mutual Fraud, wherein both are Cheats and both Cheated, both Deceivers and both Deceived.

WHEN they come to the Book to marry, they mutually engage what was engaged before, like a Knave that borrows Money upon an Eftate which he had mortgaged already. Mark what a Complication of Crimes meet together in the Church; when they come up to the Altar, the Man plights her his Troth or Truth, that he will love her; when he knows he cannot do it, for that he loves another already before her.

THE Woman plights him her Troth, that the will love him, when, as the Lady juft now mentioned, told Sir Thomas —, the heartily, hated him from the first time the ever faw him. Here is mutual pledging the Troth to a Falfhood, which is, in thort, a premeditated Lye; like a cold Blood murther, 'tis intended to be done long before it is done. Here's alfo a ftated, calm, intended Perjury; a fwearing to do what they own they not only did not intend to do, but knew beforehand they could not do.

How many kinds of Difhonefty are here mixt together? Take it in the very firft Words of the Minifter, being as an Introduction to the Office of Matrimony; the Minifter adjures them, as they will answer it at the great and dreadful Day, Sc. when the Secrets of all Hearts shall be revealed, that if they know any any lawful Hindrance or Impediment why they fhould not be lawfully joyned together, they fhould then declare it, protefting against even the Validity of the Marriage, in case they fail.

I Require and charge you both, (as ye will answer at the dreadful Day of Judgment, when the Secrets of all Hearts shall be disclosed) that if either of you know any Impediment, why ye may not be lawfully joyned together in Matrimony, ye do now confess it. For be ye well assured, that so many as are coupled together otherwise than GOD's Word doth allow, are not joyned together by GOD, neither is their Matrimony lawful.

HEREUPON the Minister giving them time to answer, they are Silent; that is to fay, they declare no Impediment, which is a tacit declaring that they know of none; and yet, at the fame time, they know that in Confcience they have fettled their Love and Affection upon another Person; and the Man or Woman they now marry they cannot love, and ought not on that Account to marry, because they Promise what they know they shall not perform.

How many times also does the Secret come out afterwards, either unawares by themselves, or in delirious Fits, extremities of Distempers, Dreams, talking in the Sleep, and such other Ways, which prove however fatal to the Peace of the Family, yet unavoidable?

SUCH Perfons have great Reafon to be fure that they do not talk in their Sleep; for what the Mind bears fuch a Weight of upon it, which indeed it is not equal to, and is not possible to be fupported, though by a vigilant guarding the N 4. Tongue

184 ]

Tongue in the Day-time it fhall be kept in, yet how often will it break out in a Dream, and the Tongue betray it felf in its fleep?

How miferable is the Lady, frequently withing fhe was in the Arms of the Man fhe loves inftead of his Arms, who fhe is unhappily tyed to? Those ardent Wifnes prompting her Defires, fhe falls into a Slumber, and dreams that it is really fo, as fhe wifned it might be.

In the transports of her Imagination her waking Soul commands her Tongue, tho' the whole Organick Body be laid afleep; I fay, commands the Tongue to tell the dangerous Truth; fhe cries out, as in an Extafy, difcovers the Affection, and unhappily names the Man: The fair _____, the Toaft of the Town, the Beauty of the Beauties, had Admirers enough, was beloved to Madnefs and Diffraction by a throng of Admirers; at laft, for the fake of a Settlement, a little more than ordinary large, fhe quits the generous Ca____, the Lord of her Affections, the only Man in the World that had found the Way into her Heart, and to whom fhe had made innumerable Vows of Fidelity; I fay, quits him with the utmoft Rudenefs, and throws her felf at the Importunities and Commands of her avaritious Parents; I fay, throws her self into the Arms of a mean, a course, an unbred, half-taught Citizen, the Son of a rich overgrown Tradefinan, himfelf a Clown, only that he was a Boor of Fortune, can keep her fine, and caufe her to ride in a Coach: And what then?

SHE marries this Lump of unpolifhed, fimple Stuff, and they live Tolerably well for a Time, when one Night, in a Dream, fhe fancied Gied her felf in the Arms of her former Lover: pleas'd to a Rapture with what fhe had fo long Reafon to know the could never enjoy; the flies out even in her Dream to talking aloud; and not only to talk aloud, tho' fait afleep, but gives her Tongue a loofe into all the most dangerous Expretiions, that Love to the real Mafter of her Heart, and the utmost Contempt of her Jaylor, as fhe call'd him, meaning her Husband, could infpire her with: Nor was this all; for where will Misfortunes End! but in the highth of her Extafies and with a wicked, tho' but fancied Liberty, the calls her former Lover by his Name, and fo betrays her felf to her Husband, who hears himfelf accufed of the worft of Crimes, treated with the worft Contempt, and the greatest of Indignity put upon him, in Words at length, that can be thought of.

HER Husband was not at firft well awake, and fo, perhaps, was not let into the firft Part of it; nor was he prefently capable of underftanding what it all meant : But when he heard himfelf abufed in fo großs a manner, it put him into a Pafilon, and he replied rafhly to her, not thinking fhe had been afleep.

THIS replying to her, unhappily waked her, or, at leaft fo much, as to put a ftop to her talking aloud. Her Husband was prefently aware that his Wife was not awake, and vexed that he waked her; he lies ftill a little, till Sleep overcoming her, and the pleafing Ideas of her paft Loves fet her to talking again; when her Husband fubtilly managing himfelf, fpoke foftly at her Ear feveral Words agreeable to what fhe had faid, and brought her by that means (as is not impracticable) to anfwer feveral veral Queftions, and that in fuch a manner, as his Patience would bear it no longer.

THIS want of Temper was perhaps her Felicity fo far, as that fhe difcovered no more to him, though fhe had difcovered fo much already, as made an irreconcileable Breach between them: And first, as he was exasperated to the highest Degree by what he had heard, and waked her in a kind of a Passion; he asked her, what she had been dreaming of ?

SHE was not prefently come to her felf enough to recollect that it was all a Dream, fo that fhe made him no Anfwer for a while; but he repeating the Queftion, it foon came into her Thoughts, that fhe had dreamed fomething not fit to tell him of; fo fhe anfwered, fhe had dreamed of nothing; but he preffing her with the Queftion, fhe faid, Did fhe Dream ? why, if fhe did, fhe could not remember it. But what Confusion was fhe in, when fhe heard him tell her all the Particulars of her Dream, as fairly (almost) as if fhe had told them her felf ?

HOWEVER, fhe infifted that fhe knew nothing of it; that if fhe did dream, nothing was more frequent than for People to dream, and forget what they dreamt of, and fo might fhe; for that fhe knew nothing of it, at the fame time little thinking, nay, not fufpecting what had happened, (viz.) that fhe had been talking in her Sleep to her former Lover, with all poffible. Endearments, and had fpoken to him of her Hufband with the utmost Contempt; and fhe was confounded again to have her Husband repeat the very Words which fhe knew fhe had dreamed of.

Bur her Husband, whofe Paffion drove him beyond all Bounds, was not fatisfied with upbraiding. braiding her with the Particulars, but told her, that fhe had revealed them all her felf in her Sleep, and that fhe had faid fo and fo to him, upon his making little fhort Anfwers to her; and offering fome Queftions, and that, in fhort, fhe had betrayed her own Intrigues; from whence, he charged her openly with being Difhoneft, and with that Perfon alfo, and that before her Marriage to him as well as after, alledging that it appeared from her own Mouth. Nor was he prudent enough to conceal the Thing, and to let it lie as a private Feud between themfelves; but he told it openly and publickly among the Neighbours, and in almost all Company. But he had the worst of the Quarrel, though he had the better of the Fact, and that by his want of Conduct too.

THE Women's Wit, they fay, never fails them at a Pinch; 'tis eafy to imagine, that his Wife was in the utmoft Confusion at the difcovery of the Thing as it was, and efpecially while she was at a loss to know which way he came by his Information; for though the might eafily have supposed that the must have spoke aloud in her Sleep, yet as she had never known her felf to do so before, the did not think of it at first, but thought he had dealt with the Devil, and that he must have been with some Conjurer, who, as she had been told, could, by the help of the Devil, first make People dream of what they thought fit to inject into their Thoughts, and then tell of it to whom they thought fit.

THIS filled her with Indignation at her Hufband, for having, as fhe affirmed, bewitched her, and employed the Devil to betray her into Mifchief, and then betray that Mifchief; and fhe the refolved to give him a home Charge upon the Subject, and threaten to bring him upon the publick Stage for Inchantment and Sorcery.

BUT he put a better Invention into her Head; for unwarily he threw it out, that he heard her talk in her Sleep, and that he ask'd her fuch and fuch Queftions, by whifpering in her Ear, and that fhe anfwered fo and fo.

It immediately occurred to her, that if this was all he had for it, he was but one Affirmative, and no Witnefs in his own Cafe, and that her Negative might go as far as his Affirmative; that fhe had no more to do but to deny the Fact; that as to the Story of whifpering Queftions, and her anfwering them, the Pretence was a Novelty; and fo ftrange, that tho' it might be true, no Body would believe it, effectially if fhe firmly denied it.

UPON this fhe began with him; told him, fhe had perceived a good while his jealous and uneafy Humour, and that he had laid a great many Plots and Defigns to attack her Reputation, and all to find an Excufe to juftify his ill Ufage of her; but that her Conduct was fuch before the whole World, that no Body would believe him; and that now he had drefs'd up a Story between the Devil and him, to fix fomething upon her, if pofible; but that it was an evident Forgery of his own, with the help of his Witcheraft: And as the Story was it felf improbable, and next to impofible, fo fhe declared it was a Lie, and fhe defied the Devil and him, they might both do their worft.

• SHE gave him this fo Roundly, and with fuch Affurance, and told it alfo fo publickly, (as he did his Story) that the Man began to find fhe had

had the better of him; that People began to think her ill ufed; that he was only jealous of her, and that he had made this Story to blaft her Character, and to juftify his own Jealoufies; then as to the whifpering Story, every Body faid it looked like a Forgery indeed, and no Body believed a Word of it, for it feemed improbable; fo that the Husband began to talk lefs of the Matter than before, and was fenfible that fhe was too hard for him.

BUT the more he began to give out, the more furioufly fhe followed her Blow; for fhe not only told her Tale, as above, but fhe employed two or three Emiffaries to hand it about among the Ladies at the Tea Table, and among the Goffips; and the Man, in a word, got fuch an ill Name, that he was the Contempt of all his Neighbours.

Nor did she End here; but she added her former Defign to the latter : And, first, she feparated from him at home, or, as'tis ufually express'd, they parted Beds; in short, she told him, that it was reported there were Magicians and Fellows that dealt with the Devil, who, they faid, by the help of Evil Spirits, could caufe People to dream what and when they pleafed, and to talk in their Sheep, and that The understood her Husband had been conversing with fome of those cunning Men, as they call'd them, in order to make the Experiment upon her, by whifpering Things in her Ear while fhe was alleep, and fo making her Dream fo and fo, and then report, that fhe talked of those Things in her fleep, in order to expose her.

THAT therefore fhe would lie by her felf, for fhe would not lie in Bed with one that would bring the Devil into the Room, to ex-

pole

pofe and betray her; that fhe would have her Maid lie with her every Night, that fhe might have good Witnefs of her Conduct; but that fhe would not truft her felf any more to fleep with one that would betray her to the Devil, and then to all the World.

[ 190 ]

THIS fhe not only told her Husband, but told it to all her Friends and Tea Table Emiffaries; and the Story was fo plaufible in its kind, and was told fo much to her Advantage, that every Body juftify'd her Conduct, faid fhe was in the right, that fhe could do no lefs, and that no Woman in her Senfes would fleep in Bed with a Man who was able to do fuch Things as those; and that, in fhort; it was all one'as to fleep with the Devil.

THE Man had no Remedy but to deny the Charge, and to fay he never had any thing to do with the Devil, or with any fuch People as Conjurers, Magicians, or any fuch Sort of Folks, in his life. But all that went but a little Way, for who would not deny it if they were the most guilty of any in the World; but the Woman vouched that fo and fo he had faid, and fuch and fuch Things he had pretended; that he could not do fo without the help of the Devil; and that therefore it was not fafe for her, by any means, to truft her felf with him.

THUS the guilty Wife got the Victory over the innocent Husband, by the meer dexterity of her Wit, and the Conduct of her Allies, not forgetting the affiftance of a Publick Clamour; the Man himfelf, at the fame time, was not famed for overmuch Senfe or Conduct in this, or other Things, and therefore was the cafier inanaged by a keen witted Wife. But the Infegence from the whole Difcourfe comes in perfectly adapted adapted to the Argument which it is brought to confirm, (viz.) that to love one Perfon, be it Man or Woman, and then marry another, is neither honeft to the Perfon quitted, or to the Perfon married, but efpecially not to the laft, and more efpecially not honeft to the Perfon herfelf or himfelf; in a word, it is not an honeft Marriage; for the engaged Affection is a juft Impediment, and ought to have been declared and difcovered at the Book, upon the Declaration appointed to be made by the Minifter, as above, or before they came fo far.

As for the Succefs of fuch Marriages, the Bleffing attending them, and what Happinefs is to be expected from them, it feems to be laid open in Part, in the little Hiftory juft recited; but 'tis really visible to common Experience in almost every Age and Place in the World, I mean our English World.

WHAT Delight, what Complaifance can there be in that Matrimony, where the Heart did not go with the Hand? where the Marriage may be faid to be made from the Teeth outward, and no more? where the Love is fixed in one Place, and the Bed made in another? What is this but a fraudulent Contract, a Proteftation, with a defign to deceive, which, by the Way, is the very Effence of a LYE, and one of the worft Kind too?

WHAT Complaifance or Pleafure in their Enjoyments of any kind, between the unhappy Couple, and how can it be called a fair Marriage? Two fwear to love, and at the fame time both know they neither do or can; that they neither defire it or intend it, and they come to the Book, two Carcaffes without Souls, without affent or confent, but in meer fubjection to Circum Circumstances enter into a horrid Slavery; the Woman dragged by her old Grandmother, or her thundering and threatning Parent, becaufe the Mifer can give her a Portion, or not give it her, as he pleafes; can make her a Fortune or a Chamber-maid, a Lady or a Shoemaker's Wife. Under thefe Terrors and Obligations, fhe does as fhe's bid, and marries any Body they pleafe, let him have Wit, Senfe and Manners, or neither Wit, Senfe or Manners : As fhe is pre-engaged, and her Affections look quite another Way; the thoughts of this Marriage are her Abhorrence, her Aversion, and yet she marries him. What must we call this? Is it Matrimony ? No, no; it has nothing of Matrimony in it but the Form; 'tis all a Cheat; they lie to one another when they repeat the Words; and they both know they do fo, nay, they intend to do fo; as to the Confequence, you have it before, between Sir Thomas, and my Lady ____ But as to the Fact, 'tis horrid in its Nature; they are but two Victims, I cannot indeed, in one Senfe, call them Proftitutes; but they are proftituted by the governing Relations, brought together by the arbitrary Authority of those that have the Influence over them: Here, fays the old Father with a lordly Air to his Son, take this young Woman to Church, and marry her; perhaps the Debate has been between them before about loving her or not loving her, and the young Man has told him politively, he hates her, or that he can't love her. But 'tis all one, the old Man likes the Settlement, and tells him in fo many Words, that if he won't take her, his Brother fhall, and fhall have his Effate too.

I

[ 193 ]

I could name fo many Examples of this kind, and give you an Account of fo many Families ruined by it, that it would tire you in the reading. But give me leave to fingle out one for your Remark, which, though the Cafe was nearer home, you muft allow me to place at fome Diftance, that the particular Families may not be marked out and expofed. Suppofe then the Scene in France, not far from a great City, not the greateft but the greateft City but one in the Kingdom : A certain rich Merchant had two Sons, and though he had a very great Effate, it was of his own Purchafing, fo that there was no Entail upon it, and he was therefore at liberty to give it to which of his Sons he pleafed.

His eldeft Son was a young Gentleman of good Senfe, and a very agreeable Perfon, and his Father had beftowed fome Charge upon his Education, had given him learning and good Breeding, to qualify him, as he faid, for the Life of a Gentleman, and, as he ufually expreffed it, to make him know how to live agreeable to the Fortune he was able to give him; but withal, the Father kept him pretty much in Subjection; and the more, by making him always fenfible how much it was in his Power to make him a Gentleman or a Beggar, that is to fay, to give him an Eftate, and make him live like a Gentleman, or turn him loofe in the World to feek his Fortune.

PARTICULARLY, the Father was often repeating to his Son, how he expected that he fhould conform himfelf to his Measures in taking a Wife, and that if he did not, he would abfolutely difinherit him, and give his Estate to his younger Brother.

0

WHE-

WHETHER this abfolute Declaration of the Father, did not, in fome manner, influence the Son, fo as to create, with the averfion to the Tyranny of it, a kind of diflike to every thing the Father could propofe, I cannot fay; perhaps there might be fomething of that kind in it too, for Nature abhors Violence in Love.

BUT however it was, this is certain, that when his Father proposed a Match to him, he did it with an Air of Authority; told him, he had pitched upon fuch a Family, where he knew there was a fuitable Fortune; that it was a very advantagious Alliance, and that he had already difcourfed with the Lady's Father, and he found Things were very well, and that every Thing would be to his mind, and therefore he would have him think of marrying her.

BUT, Sir, fays the Son, you will pleafe to let me fee the Lady, I hope.

WHY, fays the Father, what if you fhould not fee her till afterwards, there's no great Matter in that? I fuppofe you know it is in fuch a Province, and fhe will be fent to Paris, (London) after the Contract is figned, and there you may marry her.

Son. What, must I marry her unsight, un-

Father. Why, didn't the King marry the Queen fo? Did not the Prince of marry the Lady fo? Sure, you are not above fuch People.

Son. But, SIR, they did not love them the better for that.

Father. What's that to the purpose ? Do they not live gloriously together ?

Son,

[ 195 ]

Son. I cannot think, SIR, of marrying by Proxy.

Father. You are willing, I find, to give me more trouble than you need. What, muft I bring the Lady up to Town on purpole for you to fee her, and fee whether you like her? What Occafion is there for that? I affure you, like her, or not like her, you are like to take her, or you and I fhall differ upon an Article that will be very difagreeable to you.

Son. No, Sir, I'll not give you or the Lady that trouble; I'll go down into the Country, if you pleafe, and fee her there.

Father. And what then ?

Son. Then, Sir, I'll give you my Anfwer.

Father. Anfwer; what d'ye mean by that? I affure you, I fhall not come into your Notions, (viz.) of giving you a negative Voice; The Settlements are agreed on, and are fufficient to make you both happy, and to make you live like a Gentleman all your Days. Do you think thefe are not infinitely of more Confequence than what you call pleafing your loofe Fancy? I hope my eldeft Son won't be a Fool.

Son. Nay, Sir, if you will not give me a negative Voice.

Father. If I will not, what then ? Why, I will not, for I cannot; 'tis ridiculous for you to pretend to diflike, where fuch a Fortune is fettled on † you.

+ Here the Father began to be angry, and added fome Threatnings to him, and particularly that his fecond Bro_ ther flowed have her, and all his Effate, fo the young Gentleman complied. Son. Nay, Sir, I cannot tell what to fay; if you will have it be fo, it must be fo; then I need not go indeed.

UPON this, the young Man yielded, and the Contracts being finished, they were married by Proxy, as great Men are; but the Confequence was, that he went to another Lady whom he loved, and had been in love with for some Years, and letting her know the Distress he was in, they confulted together what to do; and the refult was this, they went together, and were privately married, and the Marriage fairly confummated, at least a Month before the other, and confirmed by good and substantial Witneffes.

BUT concealing it entirely from his Father, he wickedly went and married the other Lady too, in publick; by which indeed, he obtained an irreverfible Settlement of his Father's Eftate; fo that when it came to a difcovery, his Father could not take it away again, or difinherit him, the Eftate being fully and fairly fettled.

THE Lady was indeed grofly injured and abufed, for though fhe was fairly married, yet he was not; and upon a long, and to him, thameful Hearing, in a Court of Juffice, the firft Woman was declared his lawful Wife, only the other being left to take her Remedy againit him at Law, which yet fhe would not do.

BUT the Confequence did not End here; for the Gentleman carried it fo obligingly to her who he had not loved, and managed fo dextroufly, with her who he had both loved and married, that he brought them to confent to Poligamy, and they both lived with him, and that [ 197 ] that in one House too; he kept them indeed feparate Apartments, and different Servants, but they carried it very well to one another, and lived eafy, there being a plentiful Fortune among them.

BUT even in this beft Side of the Story, what a Complication of Mischiefs was here? Here was Matrimonial Whoredom in the very Letter of it, and all introduced by a force upon Affection, (1.) By the Father unjustly forcing his Son to marry a Woman he did not love. (2.) By the Son wickedly cheating his Father in a feeming fcandalous Compliance to get the Eftate. (3.) By the Son again, bafely and injurioufly marrying a virtuous Lady, impofing himfelf upon her as a fingle Man, when he was already married to another Woman. And, laftly, by living in open Adultery, and keeping them both.

I could, as I have faid, load you with Stories of this kind, I mean, of the forcing young People to marry against Inclination, and con-trary to fecret Obligation, and effecially contrary to pre-ingaged Affections : But I must give you this Obfervation upon them, which, in effect, is equal to the repeating them, (viz.) that they would be almost every one of them tragical; efpecially if you will allow to have the deftroying all the Comforts of Life, and all the Enjoyment that could be expected in the State of Marriage, be reckoned tragical; which indeed I do allow, and every whit as tragical as cutting of Throats.

To crofs the Affections of young People in Marriage, effectially where the propoled Object is not fcandalous or extreamly de-fpicable, is, I think, a little fynonimous to 03 Murther .

Murther, it is a wilful Violence upon the Mind, and that, I think, equal or fuperior to a Violence upon the Body; it is a formal Ravishment upon Virtue, and that in fo much the worfe a manner, as it is done under the Form of Justice and Law, and is still made worfe, in that it is without a Remedy. IF Violence is offered to the Chaftity of a

IF Violence is offered to the Chaftity of a Woman, fhe has her recourfe to the Law, and fhe will be redrefs'd as far as redrefs can be obtained. Where the Fact is irretrievable, the Man fhould be punifhed, and the Woman is protected by the Law from any farther Force upon her for the future. But here the Woman is put to Bed to the Man by a kind of forced Authority of Friends; 'tis a Rape upon the Mind; her Soul, her brighteft Faculties, her Will, her Affections are ravifhed, and fhe is left without redrefs, fhe is left in the Poffeffion of the Ravifher, or of him, who, by their Order, fhe was delivered up to, and fhe is bound in the Chains of the fame Violence for her whole life.

HORRID abufe ! Here is a facred Inftitution violated, and, as I may fay, prophaned; an unjuft Violence offered to Chaftity and Modefty on one hand, and to Honefty on the other; who marries by the importuning Authority of the Parent, contrary to folemn and fecret Engagements pafs'd to another, contrary to Inclination, and contrary to pre-ingaged Affections, and, at laft, contrary to Law.

Is not here a Matrimonial Whoredom? I think, if it allows any alteration in the Word, it is for the worfe, and it fhould rather be called a Matrimonial Adultery. Nor is it very unufual for thefe Sorts of Matches to be pleaded as Excufes Excufes for all the wicked Excursions which are made after Marriage, either by one Side or other: The Man hangs about the Woman he loved before, follows her even after he is married to another; tells her, fhe is the Wife of his Affection, the other is only his Wife in Law, and by Form; that he is still faithful, and has referved his Heart for her, though he has given his Hand to the other, who he is cruelly bound to call Wife.

IT is not long fince we had a publick Example of this, and that in the higheft Clafs of Dignity, and where the Lady infifted upon her being as lawful a Wife, and as ftrictly Virtuous as the fairly and openly married Poffeffor; and even in the very Article of Death, refufed to acknowledge it a Crime. But I would not, I fay, bring Examples too near home, where they are publickly known, nor revive the Miftakes, which fhould rather be buried in the Grave with the Perfons miftaken.

FORCING to marry, is, in the plain Confequences, not only a forcing to Crime, but furnishing an Excuse to Crime; I do not fay, 'tis a just Excuse, for nothing can be a just Excuse for an unjust Action; but 'tis furnishing a plaufible Pretence, to fuch Perfons efpecially, who were but indifferently furnished with Virtue before, to justify the Excursions of their Vice: Now as a Man who is forced by any undue Restraint to enter into Obligations of Debt, give Bonds, Judgments, and fuch like Acknowledgments, meerly to obtain his Liberty, shall plead that Force in Bar of any Profecution upon those Obligations; and the Law will allow the Plea, efpecially where the Debt alfo is just ; fo these Men plead the Breach made up-OL on their Inclinations to justify the Breaches they make upon the lawful Restraints both of Human or Divine Laws, but with not the like Justice in the Plea.

O 4

It was a very unhappy Dialogue between a young Gentleman, and a neighbouring Clergyman, which I lately came to the knowledge of upon this very Subject, and which being much to the fame Purpofe as my prefent Argument points out, may not be improper here.

THE young Gentleman had been dragged into fuch a Marriage, as I have just now mentioned, by the positive Command and Authority of a rich Uncle, who had a great Estate to give, and who had fixed upon his Nephew as his next Heir, being his Brother's only Son; it feems this Uncle had declared, he would make the young Man his Heir, if he married to his Mind.

THE young Gentleman was too wife not to oblige his Uncle in every thing he could; but in this of Love he was very unkindly crofs'd by the old Man, and indeed very unjuftly too. The Cafe, as I received the Account, was as follows:

THERE was a young Lady in the Neighbourhood, who the old Man had propofed to his Nephew to marry; and her Friends being content to treat about it, the Terms of Eftate and Settlements were agreed between them, and the Writings were ordered to be drawn; for that Lady had no inconfiderable Fortune neither; in the mean time, the Gentleman was admitted to wait upon the young Lady, (and, which does not often fall out indeed, where the Choice is made firft by Grandfathers and Uncles, as was the Cafe here) they agreed; liked one another mighty well, and it went on even to loving one another, another, and that violently. In the mean time fomething prefented it felf with more Fortune, and the Uncle takes upon him to change his Mind, impofing the change too upon his Nephew, and fo breaks off the Match; obliging him to go and wait upon a new Miftrefs, and this without fo much as a Pretence of any other Objection, than that of a larger Portion offering in another. The young Gentleman was exceedingly difgufted at the Propofal, and ufed all poffible Arguments with his Uncle, and employed all his Friends to perfuade him to let the firft Match go forward, as it had been carried on fuch a length, that he could not go off with Honour or Satisfaction to himfelf, the young Lady and he being mutually engaged in Affections as well as Interefts.

But the old Man was inflexible and arbitrary, would not hear of any Reafons, but would be obeyed; and as for Affections, and fuch trifles as thefe, he flighted them to the laft Degree, as things of no Confequence at all in the Cafe: Well, the young Gentleman had no Remedy; he was obliged, though with infinite Reluctance, to abandon his Miftrefs, a Lady of Merit and Beauty, Fortune and good Breeding, and every thing agreeable to him; and turn his Eyes where his Uncle directed, without any regard to all thefe, or to his own Inclination. But he did not do this without acquainting the Lady with the Force that was put upon him, and letting her know his unhappy Circumftances; offering to relinquifh all the hopes of his Uncle's Fortune and Favour, and take her at all Hazards. But her Friends would not agree to that; nor would the confent without her Father, for then they might 202 might have been both Beggars. This being the Cate, they parted, but with mutual Affurances however of Affection, and of a farther Union, if the Uncle could be brought to any compliance.

BUT this was not all, for now the Uncle propofes the new Match to him, and fends him to wait upon the Lady. He had, with great difficulty, complied with the old Gentleman in the quitting the first Lady, who was Mistrefs of a thousand good Qualities, as well as of a good Fortune. But when he came to this new proposed Creature, his Stomach turned at the very Sight of her: She was not deformed indeed, but far from handfome; fhe had neither Wit or Manners, good Humour or good Breeding, beauty of Body or beauty of Mind; in a word, fhe was every way difagreeable, only that the had a vast Fortune.

HOWEVER, the Uncle, that was as Arbitrary in the Negative before, was as Tyrannick in the Affirmative now; and without troubling you with the many Difputes between the Uncle and the Nephew upon that Head; his Entreaties, his humble Petitions against the Match, declaring (as he himfelf faid) to his Uncle, that he had much rather be hang'd; yet he obliged him to take her, and take her he did, being loth to lose an Estate of near Two thoufand Pounds a Year, besides Money, and, which was worfe, having no other Dependence in the World.

AFTER he was married, that is to fay, coupled, for he often declared 'twas no lawful Marriage, but a Violence upon him; he made as bad a Husband as any Woman that knows fhe has nothing to be beloved for, and knows the Man 203

Man hates her when he takes her, could expect: For being thus tyed to the four Apple Tree, married to his Aversion, and separated from the Object of his Affection, he abandoned himself to Company, to Wine, to Play, and at last to Women, and all kinds of Excess. A Pious and Reverend Minister, not of his

A Pious and Reverend Minister, not of his Parish, but of a neighbouring Parish, and of which the Gentleman was Patron, frequently took Opportunities to talk feriously to him upon the fad Subject of his extravagant Life, and with a Christian plainness, tho' with decency and respect too, especially as he was his Patron, he often press'd him to take up, to reform, and, at least, to regulate his Morals.

THE Gentleman took all his Admonitions in good Part; but told him in fo many Words, 'twas his Uncle had ruined him, Soul and Body; that he had a fober Education, and was as promifing a young Fellow as any in the Country, till his Uncle ruined him, by forcing him to marry againft his Will; Forcing him to abandon a Lady that he loved, and whofe very Example added to the Influence fhe would have had upon his Affections, was enough to have kept him within Bounds all his Days; and then he related all the Circumftances of his Match, as I have related them above.

IN vain the good Minister urged the Chriftian Arguments of Duty, the Command of GoD, the Scandal to his Person, the Ruin of his Fortunes, and all the other Arguments which Religion and Reason furnish fo fully on such Occasions. His Answer was, What can I do; I have no Retreat, my Family is a Bedlam; I have no Body there to receive me but a She-Devil, always raving, and always quarrelling; that is neither quiet with Mafter or Servants, or even with her felf; that has not one good Feature to render her agreeable, or one good Humour to render her tolerable? To be at home, fays he, is odious to me, but to dwell there is intolerable; the Family is to me an Hofpital to look into, but would be a Jayl to be confined to. Had I married the Woman I loved, faid he, I had been as fober as I had been happy.

BUT, Sir, fays the good Man, Religion is not to depend upon relative Circumftances, and we are not to ferve GOD, as we have, or have not a comfortable Family.

THAT's true, fays the Gentleman. But who can be religious in Hell? Who can think of GOD, or any thing that is good, when he is bound to Converse with every thing that's bad ?

SUCH things are very afflicting indeed, fays the grave Divine; but Afflictions fhould rather guide us to Heaven, than drive us from it. I have heard it fpoken of in jeft, That a bad Wife will lead a Man to Heaven.

AND I fpeak of it in earnest, *fays the Gentle*man, that mine will drive me to the Devil.

O, Sir, fays the Minister, being greatly troubled to hear him talk at that rate, do not fay fo, I befeech you; you ought rather to confider it as an Affliction, and humble your Mind under it. But running out into Crime is heaping up Mifery, and making bad worfe.

WHY, what can Ido, Sir? fays he. Who can tye himfelf down to his mortal Aversion?

THERE are many Christian Methods, fays the Minister, which you may apply your felf to, Sir, [ 205 ]

Sir, to make the Burthen lighter to you than it feems to be now.

WHAT are they, fays the Gentleman; I don't fee into it; 'tis impossible to help me, unlefs fome Miracle would intervene to deliver me.

YES, yes, fays the heavenly Counfellor, there are Ways: Pray to GOD, as you do at Church for your Enemies, that he would turn her Heart.

TURN her! fays the Gentlemen. Pray to GOD to give me Courage to turn her out of Doors, and take in that bleffed Creature I lov'd.

THAT can't be now, Sir, faid the Minister, you must not pray to GOD to allow you to Sin against him.

WHY then, fays be, laughing, fhall I pray to GOD to fend the Devil for her.

THE good Man could hardly forbear fmiling at the Expression, but recovered himfelf, and faid, Your finile tells me, Sir, you are speaking in Jeft; fo, I suppose, you don't expect I should answer that Question.

I know not what to fay, it's half in Jeft, half in Earneft. If it fhould be fo, I don't know how I fhould be Hypocrite enough to cry for her.

SIR, fays the Minister, I beg of you let us talk of nothing Prophane; you know we are to pray for our worft Enemies.

NAY, fhe's my worft Enemy, that's true, fays be; but I can't promife to pray for her, and I'm fure I can never forgive her.

WHY fo, Sir, fays the Divine, you are ftrictly commanded to forgive.

[ 206 ]

But not to forgive her, fays he, becaufe fhe never fays, I repent, as the Scripture fays, my Brother muft do, or elfe I am not bound to forgive him.

BUT, Sir, fays the Divine, you miftake the Text; you are bound to forgive your Enemies upon the Penalty of not being forgiven, and in the Command the Condition of his Repentance is not included.

I don't know, fays the Gentleman, your Doctrine may be good, but I can't promife that I can observe the Rule; 'tis not in the Power of Nature to bear the Weight; it is unfufferable.

BUT, Sir, fays the Minister, there is no need to run out to Exceffes and Immoralities, becaufe of a difagreeable Wife.

SIR,  $\int ays$  the Gentleman, there's need to go abroad, when a Man can't ftay at home.

I beg, Sir, fays the good Reprover, you'll confider whether reforming your felf would not reform your Wife.

I don't know as to that, fays the Gentleman; but what if it fhould, I fhould be perhaps a little more quiet, but not at all more happy.

How do you mean? Sir, says the Minister, I don't understand that.

WHY, what fignifies reforming her, fays the Gentleman; I hate her. If fhe was as religious as a Nun, and as holy as an Angel, it would be the fame thing; fhe is my Averfion.

Now you have difcovered the Matter, fays the Minifler, and the Truth is out; you must then change your Work, and instead of praying for your Wife, pray for your felf.

WHAT can I pray for, fays the Gentleman.

[ 207 ]

SAYS the good Director, pray to GOD to turn your Averfions into a just Affection to your Wife.

WHAT, Says the Gentleman, must I pray to GOD to make me love the Devil.

No, Sir, but to make you love your Wife; and if you lov'd her as you do her you loft, you would not fee half fo many Faults in her as you do now.

IT is not to be done, fays the Gentleman, 'tis againft Nature. Was ever any Gentleman in love with a Monfter ? I might pray to GoD, indeed, to metamorphofe her, to turn the Devil into an Angel, Deformity into Beauty, Black into White; but I have no Rule fet me to authorize fuch a Petition.

You are fadly exafperated, Sir, againft your Wife, fays the good Man with a melancholy Air. Why! I have feen your Lady; fhe is no Monfter, no deformed Perfon, no Blackmoor; 'tis very fad to hear you talk thus.

No, no; though fhe's far from a Beauty, fays the Gentleman, yet fhe's no Monfter, I don't mean fo; but fhe's a Monfter in her Condition; fhe has a deformed Mind, a black Soul; there's nothing in her but what would oblige a Man to hate her.

You don't love her, fays the Minister, that's the greatest Missoruune of it all.

No, no, that's true, I don't love her to be fure,  $\int ays \ the \ Gentleman$ , who could ?

It is a dreadful thing, fays the ferious good Man, you fhould marry a Lady of Fortune, and have fuch an Averfion to her. You muft of necessity, Sir, repent of it, and reform it, or it may Ruin you for ever. [ 208 ]

NAY, Sir, fays the Gentleman, I have repented ed enough, if that will help me; I have repented from the first Moment. But as to reforming, I don't know what to fay to that.

WHY then, fays the Minister, you have ruined your felf; Gop help you, and affift you to change your Thoughts.

No, no, Sir, replies he, 'twas my Uncle ruined me; he knows it by this time; he murthered me; he fuffers for it, I doubt not, before now. I am undone indeed, but I had no hand in it my felf.

BUT, Sir, fays the Minister, be pleafed to confider the manner of Life you lead now. These Things are fad, and I lament your Condition heartily. But a bad Wife is no excuse for a bad Life.

I tell you, fays the Gentleman, there's no living a good Life with her, fo I thould be damn'd if I ftayed at home; for I muft be always fighting and raging; I muft live as fome Drunkards do, with their Heads always hot. Who can ftay at home with the Devil?

BUT, Sir, fays the Minister, even living abroad, as you call it, you need not live an immoral Life; there are Gentlemen who have difagreeable Families, that do not prefently run out into Exceffes of Vice and Immorality.

WHAT, fays the Gentleman, about Women, you mean, I suppose that's all.

BUT that is Adultery, Sir, fays the Minister, which is a dreadful thing to be thought of.

WHY as to that, fays the Gentleman, my Uncle muft anfwer for it; he made me commit Adultery, I could not help it. 2097

I don't understand how that can be, Sir, fays the good Minister.

WHY, 'twas all Adultery; the very Marriage was but a civil Whoring; 'twas all Adultery from the beginning; I was a married Man before.

Ay, Sir, fays the Minifler, there must be more in that then by a great deal than ever I understood before.

No, nothing more than you knew too; I fay, 'twas a Civil Adultery, a Matrimonial Whoredom, to marry this Woman; for I belonged to another Woman, our Souls were married; we were united by the firicteft Bonds of Faith and Honour; 'twas all breaking into the Rules of Juffice, and the firicteft Obligations that it was pofible to lay upon one another; 'twas all Perjury and Adultery of the worft Sort. That old Wretch, my Uncle, made me an Adulterer, and 'tis but the fame Sin continued in.

You really fright me, Sir, fays the Minifter. Why, this is a terrible Cafe: How could your Uncle force you? And why did not you declare at the Book, as you ought to have done, that you knew a lawful Impediment why you thould not be joined together, for that you were firmly engaged to another, and the other to you; I dare fay no Divine of our Church would have married you.

O, Sir, there was a Reafon for that too, fays the Gentleman, a Reafon that no Body could withftand; a Reafon enforced with an Effate of two thousand Pounds a Year; and the Reafon all in the Power of a Tyrant, deaf to all Reafonings but that of Money; in fhort, there's the Reafon that has undone me, and that made 210 7 an Adulterer of me. What fignifies it what I do now ?

'Tis a difmal Cafe, Sir, fays the Minifler; but I befeech you to confider the Crime is not to be continued in and encreafed; and if you finned in Marrying, you have the lefs need to fin after Marriage. All evil Courfes are to be repented of, and broken off.

HERE the Minifter, went on ferious, like himfelf, and made very earneft Applications to him to change his Courfe of Life. But as that Part is remote from our prefent Purpofe, I omit the repetition. Thus far is fuited to the Cafe before me, namely, the miferable Confequences of Marriages entered into contrary to pre-ingaged Affections; forced Matches made by Relations, for the meer fake of Money, without regard to the Obligations that may be fubfifting at the fame time, and without regard to the Affection and Inclination of the Parties concerned. Who can call fuch Matches lawful Marriages? And what is the fubmitting to them lefs than a Matrimonial Whoredom ?

As to the Matrimony that paffes among Princes, Kings, Emperors, and fuch like, as I faid at first, they seem to me to be rather Alliances and Political Agreements than Marriages, in which the Conjugal Affection is not confidered as a material, or not as the most material Part. The Love of Princes is managed in a higher and superior Way; it seems to be a Confequence of that Marriage, not a Cause or Reason of it; and, for ought I know, as it is not often so to very often quite wanting; the Dignity and Quality of the Person has a great Influence upon their Behaviour, and, if they really ally have not abundance of Love, they often carry it as if they had an Excels of good Humour and Complailance, which makes up a fome-thing almost equivalent to Love; and they are not lo miserable in the deficiency as meaner People are.

However, they have their Unhappineffes too, and as they are not without their Uneafineffes, when the want of a mutual Affection breaks out, and gets the maftery of their Civilities, fo, on the other hand, where an entire agreeing Affection meets in Perfons of that high Rank, how fuperior is their Felicity to that of other People! How glorious is their Peace! How beautiful the conjugal Figure! How happy is the Life of fuch a Pair! So great an Addition is a mutual Affection to the happinels of Life, even in Perfons of the higheft Rank; it adds a Luftre to their Glory, and is, notwithstanding all other good Circumftances, the brighteft Beam in all their illustrious Enjoyments. Such was the Life of two glorious Sifters, the late Queen Mary, and Queen Anne, of whom it is faid, and I never heard it contradicted, that they were entire Mistreffes of their Royal Conforts Affections, Queens of their Hearts, enjoyed a compleat conjugal Felicity, and furnished back the same Joy, making full Returns in kind. Nor is it the least Part of their Fame. But then it may be added to both those happy Couples, and which yet confirms what I am arguing upon, that they faw and loved before they married. They neither courted by Pictures, or married by Proxy; their Princes came over hither to view, chuse, and approve, and then married the Perfons they chofe; they courted in Perfon, and fo, Ĩ

[ 212 ]

I think, all fhould do that expect to enjoy in Perfon.

How happy is it, and how good has Providence been, in directing human Affairs, that Matrimonial Love is a common Bleffing! that the moft perfect Enjoyment, and that which alone compleats all Enjoyments, and finishes the Happinels of Life, is an Enclosure laid open by the merciful Disposition of Heaven, for all his Creatures to share of; and the meaness honess Man, who is not prefs'd with Poverty, is oftentimes as compleatly happy, and always as capable of being fo, as the greatest Prince, I mean, as to his conjugal Happiness.

SUITABLE Society is a heavenly Life. Take a view of Family Diforders; Houfhold Strife and Contention, and join but to thefe the Matrimonial Vices I fpeak of, and you make the Houfe a Hell, where Rage and Crime conftitute the Place, and where the Flame burns without confuming, though not without encreafing; and where the Offences encreafe the Punifhment, and the Punifhment encreafes the Offence. But we must proceed.

ÇHA Pe

[ 213 ]

CHAP. VIII.

Of unequal, unfuitable, and preposterous MARRIAGES, and the unhappy Confequences of them. Of the Effects they have upon the Family Conversation. How they occasion a Matrimonial Whoredom many Ways. Alfo fomething of the Marriage (ovenant and Oath; and how all the Breaches of it are a Political and Matrimonial Whoredom, if not a Literal Whoredom; with several Examples.

HE Contract between a Man and Woman, which we call the Marriage Covenant, is mutual and re-ciprocal, the Obligations on either Side are equal, and the Weight they carry with them is equally

What Inequalities there are in the obligatory. coming together, ought to be confidered be-fore-hand; and the want of confidering those Inequalities before-hand, is that of which I complain: These Inequalities, in some meap fure, fure, deftroy the End of Matrimony; and if they do not make it void, yet they rob the Parties of the focial Comfort of a married Life; and fome indeed entirely deftroy those Comforts themfelves.

IF any Man shall tell me, those Inequalities may be made up by prudent Conduct on both Sides; that no Man must expect a Life of perfect fuitability; that Tempers, Opinions, Paffions, Defires, Aversions, Ends and Aims, should all agree; and, above all, that even where they class and difagree, yet there is no absolute neceffity that they should interrupt the felicity of Life, make Matrimony a kind of Damnation, the House a Bedlam, and the Conversation a Hell, a State of Strife, Rage, Fury, and eternal Contention. All this I grant.

BUT if they fhall add, that therefore thefe things are Trifles, are of no Moment; that they are not worth interrupting the other Views of Matrimony, and that they are to be referred to after Difcretion on both Sides. He that fhall talk thus ferioufly, all I can fay to him is, I am forry for his Head. It is true, that Prudence will go a great Way towards reconciling unfuitable Things; and Chriftians will learn by the Chriftian Law to abate on both Sides, forbearing one another in love.

NAY, I'll go farther : Continual Jarrings in Families fometimes find a Time of Truce, and the Husband and Wife, like two Combatants, wearied with Blows, lie ftill and take Breath. But alas, what is this! 'tis but to recover Strength for a more furious Rencounter; the Iucid Intervals being over, the Fire rekindles; the Paffions break out and burn with the more Force, the Rage is redoubled; and we may fay of fuch, as the Scripture fays in another Cafe, The last End of those Families is worse than the Beginning.

THE Inequalities then, and unfuitable Things from whence these Feuds take life, and are kindled up to a Flame, are far from Trifles; the Fire of houfhold Strife burns to the loweft Hell ; 'tis an unquenchable Flame ; 'tis kindled in Trifles, that may be, and is often true. But those Trifles fet the Fire, and nothing but a Wifdom, more than is generally to be found in human Nature, can extinguish it.

THESE unsuitable Things then, ought with the utmost Precaution, to be guarded against, fearch'd for, fhunned and avoided, in our first Thoughts about Matrimony; especially if we have any Views of Felicity in a married State. For here all future Unhappineffes of married Mortals begin.

TAKE it Matrimonially; take it as it is a Partnership, for Matrimony it self is but a Partnership; though 'tis not a Partnership in Trade, 'tis what is ten thousand times more folemn, 'tis a Partnership in Life; a Partnership of Souls, they are embarked in the same Ship, they go the fame Voyage, and, give me leave to fay, they fwim, they fink, they are happy, they are miferable, they are poor, they are rich, just as they agree, or not agree; Love or Hate, are united or not united; they go on hand in hand, and have but one Fate, they rife and fall, are bleft or curs'd, nay, I believe I might add, (with but few Exceptions) they are faved or damned together.

Nor let this be cenfured for fuch an extravagant Expression as it may feem at first Sight; for if it be a neceffary Confequence of Family

Diforders

P 4

Diforders, that the Paffions are in a general Diforder on both Sides, by mutual Provocations. (And how is it pollible to be otherwife.) How then can it be, but that they muft Sin together, muft provoke one another to all those Offences which naturally attend an enraged Mind, an envenom'd Spirit, and a Soul imbitter'd by outrageous Ufage.

HENCE proceed vile and provoking Words, bitter and cutting Reproaches, undue and indecent Reflections, horrid Wifhes, Imprecations, Railing and Curfing; till, in fhort, they pufh one another on to the Gates of Hell, and need no Devil but their own ungoverned Rage, to thruft them in.

ALL this, and more, if more can be thought of, is the Product of Inequalities in Matrimony, unfuitable Matches, a joyning Things together that will not, and cannot joyn; as I faid, they may be tyed together, but cannot be joyned, joyned but cannot be united. Such Marriages are to me little lefs than a Sentence of Condemnation to a perpetual State of Mifery. The Man or Woman thus married , fentenced as the Romans fentenced Nero to die, More Majorum, that was, to have his Head put into a Collar of Iron, or kind of Pillory, and to be fcourged to Death; they are condemned to be tyed together, and to be worry'd to Death.

To marry two Perfons together that are of contrary Difpositions, unfuitable Tempers, difproportioned Years, and the like, is like the Way of punishing Malcfactors in Perfia, viz. tying the living Body to a dead Corpfe, till the rotting Carcafs poisoned the living, and then they rotted together. LET those then that efteem those Inequalities to be Trifles, and that think the hazard nothing but what may be ventured upon; let them, I fay, rush on like the Horse into the Battle: But let them remember 'tis with Solomon's Fool, Tanquam Boves, like an Ox to the Slaughter, and knows not that it is for his Life.

HOUSHOLD Strife is a terrefirial Hell, at leaft, 'tis an Emblem of real Hell; 'tis a Life of Torment, and without Redemption. Matrimony is an irreverfible Decree; 'tis a Grave from whence there is no return; nothing but the King of Terrors can open the Jayl; and 'tis then but an even lay between the Man and his Wife, who goes out first; and if when the Jaylor comes, the Devil comes with him, 'tis but one to one who he calls for, nay, if they have lived the Life I speak of, as is very probable, they may even do what they never did, that is to fay, agree for a Moment, and go together.

WHAT then can the Man or Woman be faid to bedoing, that ventures upon Matrimony without fludioufly confidering and confulting the Suitabilities that offer in the Cafe, without fitting down and judging fedately, at leaft from what is apparent, what may probably be the Cafe afterwards? If they are fenfible of their own Infirmities, let them calculate for themfelves, as doubtlefs any Man or Woman might do, what will be their Cafe : As every one that looks into his own Confcience may, if he will be impartial to himfelf, make a Judgment of his eternal State, fo every one that will look into their own Temper, and impartially compare it with the Circumstances and Disposition of the the Perfon they are to be married to, may make a tolerable Judgment of what their Condition will be after Marriage; and accordingly they may and ought to venture, or not to venture : A venture it is at best, because after you have done your utmost, you may be mistaken, may be deceived, and, after the utmost Caution, fome unfuitable Things must be expected: You must expect Difficulties, and to have many Things to ftruggle with, an Exercise for all your Virtue, all your Self-denial, all your Temper; as long as Flefh and Blood is a Compofition of Contraries and inconfiftent Humours, there will be fomething always left to try your Patience, to try your Christianity, and which, being confidered, makes it the more needful to use the utmost Precaution in the Choice.

[ 218 ]

I am not going to give Directions here how to fearch into these unfuitable Things, how to judge of them, and how to diftinguish Tempers; that would be a Work too voluminous for this Place: But one general Caution may, for ought I know, if well followed, be as good as a hundred Sheets of Paper filled with Words of lefs Signification. The Caution is short, and easy to be understood; whether it be easy to be put in Practice or no, that you must judge from your felves. It is, in few Words, this: Study well your own Temper first.

How fhall any Man or Woman know whether the Temper of the Woman or Man they are about to marry be fuitable to them, and may concur to their future Felicity, if they do not first know their own? I remember a Gentleman of Quality and Fortune who courted a Lady a long while, and their Fortunes and all all other Circumstances agreeing, they were at last married; while the Matrimony was depending, he happened to be talking with another Gentleman, who was his Intimate, and who knew the Lady; and he was congratulating himfelf, if I may be allowed fuch an Expression, upon the good Prospect of his Affairs, and the Felicity which he promised himfelf in his Match; the Fortune, the Wit, the Beauty, the good Humour of the Lady he was Courting; to all which the other Gentleman gave the Affent of his own Opinion, from a long Acquaintance in the Lady's Family, and with her Person.

BUT, after all, fays the Gentleman who courted this Lady, there's one main Thing remains which I cannot come at, and upon which almost all the rest depends.

WHAT can that be,  $\int ays \, the \, other \, Gentleman$ ; I think there's nothing in the Lady but what may make any Gentleman happy.

WHY, Says the first Gentleman, I cannot learn any thing of her Temper.

O, fays the other, fhe is of a very good Temper.

Ax, fays the firft, when fhe is Pleas'd, fo, they fay, is fomebody elfe; but I want to fee her Angry. Pray, did you ever fee her Angry?

YES, I have feen her Angry too, fays his Friend.

WELL, and how was fhe then, fays he. Is fhe a furious little Devil when fhe's provoked?

NAY, fays his Friend, that's according as the Provocation is. Every Body is fubject to Provocation, and all People have Passions.

[ 220 ]

Ax, fays the courting Gentleman, but is flow not apt to be angry, foon provoked, a little Pot foon hot.

 $W_{HY}$ , fays his Friend, if the were, the is foon cold again, that I can affure you, and the good Humour returns again immediately.

WELL, fays the first, with a Sigh, pray GOD fhe be not a pathonate Creature, for if fhe is, we fhall be the unhappieft Couple that ever came together.

WHY fo, fays bis Friend.

WHY, fays the first Gentleman, because I know my own Temper too.

YOUR own Temper, fays his Friend; why, what is your own Temper? I fee nothing in your Temper but what the Lady may be very happy in.

IT may be you don't, fays the Gentleman, but I do; I tell you, I am a pallionate fiery Dog, and I can't help it; a Word awry, the leaft unkind or provoking fets me all in a Flame immediately, like the Lineftock to the Cannon; I fire off as foon as I am touch'd, and make a Devilifh noife.

You jest with your self, fays his Friend; but I don't take you to be so bad as you represent your self.

 $T_{H,A,T}$ 's becaufe you don't know me fo well, as I know my felf, fays the Gentleman.

WELL, well, fays his Friend, if you are hot together, you will cool together.

THAT's small satisfaction to me, says the Gentleman, because I can't promise it of my Side.

BUT I'll promife you on her Side, fays his Friend, that one kind Word will cool her again [ 221 ] again immediately, and then fhe's all Goodnefs and Sweetnefs in a Moment.

Ay, fo a Word or two will cool me, fays the Gentleman. But who will yield to give the cooling Word first, there's the Difficulty.

WHY you must, fays his Friend, 'tis your Place; 'tis the Man's Place you know, always to submit to his Wife.

I can't answer for my felf, Jays he, I know I am apt to be very hot.

AND what will you do then ? fays bis Friend; you fhould have confidered this before.

NAY, fays he, I must venture now, 'tis too late to go back.

So, upon the whole, they did venture; and two Pieces of Wild-fire they were; and, in a very few Months after their Marriage, the Effects of it appeared in a manner hardly fit to be repeated; and all this only, becaufe when it was confulted and difcourfed about, it was too late to go back, fo that, in a word, the Gentleman had as good not have confidered it at all; for confidering after 'tis done, is no confidering.

It is remarkable, however, in the Difcourfe above, that the Gentleman's Concern about the Temper of the Lady he was going to marry, was occafioned chiefly from a confcious Knowledge of his own; and this was the Reafon of my telling his Story. For if we would make a right Judgment of our own Difpofition firft, we fhould the fooner fee whether we fhould be fuitably match'd to the Perfon propos'd; it is not indeed the eafieft thing in the World to know the Humour and Difpofition of one another, effecially not in a Month or two, of a courting Converfation; yet as all Judgment of that that kind fhould take its Rife from the Knows ledge of our own Difposition first, it becomes every one to study well their own Temper, and to learn to judge impartially of themselves, which, by the Way, is not the easiest Thing in the World to do.

222

You may know whether you are of a complying, yielding, abating Temper or no; whether you can bear Provocations, and make no return till the Heat is over, and then admonifh Calmly; or whether you are full of Refentment, Furious, apt to take Fire, and long a quenching; whether you are Rough or Smooth, Tender or Harfh; in a word, whether your Temper is fit for another to bear, or able to bear with another as unfit to be born with as your own: From our own Tempers thus impartially judged of, we might very often, I do not fay always, determine and choofe for our felves with Succefs.

BUT now, to bring this down to the Cafe before me. What mult we fay of that Matrimony, which is concluded in fpite of all the Knowledge and Difcovery, either of the other Perfons Temper, or of our own? That is carried on by Appetite, by the Guft of Inclination, by a View of the Outfide only, without confulting any thing but the Face, without inquiring into the Qualifications, the Temper, the Humour, the Capacities, or any of the Decorations of the Mind. What is all this but a meer vitiated Defire, a Corruption, and, I may fay, a depravity of the Judgment, without Senfe of Virtue, or value for the Accomplifhments of the Soul; in a word, what is it but a Matrimonial Whoredom ?

AND what are the Confequences ? And how do thefe Confequences prove the thing? namely, that when the corrupted Guft is fatiated, when the first Heats are over, and Souls begin to converse together, then they begin to Repent and Repine, they fee an End of their Happinels just where other People find the Beginning of theirs. Ina word, the Man and the Woman remains, but the Husband and Wifeare loft; the Conjunction holds, but the Union is loft; the Marriage is fixed and fast, but the Matrimony is gone; in a word, there's the Whoredom without the Matrimony, the vitious Part without the virtuous, the humid without the fublime; there's the married Couple without their Souls; their Affections are no more united than the Poles, and like the living and the dead Body I mentioned juft now, they are only Bound to one another, that at last they may Rot together.

HORRID Matrimony! horrid difcording Tempers, raging Paflions, outrageous Words, hot fiery Breakings out of ill-natured, bitter and fcandalous Reflections; thefe fum up the Family Conversation between them: Thefe form the Felicity that they have to expect: Thefe are the Productions of hot-headed, unfuitable Wedlock; of marrying without Thought, taking a Woman purely for a Woman, or a Man meerly to have a Man; in a word, fuch marrying is, in my Senfe, no better or worfe than a Matrimonial Whoredom.

Now, as I faid in the Beginning of this Chapter, the Obligations of the Marriage Covenant or Vow are mutual and reciprocal; the Band is equal, the Burthen is equally divided : And this is it that makes the difcording Tempers, the unfuitable Circumstances of which I and am now entring upon the Particulars of, fo fatal: Marriage is a Yoke, fo it is very well reprefented, in which the Creatures yoked are to draw together. If they are unequally yoked, what is the Confequence? the Plough goes not forward, the weak Horfe draws all the Load, and is opprefs'd, and, at length, both fink together; the Family is confufed; the Affairs of it are at a Stand; the Family-Peace is deftroyed; the Intereft of it neglected; and, in a word, all goes wrong, till at laft Ruin breaks in, and both the unhappy Creatures are loft and deftroyed together.

[ 224 ]

THIS being the Cafe, the Inequalities and Unfuitables of Matrimony are far from being Trifles, that are to be difregarded and ventured on, unlefs by fuch People to whom it is indifferent, whether they live happy or no, and that can be as happy with an unfuitable Match as with a fuitable one. I know there are fuch Kinds of People in the World, whofe very Souls are indolent and afleep; who receive no Impressions of Grief or Joy, Pain or Pleafure, and whole Minds are, as it were, perfectly paffive in Life; unconcerned in whatever happens to them, that neither look before them or behind them, one Way or t'other, but rife in the Morning to go to Bed at Night, rife up on purpofe to fit down again, and fit down only to rife up. Thefe are indeed fit to marry in this manner; they are the Family of the Eafy Ones, and to them 'tis all one to be happy or unhappy, blefs'd or unblefs'd, quiet or unquiet; Frowns are all one to them as Smiles, and bad Words as good ; they neither Tafte the four or the fweet; the Mufick of the Viol, or the Scraping of a Kettle, is alike to them, and they they diffinguish not between Good and Evil. All I can fay to fuch, is only this, that at prefent I am not talking of them, or to them; I am rather directing my Speech to the rational Part of Mankind, who aim at a Happines in this Life, and understand what it means; who defire to live like Men, and like Chriftians, and know how to do fo; and, for this very Reason would match themselves with such, and fuch only, as have the like just Notions, and understand what a Life of Enjoyment means, as well as themfelves.

225

To thefe, I fay again, that all Inequalities in a ftate of Marriage, are as fo many Wounds in the Body, which, if left to Nature, will fester and inflame, and, at length, mortify, and be fatal; at best they require a great deal of Surgery, Plaistering, and, perhaps, Opening and Incifion, to cure and reftore them; but are abundantly better and eafier prevented than cured, be the Skill ever fo great: In fhort, all Inequalities are Discasses in Marriage, and all Discasses are best cured by Anticipation; for, as the Learned say, Errors in the first Concoction are not remedied in the fecond; but the ill Digefture affects all the natural Operations, till at laft it reaches the Blood and animal Spirits, and there contracts Capital Difeafes.

To conclude : Let all those that expect Felicity in the married Life, that have the leaft View beyond the fenfuality of the Brutes, and look on any thing in Marriage beyond the bridal Bed; I fay, let them ftudy to Match with proper and equal Circumstances; with Perfons, as near as possible, fuitable to themfelves, and that in all the Particulars, of which I

()

[ 226 ]

I fhall give the detail in the next Chapter. Whether my Advice be of Weight or not, I refer to what follows.

I am told, in the very Moment of writing this Head, that to talk of Inequalities and Unfuitable Things in marrying, is too general; that 'tis an Amufement only, and gives no light into my Meaning. A young Man marries a Wife, his Thoughts are to be fure upon having a fuitable Bedfellow, a pleafant, agreeable, handfome Woman, to divert himfelf, and to fport with. What do we tell him of Inequalities and Unfuitablenefs? he knows nothing of it; I muft explain my felf.

IN obedience to the Ignorance of the Objector, and fuppofing it the Senfe of the Times, I fhall explain my felf accordingly: And firft, I grant, that young Gentlemen now act juft as the Objection is flated; they marry, get a Fortune and a Bedfellow, and that is all they trouble themfelves about. The Cafe is excellently well express'd by my Lord Rochefter:

"With an Effate, no Wit, and a young Wife, "The folid Comforts of a Coxcomb's Life. Roch. Art. to Clo.

I grant, I fay, that this is much of the Cafe before me; and this is that makes fo much Matrimonial Whoredom in the World: This is the very Effence of the Crime Iam reproving, namely, that the married People look to the Coxcomb's Comforts, not to the real Comforts of a married Life, to the Enjoyments of the Night, not the Enjoyments of the Day; to what's prefent, not what's to come; and while they do fo, no wonder we have fuch dreadful Family-Doings as we have in [ 227 ] in the World. Such Strife, fuch Breaches, fuch Family-Wickednefs! While the End for which they marry, and that kind of vitious Love which brought them together lafts, they run out in their wicked Midnight Exceffes one Way; and when that Love is cool'd, the vitious Flame quenched, the Fire extinguifhed, there being no folid Affection founded upon Virtue and true Merit; they run out into their Day-light Exceffes another Way; I mean, jarring, fcandalous Contention and Difcord. Thus the firft Part of Life is Matrimonial Whoredom, and the laft Part Matrimonial Madnefs.

By all this, I think, 'tis apparent that, next to Virtue and Religion, Suitability is the only folid Foundation on which the Conjugal Felicity is grounded; and unfuitable Matches ought to be avoided with our utmost Care. And that I may explain my felf at large, and because these unfuitable Things are too many, and have too great Obstructions attending them to be contained in a general Definition, and more than at first Sight seems probable, take them in the following Particulars, all of them really inconfistent with the Felicity of Marriage.

- 1. Unfuitable Years.
- 2. Unfuitable in Quality.
- 3. Unfuitable Eftates.
- 4. Unfuitable Tempers.
- 5. Unfuitable Principles of Religion.

OF all these I should speak diffinctly, and employ diffant Chapters upon some of them; nor would it be remote to the Design of this Work to  $Q_2$  do do fo upon all of them; but I ftudy brevity; and I am very far from having a barren Subject before me; I have rather more Matter than can be brought into the Compafs I have preferibed to my felf; yet Things muft be explained as I go, and efpecially becaufe they all tend to make the married Life unhappy, though they may not be all equally fatal. I'll run them over therefore, in a fummary Way, for the prefent, the Perfons guilty will have room enough to enlarge in their own Reflections feparately, and as it fuits their Cafe; for the fcandalous Inequalities of fuch Marriages as I aim at, are too many; no Man will fay, there is a want of Examples.

Nor are the Inequalities of Matching, as they are now managed, efpecially by the Ladies, of fo light a Confequence, and fo infignificant as fome would make them; and let but the Ladies reflect a little upon the melancholy Circumftances of fome of their Sex, who warm'd thus by the fecret Heats of Nature, which they have afterwards been fenfible of, they have thrown themfelves away in the scandalous manner I have mentioned, with what Self-Reproaches have they loaded themfelves, when they have feen themfelves in the Arms of Scoundrels and Brutes, who, at other times, they would have loathed the Thoughts of, and who they live to abhor with as compleat an Aversion, after these unhappy Heats are cool'd, as ever they did before. But of this in its Place.

۴.,

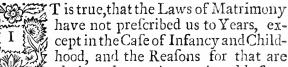

GHAP.

[ 229 ]

CHAP. IX.

Of Marrying at Unfuitable Years.

🏶 obvious; but, as is mentioned before, where the Laws are Silent, there the general Rules of Reafon and Religion take Place, and are Laws to Christians and to Men of Reason, as is the Cafe of our Limitations in Meats and Drinks. We are not limited or directed to what, when, or how much we fhall eat or drink; but all Exceffes in either are finful; and fo all fcandalous and indecent Things among Chriftians are finful and unlawful; and the Rules of Decency and Sobriety have certainly the Force of Laws to those who profess themfelves Chriftians, as much as if they were exprefsly mentioned in the Decalogue it felf.

Now to judge of Decency with refpect to the difparity of Years in Perfons marrying, I think we need go no farther than to bring it down to the original Word, Modefty, of which I took notice in the Introduction; and, I think, this may pass for a Maxim, that what can't be Modeft is not Decent; or, if you will, tranfpofe the Particles is and can, and read it thus: That

That what is not Modeft cannot be Decent. If then Chriftians are to do Things of good Report, certainly Things not Decent and not Modeft, are forbidden them. How the Practice of our modern Chriftians in this particular Article are either Modeft, Decent, or of good Report, enquire within, and you fhall know farther.

IT is the Opinion of fome, that after there is no more room to expect Children, it is not lawful to marry. Nor are the People who are of this Opinion, the loofer or weaker Part of Mankind; but the ferious, folid and religious; as alfo Perfons of Judgment and Learning, and they ground it upon this very Text, Phil. iv. 8. of good Report; and upon comparing this with what is expressly mentioned in the Office of Matrimony, namely, that the principal End of Matrimony, as an Ordinance or Institution of GOD, is for the lawful Procreation of Children. Now to what End then, fay they, is Matrimony, when the Perfon, that is, the Woman in particular, is paft Child-bearing? All the reft can be nothing but what is not fit to name. The Office of Matrimony indeeds adds, that another Reafon of Matrimony is to prevent Fornication, Remed. Amoris.

Now if the married Couple are paft Children, one would think too, it fhould be time for them to quit the other Plea; and then let them tell us, if they can without Blufhes, whether they have any Plea for Matrimony, that does not come within my Title, viz. Conjugal Lewdnefs, or Matrimonial Whoredom? There are many fcandalous Things might be faid upon this Subject, but I turn it all another Way, and had rather mention it by Way of Queftion; let the Parties anfwer it, if they can, without Breach of Decency. I dare fay they will find it difficult; and yet there may be more Modefty in the Anfwer, than there is in the Thing it felf too.

SUPPOSE the Lady to be about Five and fifty; and the Queftion is first put to her, Whether she has any room to expect Children, or whether she thinks it possible, in the ordinary Ufage or Course of Nature, that she should have any Children? And this Lady marries, whether a younger Person than her felf, or not, tho' that is ordinarily the Case; but suppose, for the present, not a young Man, because I shall speak of that Part by it felf. Now what can be a lawful or modest Reason for this Matrimony? or if we should say to this Lady, Pray, Madam, wby did you marry? what could she fay.

To fay fhe married in hopes of Children, that could not be; 'tis foreclofed in the Beginning of the Queftion.

To fay fhe married for one to look after her Affairs, that could not be; that's foreclofed too, by fuppofing her to be in good Circumftances, and to have her Effate all fettled and firm.

To fay the does it to evoid Fornication, Modefty, if the is Miftrefs of any, will forbid her talking in that manner.

SHE has, indeed, nothing to fay, but to Blufh and look down; to acknowledge that fhe did it to gratify (as the Poet expresses it modeftly) a frailer Part; in fhort, fhe ought to fay, that fhe married meerly to lie with a MAN. And is not this Matrimonial Whoredom? If not, what then muft it be called, and by what Words, that will not be Criminal in themfelves, can we express it?

Q 4

SUP

232

SUPPOSE the Lady to have no Occafion to better her Fortune, her Circumftances being very good, and indeed, in fuch Cafes they feldom better their Fortunes, but worft them.

SUPPOSE her to have no want of a Steward or Manager, her Eftate being a Jointure or Fee-Farm Rent, paid her Quaterly, or Interefts of Stocks, or any other Certainty that takes those Excufes from her.

SUPPOSE her to have no Occafion for advancing her Equipages or Retinue, or her fplendid Way of Living; for thefe, and fuch as thefe, are ufually made Excufes for all thofe fcandalous Things, and much dirty Pains are taken by the guilty Ladies, to cover the Action from the juft Reflections which the World cafts upon them. But when they are examined to the Bottom, 'tis evident, that, as the Prophet Ifaiab fays, the Covering is too narrow, and the Nakedne [s will appear.

But to come clofer to the Cafe. Here is a Lady of fifty or fixty Years of Age, fhe has had Children in her younger Years, but has left Bearing for ten or twenty Years, and is paft not the Probability only, but even the Pofhbilty, according to Nature, of Bearing any more. But this Woman caffing her vitiated Eyes upon a young Fellow of twentyfive or thirty Years old, perhaps her Servant, her Book-keeper, or her late Husband's Steward, or fome meaner Perfon, fhe prefently takes Care to let him know, that he may be admitted, if he will pufn at it. The young Fellow takes the Occafion, and, making his eafy Intereft, fhe marries him.

IF any Man is difpleafed at my calling this by the Name of Matrimonial Whoredom, let him [ 233] him find a better Name for it, if he can, and tell me, what I fhall call it, that is fuitable to the Thing it felf. If it is not lewd, and fcandalous, nay, open declared Lewdnefs, what elfe muft it be? what elfe can it be? I remember the Excufe a certain antient Lady gave for fuch a Marriage, had more Craft in it, tho' perhaps more Truth too, confidering it Allegorically, than moft of the lame Extenuations I generally meet with.

DEAR Madam, fays a neighbouring Gentlewoman, her Relation, to her, I hear your Ladyfhip is refolved to marry; I cannot fay I believed it, for indeed I did not.

WHY, Coufin, fays the Lady, for fuch fhe was, why fhould you not believe it?

NAY, Madam, fays she, because for your own fake. I would not have it be true.

WHY, Coufin, fays the Lady, why would you not have it be true ?

O, Madam, fays the Coufin, you live fo purely; to be fo eafy, fo happy, fo free, as you are, methinks you cannot think of coming into Fetters again.

BUT, Coufin, fays the Lady, I am not fo eafy as you think I am.

DEAR Madam, fays the Coufin, what can be more happy? why, you have nothing to trouble you, and no Body to controul you.

WELL, Coufin, fays the Lady, no more I won't, if I marry; for I am refolved to take a young Man, that has his Dependence upon me, and I am fure to preferve my Authority with him.

O, Madam, fays the Coufin, pray GOD you don't find your felf mistaken.

How

234

How can I be mistaken, Coufin? fays the Lady; why, I take him with nothing; I fhall make a Gentleman of him.

Ay, Madam, though you do, fays the Coufin, I have known fo many underling Fellows turn Tyrants, and domineer and infult their Benefactreffes, that I can never think of any thing, but of being betrayed and ill treated, when I hear of fuch Matches.

WHAT, fays the Lady, when one raifes them from a Beggar, Coufin.

'Tis all one, Madam, fays the Coulin, when once they get to Bed to their Miftreffes, they never know themselves after it; they know no Benefactors.

WELL, I must venture it, I think; why, I can't live thus, fays the Lady. LIVE thus! Madam, fays the Coufin; why, don't you live as happy as a Queen?

ALAS, Coufin, you don't know my Cafe, fays the Lady; I am frighted to Death.

FRIGHTED, Madam, with what? Jays the Coufin.

I don't know what, fays the Lady, 'tis the Devil, I think ; ever fince Sir William died almost, I have been disturbed in my Sleep, either with Apparitions or Dreams, I know not which. They haunt me to Death almost.

WHY, Madam, Says the Coufin, I hope Sir William don't Walk.

No, I think not : But, I think, I fee him every now and then, fays the Lady, and fometimes another Shape; 'tis Sir William, I think, in another Drefs.

WHAT does he fay to your Ladyship? Does he offer to fpeak ? fays the Coufin.

[ 235 ]

No, fays the Lady, Sir William did not, but the other Appearance fpoke to me, and frighted me to Death: Why, he asked me, to let him come to Bed to me; and, I thought, he offered to open the Bed, which waked me, and I was e'en dead with the Fright.

O, Madam, fays the Coufin, then it was but a Dream, it feems; it was not the Devil.

No, it was a Dream; but it was the Devil, to be fure, fays the Lady, for all that.

WELL, but Madam, Jays the Coufin, if it was the Devil, what will a Husband fignify ?

WHY,  $\int ays \ the \ Lady$ , I can't bear to be alone in the Night, and be thus terrified.

WHY, Madam, fays the Coufin, will a Hufband, and fuch a one as you propofe, be able to drive the Devil away? I fuppofe your Woman lies with you; fhe is as able as he for fuch a Thing; that is to fay, fhe will be with you, and call for help, if need be; and he can do no more.

I do not know what to do, Coufin, not I, fays the Lady, but, I think, I must have him; my Mind is fo distracted I shall never be easy.

NAY, Madam, fays the Confin, then 'tis that makes you Dream fo, it may be.

No, no, Coufin, fays the Lady, don't have fuch Thoughts on me, pray.

UPON the whole, her Coufin found what Devil it was haunted her Ladythip; fo the confetted, at laft, that the Lady had good Reafons for marrying; but then the argued warmly againft her taking the young Fellow; and after reckoning up a great many Gentlemen in the Neighbourhood, the prefs'd her earneftly not to marry below her felf.

WHY,

WHY, Madam, fays the Coufin, a Gentleman will always be a Gentleman, and will treat you as you deferve, like a Lady, and like a Perfon of Diftinction; but a Scoundrel knows not how to use a Lady well, when he has her.

WELL, but Coufin, who would lay you out for me then? fays the Lady.

WHY, Madam, fays the Coufin, there's your Neighbour, Sir Adam ------

FIE, Coufin, fays the Lady, how can you talk fo? Why, he's an old Man; I'll never take a Man older than my felf.

WHY, Madam,  $\int ays$  the Coufin, when we are young, we always fay, the Man thould be at leaft, ten Years older than the Woman.

NAY, Madam, fays the Coufin, I don't know what your Ladyfhip fhould take any Man, old or young, for; I think you are perfectly happy as you are; but if you don't like him, there's Sir John —, he is younger than your Ladyfhip by ten Years.

I wonder at you, Coufin, fays the Lady; why, he is a fickly, decaying Gentleman, he is troubled with I know not how many Diftempers.

No Diftemper, Madam, says the Cousin, but the Gout.

WELL, the Gout, fays the Lady, that's enough; I have no mind to be a Nurfe, I affure you.

WELL, Madam, and will your Ladyship have this young Fellow then? I profess, 'tis scandalous.

WHY

[ 237 ]

WHY, I think I must, Coufin: He is a handfome, jolly, brisk Fellow' fays my Lady; I cannot fay but I like him.

NAY, if you want a brisk young Fellow, fays the Coufin.

I don't fay, I want him for that. But what would you have me take, a Skeleton ?

THERE is a long Part of the Dialogue ftill behind, in which the old Lady confefs'd fome Things, in Confidence to her Coufin, which, though extraordinary well to my Purpofe, will not fo well bear reading; and therefore I omit them. But, in a word, the Lady took this young Fellow, and fhe was as Unhappy with him as could be imagined; fhe fettled Two hundred Pounds a Year upon him for his Life; and, in a word, he broke her Heart; and he lived upon it afterward, till he anticipated the Income of it, fold his Life in it, fpent the Money, and died in Jail; all which he richly deferved, for he was a Brute to her, however brutal her marrying of him was.

No w what was all this but Matrimonial Whoredom? fhe married him for nothing more or lefs but the meer Thing called a Bedfellow; and he took her to be her Servant, to give it no worfe a Name, and to have a Settlement of Two hundred Pounds a Year for his Pains.

Bur we have groffer Examples than this, and that near our own Days, and within our own Knowledge. A certain Lady, and of a great Fortune too, at the Age of fixty-four, not many Days ago, took into her Service, as I may very juftly call it, a young Clergyman of four and twenty, a handfom, jolly Gentleman, who might have had Wives enough, and fuitable able to himfelf, and fuch as might have made him happy, having a tolerable Beneficc, which he lived comfortably upon.

BUT Avarice, and the View of enjoying feven hundred Pounds a Year, a Coach and four, with all the Addenda that a Man of Senfe knew well how to Comfort himfelf with, prevailed with him to tye himfelf down to the four Apple Tree, and he fubmits to the fervile Drudgery, and marries her.

AND here the Confequence fell hard on the Man's Side. Firft, fhe grew unfufferably Covetous, and fo Narrow, that, keeping her Revenue in her own Hands, fhe hardly allowed him Expences for his daily Subfiftence: In the next Place, fhe was jealous of him to a kind of Madnefs and Diffraction; and, in a word, he was forced to threaten to leave her, and turn her off again, before he could obtain any tolerable Ufage.

Now what did this Lady marry for ? What retence could fhe poffibly make for it, but this Matrimonial Whoredom that I fpeak of? It is hardly poffible to affign any other Reafon, at leaft, that will fupport it felf, or that any one can defend. She lived perfectly eafy, had her Friends about her, the Eftate was in her own hand, and fhe wanted no help to look after her Rents; for it's apparent, after her Marriage, fhe did it without him.

IN fhort, 'tis evident the End of that fcandalous Match was visible to the World; there could not be one modeft Word faid for it; at least, that could carry any Weight in it; and the Town have used her accordingly; for the is the Reproach of all Company, the Scorn and Scandal of her Sex, the Talk of all the Tea-

[ 238 ]

Tea-Tables and Affemblies round about; the poor Drudge, who fhe has taken into pay, is pitied by every Body; and the Town where he lives, it is doubted, will make a Bonfire, when fhe is pleafed to walk off, and congratulate him by all the Methods fuitable to the Senfe of his Deliverance.

WHEN an old Man of feventy or eighty marries a young Girl of twenty, we have generally fome Game among the common People about it. But here there may not be fo much room for Scandal, becaufe it has often happened, that Men have had Children at a very great Age; and there may be extraordinary Reafons for them to defire Children; as particularly for the enjoying Eftates, to which they have no Heirs. But be the Reafons what they will, the Thing is unqueftioned becaufe lawful, and the having Children is poffible; fo that the great End and Reafon of Matrimony is not deftroyed.

But what fhall we fay when two antient People, the Woman paft Children, and the Man alfo: What do thefe join together for? And which of the Ends of Matrimony are to be anfwered in their Conjunctions? I obferve, the World are generally reconciled to thofe Matches becaufe of the Parity of Circumftances; and they ordinarily express themfelves thus: Well, let them matry, there's no great difproportion in their Age; ay, ay, why fhould they not marry? they are very well match'd, the Man's almost Threefcore, and the Woman is not much lefs, they'll do very well together; fo there's little or no Scandal rais'd here, I mean, in the Mouths of the common Cenfurers of fuch Things. BUT I differ from the common Opinion here exceedingly; and I muft fay, that, in my Opinion, this is as much or more, a Matrimonial Whoredom than the other. The Reafon is the fame; the Occafion of Matrimony is the fame, with this difference notwithftanding, and to the Difadvantage of the latter Cafe; for that, in the firft Cafe, the lewd Part lay wholly upon the Woman, here it lies upon them both: where the old Lady married the young Man, the Matrimonial Whoredom could lye only on her Side; but here the equality of Years makes an equality of Guilt; there was a fingle Shame, here a double; and I am much miftaken, if two being guilty makes the Offence lefs than one.

2.40

WHAT can two People at those Years fay for marrying, feeing they know they can have no Children? It must be for the frailer Part, which it is not my Business to name; and 'tis only contrived, in a manner, less exposed to the common Scandal of the Times; the Woman has her wanton Ends answered, without the Reproach of taking a young Fellow to Bed to her, on the Account mentioned before, and only is content to see with an older Bedfellow, to avoid the Scandal.

But there is a worfe Cafe in this fcandalous Matrimony yet behind, and this is on the Man's Part; a flagrant Example of which take as follows:  $\mathcal{A} \longrightarrow \mathcal{B} \longrightarrow$ , a grave Citizen, and in the flourishing Part of his Years, though not in his Prime, not a Youth, being about Forty, buries his Wife; he has three or four Children by his former Lady, and cares not to have the Charge of any more, or, to ufe his Words, would not wrong his Children, but has a kind [ 241 ] a kind of an Occafion, which fhall be namelefs, and he muft marry.

To anfwer both thefe Ends, and to join the Wife and the Wicked together, he will, in the abundance of his Prudentials, take a Wife that thall be fure to be pafs'd Children; fo gratifying the Beaft and the Chriftian both at once. Upon this, he fingles out a grave motherly Widow, who he took to be about Five and fifty, and indeed, by her Face, fhe feemed to be no lefs.

THE Lady had as much Occafion for a Hufband as Mr. B — had for a Wife; whether it was upon the fame Motive, Hiftory is filent in that Part, and fo am I; but, it feems, fhe had been given to underftand what Foot it was Mr. B — married upon; and not being willing to difappoint him, or rather, not willing to lofe him, fhe call'd her felf an old Woman, and her Beauty concurring, admitted what few Widows are pleas'd to ftoop to, (viz.) that fhe was, as above, near Five and fifty.

THIS unlook'd-for, undefired Fruitfulnefs, moves him to enquire a little farther; and, fearching the Register at the Birth of his Twins, he finds, to his furprize, that truly Fame, and a courfe Countenance, had wronged his Wife about ten Years, and that, inftead of being Five and fifty, fhe was not much above Four and forty.

UNDER

UNDER this Difappointment, his Continence betrayed the Occafion of his Marriage; for, as above, he had no lefs than five Children by her, which, her Fortune being not extraordinary, ruined the Fortunes of his firft Children, who he pretended to have fo much Concern for. This was the End of Matrimonial Whoring with Mr. B_____. And now he is afhamed to talk publickly of his own Shame, as well the Reafons of his Marriage, as the Management of it, in which he has indeed this Advantage of the Satyr, that his Difcoveries are too grofs to be defcribed, as his Language is to be repeated; fo he mult pafs unreproved for the Reafons given in Page 9.

I meet with fo many of thefe Sorts of lewd Marriages, that I can hardly refrain giving a Lift of them, faving, that they come fo near home, and the Perfons will fo neceffarily be pointed out by the Defcriptions, that I am loth to draw Pictures that every Body muft know. But fomething muft be faid to fhew the Variety.

THERE lived an eminent City Gentleman, if that Language may be allowed to be good in Heraldry, not a Mile from St. Mary  $A_{----}$ , who having loft a good Wife, went a Fortunehunting for another; but openly declared, he must have an additional Qualification too, viz. fhe must be pass'd Children.

N. B. He had a Houfe full of Children already, and but a moderate Fortune; fo he pretended to marry again, to better the Fortunes of his Children.

AN intimate grave Friend of his, and a real Friend to his Fame, as well as to his Family, took the freedom to expostulate upon this Subiect [ 243 ]

ject with him very freely, and it occafioned the following fhort Difcourfe, according to the old Englift Cuftom, which Foreigners laugh at us for, and which we have little to fay; for their Salutes were Jack and Tom, though Men in Years, and Men of Figure, one almost an Alderman.

SAYS Tom, his grave Friend, to Jack, Pr'ythee, Jack, what's all this I hear of you? Why, you make all your Friends blufh for you.

Jack. Blufh for me! What do you mean? I don't blufh for my felf, what need they blufh for me?

Tom. Why, you run to every Hole and Corner, to every Church and Meeting-houfe, Ball, and Affembly, a Wife-hunting, and, as they fay, a Fortune-hunting too; that's worfe.

Jack. Nay, that's falfe too; I have indeed talk'd of marrying, but not like that neither.

Tom. But, what need you talk fo much of it? There are Women enough; 'tis but Ask and Have, Pick and Choofe; the Market's on our Side; you know the Ladies have the worft of it. You may have a Wife any where.

Jack. I don't find it fo, I assure you.

Tom. Why fo it fhould feem; but how can that be, Jack? A Man in your Circumstances can't want a Wife.

Jack. Not fuch good Circumstances neither. Han't I got a House full of Children?

Tom. Well, and what then? And an't you reckoned a Ten thousand Pound Man, an Alderman's Fellow?

[ 244 ]

Jack. Ay, but I am, perhaps, a little too nice in choofing too : I'm not fo eafily pleafed, it may be, as you imagine.

Tom. What, you want another young Wife, as pretty and as pleafant as that you loft. One would think you fhould be paft that, Jack. Why, you are turn'd of Forty.

Jack. Only that you happen to be quite miftaken; and that I look just the contrary Way.

Tom. What do you mean by that? Explain your felf, what is it you drive at ?

Jack. Why, to be plain with you, the Cafe is this: Money I would have, that's the first thing; but then I have Children enough.

Tom. What ! grown Mifer already. What, would you marry an old ugly overgrown Widow of Seventy, only for her Money ? Han't you Money enough ?

Jack. No, no. Look ye, Tom, I an't the Man the World takes me for; I am well enough, but I am far from rich; and I have feven Children, you know; and that's enough to make a rich Man die poor.

Tom. Don't Halt before you're Lame; you are worth Ten thousand Pounds, at least; every Body knows that; and a thriving Man too.

Jack. No, no, I an't fo rich; but if I was, what's that to be divided into feven Parts? And what muft the eldeft Son do? Muft he have nothing more than the youngeft Sifter? You know I'm a Freeman.

Tom. Well, fo you want a Wife with a Fortune, that her Money may go to your Children. What old Fool muft that be?

Jack. Well, that is the Fool I want; however, Tom, you know I am a Father.

Tom.

[ 245 ]

Tom. But, what if fhe fhould have more Children of her own, Jack? What then?

Jack. No, no, ware Hawk; that's my Busines? I'll take care of that.

Tom. What, you will have a Wife pafs'd Children then. Is that it ?

Jack. Yes, yes, that's it indeed. But I would not have a very Old one, neither.

Tom. I don't think that's a lawful Marriage, Jack.

Jack. Why fo? pray.

Tom. Why, where do you read, that any of the Ends and Reafons of Matrimony is to pick out a Wife, only for her Money ' that is not taking a Wife, Fack, 'tis Matrimonial Plunder, 'tis robbing a Woman, only within the Pale of the Church.

Jack. Well, but to tell you the Truth, Tom, I care not a Farthing whether I have much Money with her, or no, if I like the Woman.

Tom. Well, now you fpeak Bravely and Gallantly; I like that. But, hark ye, Jack, what's come of the Story of the feven poor Children? And where's the Father you talk'd of?

Jack. Why, yes, I'm the Father ftill; for I ftick by the Point. I am refolved to have no more Children.

Tom. So you'll have the old Hag, without the Money; nay, that's worfe than all the reft. What! an old Woman, and no Money! that's the Devil, Jack. You won't be fuch a Fool, I'm fure.

Fack. Why, you talk madly. I think I may have a Woman past Child-bearing, and not have an old Hag, I hope.

R 3

Tom.

[ 246 ]

Tom. Pr'ythee, tell me, what will pleafe you; and then a Body may look out for you.

Jack. Why, a good jolly handfome well-bred Woman, about Forty-eight to Fifty.

Tom. A Widow, I fuppofe; there's no venturing upon a Maid under Fifty, not in your Cafe.

 $\mathcal{J}ack$ . No, I would have her be a Widow that has Children, but has done Childing for feven or eight Years.

Tom. And the must be Jolly and Handfome, you fay.

Jack. I would not have her Old and Ugly too, Tom, that's too hard.

Tom. Well, I believe I know what you want, and what you mean. But, pr'ythee, Jack, be honeft; methinks you are all wrong: What fhould you marry for?

Fack. Why not? pray.

Tom. I'll tell you why not, if you are willing to be ferious. You had a fine charming Lady, almost twenty Years; she brought you a good Fortune, and has left you seven fine charming Children; your two eldest Daughters are fine beautiful young Ladies, and Marriageable; 'twould look very hard to bring a Mother-inlaw among them all. It will make a fad House, Jack; it will ruin your Children.

Jack. Not at all. My two eldeft Sons are in Bufinefs. One I have placed out to an Italian Merchant; and one's in my own Countinghoufe: And my two Daughters will go to their Aunt, their Mother's Sifter, who will be glad to have them.

Tom. And what must the three young Ones

Jack.

Jack. O, they'll do well enough till they grow up.

Tom. But, where's the Father, now? Jack. What's come of the Father you talked of?

Fack. Why, what's the Matter ?

Tom. Why, take home a Mother-in-law, difperfe your Family, and turn your Children out of Doors, as they grow up; and all this for a new Wife. Is this like a Father ? Jack.

Fack. No, no; I won't turn them out of Doors for her, neither.

Tom. That's a Jeft, you know better; you muft turn them out of Doors, or they'll turn her out of Doors, that you may depend upon; and the laft would be hard too.

Jack. But what Necessity is there for either of them?

Tom. The best Answer to that, Jack, is; what Necessity can you have to marry at all?

Jack. I don't know; I have no Neceffity indeed; but I am alone, without a Wife: I want One to guide my Houfe, and govern the Family.

Tom. How can that be? when you have two young Ladies, Women grown, that are perfectly fit for it, and fhew you, that they very well understand it.

Jaok. That's very true; but they won't be always with me; they'll marry. One of them is befpoke already.

Tom. Well, 'tis time enough then : And, befides, perhaps, before they are both gone, your two youngeft may be grown up.

Jack. That's true. But 'tis not like the government of a Wife in a Family; there's no Authority.

Tom.

Tom. How d'ye mean? You would not give the Authority over your Children to a Wife; and you muft do that, or turn them out of Doors, or, as I faid above, you muft give the Children Authority over your Wife; and that will never do; fo, in fhort, your Houfe will be a Bedlam, and you will be undone: For if once the Family-Peace is gone, the Man's undone; that I take for granted.

Jack. Well, I must venture it, I think; for I must have a Wife to direct Things; there must be Conversation and Confidence, and abundance of Things which a Family requires, that make a Wife absolutely necessary.

Tom. Come, Coufin, Jack, don't mince the Matter. You don't want a Wife, but you want a Woman.

Jack. You are quite out, Tom; you mistake the Matter.

Tom. Well, well, you may call it what you will; but you'll never make the World underftand you any otherwife.

Jack. I can't help that; I am to understand for my felf. I don't value the World. I tell you, that Part is not fo much as in my Head.

Tom. Well, if it is not in your Head, 'tis fomewhere elfe then, I tell you; no Body can, nor ought to take it any otherwife; 'tis a preposterous Thing; 'tis against the Laws of GOD and Nature.

Jack. What do you mean by that? What Law is it against? pray.

Tom. Why, you force me to be ferious with you, whether I will or no. I tell you, the Marriage you propofe, though it is not against the express Letter of the Law, 'tis against the intent [ 249 ] tent and meaning of it; 'tis all Vice and Wickednefs, and, I am fure, that is against the meaning of all Law or Rule that a Christian ought to walk by.

Jack. You furprize me. Pray, explain your felf.

Tom. Why, the Thing explains it felf: To marry a Wife on purpole to have no Children! Why, any Body knows the meaning of that. I am plain, and I explain my felf thus: As to marry her, to give your Children her Money, was a Matrimonial Plunder; fo to marry her, to have no Children at all, is a Matrimonial Lewdnefs; 'tis only a kind of legal Whoring, Jack, you may call it what you will; I tell you, it's Vice, under the Protection of the Church, as I faid, t'other was Robbery.

Jack. You are very plain with me, that's true. But, I tell you, there is no fuch Thing in my Thoughts.

Tom. And, I tell you, whatever you may perfuade me to, you will never make any Man elfe believe it. The Notion of directing your Houfe, governing your Family, Converfing, Confidence, and fuch Stuff as that; all thele are Pretences, and no more; the Thing is a Woman, a Woman, I tell you, and nothing elfe.

Jack. Nay, if you will make it be fo whether I will or no, I can't help that.

Tom. Why then take a Wife in the ordinary Way of fuitable Years, like a Chriftian.

 $\mathcal{J}ack$ . What, and fill the House again with a new Family? No, that won't do at all.

Tom. Why, if you won't marry like a Chriftian, then live unmarried like a Chriftian. Pr'ythee be a Chriftian one Way or t'other.

But

[ 250 ]

Jack. You are very fevere, Tom; very rigid.

Tom. I love plain Dealing; I am for your doing honeftly, either one Way or t'other. If you are in a ftreight for a Woman, take one in the Name of GoD, and in the Way which GOD has appointed. But to pretend a thoufand Things, and then marry with Views contrary, and inconfiftent with the Ordinance it felf, that's all Grimace; the vifible Occafion is Lewdnefs; fcandalous Lewdnefs, and you cannot carry it off, let your Pretences be what they will.

THIS Discourse ended soon after this. But the Citizen was not fo convinced of the Juffice of his Friend's Reafoning, as to guide him to the wifer Medium, and not to marry at all: But, on the contrary, he purfued the brutal Part, took the Woman, gratified his groffer Appetite, in spite of Argument. In a word, he committed the Matrimonial Abomination I am fo justly exposing. And he felt the Confequences of it many Ways: As, (1.) He destroyed his Conftitution, ruin'd his Health. (2.) He was Blasted, as it were, from Heaven; for he got a Woman of an unquiet furious Temper, that harafs'd him with her Tongue, made a Bedlam of his Houfe, and broke the Peace of his Family. (3.) Endeavouring to oblige One that knew not how to be obliged, he difobliged all his Children; proved an unkind Father, and that drove them from him, some one Way, some another another; and, in a word, he ruined the whole Comfort of his Life; and fuch is the Fruit of Matrimonial Whoredom.

To conclude. This is frequently the Occafion of great Mifchiefs in Families where it happens; it creates conftant Feuds, and, above all things, Jealoufy, indeed it has a direct tendency to it; 'tis as natural for an old Man to be jealous of a young Wife, and an old Woman to be jealous of a young Husband, as it is for People to be afraid of Fire or Thieves, where there is no Body left at home to look after the Houfe. Nor are fuch People at all beholden to the World's Good-will. Nothing is more frequent than for the People, by their common Difcourfe, Flouts, Jeers, and Gibing, to promote thofe Jealoufies, and (if the married Couple have no more Wit) to raife and encreafe them.

CHAP.

2527

CHAP.X.

Of marrying with Inequality of Blood.

Article in Matrimony which they, who would be thought to expect any Felicity in a married Life, ought very carefully to avoid, efpecially if it relates to Families alfo. How fcandaloufly have I known a Lady treated in a Family, though her Fortune has been the very raifing, or at leaft, reftoring the Circumftances of the Perfon who has taken her, only becaufe fhe has been beneath them in Degree? That fhe has not been of noble Blood, or of what they call an antient Family; that the has not been what they call a Gentlewoman, and yet they have not found any Defect either in her Education or Behaviour? How has fhe been fcorned by the Relations, and the Title been hardly granted her, which the Lord of Necessity gives her? And all becaufe of what they call Mechanick Original. Again, Sir G___W___ has married a Lady out of a noble Family. Sir G---- is Master of a vast Fortune, has about feven thoufand Pounds a Year Eftate, and Cash enough in ready Money to purchafe as much more. But. alas! he is of no Family; his Father was a Citizen, and purchafed a Coat of Arms with his Money, but hardly can tell who his Grandfather was:

was; and the Lady is taught to defpife him at that rate, that it is hardly reconcileable to her Senfe, that fhe fhould ever entertain him in the Quality of a Husband. It is true, that fhe had but a mean Fortune, viz. five thousand What then? fhe had much rather Pounds. have married a Scotch Nobleman, as the could have done, the Earl of _____, though he had not above a thousand Pounds a Year. But then fne had had a Man of Quality, and fhe had had a Coronet upon her Coach; fhe had match'd like her felf, and mingled with noble Blood, as fhe ought to have done. But now fhe is Debafed and Difhonoured, fhe is levelled with the Canail; the old Countefs, her Lady-Mother, confidered nothing but the Money; and d____ it, fhe had rather have been King Ch--'s Whore, and then fhe might have been a Duchefs, and her Children had been Dukes of courfe, and had had noble Blood in their Veins by the loweft degree, and royal Blood on the other Side; whereas now, in fhort, fhe looks upon her felf to be little better than Proftituted, and that meerly for an Effate.

WITH this Elevation of Pride, concerning Blood and Family, fhe treats her Husband with the utmost Difdain: She will have her Equipage by her felf; fhe will not fo much as give his Liveries, but the Livery of her own Family; fhe won't have his Coat of Arms painted upon her Coach, or engraven upon her Plate; much lefs will fhe fuffer her Coat of Arms to be quartered with his, if fhe could help it, on any Occasion; and 'tis a great Mortification to her, that her eldeft Son, attach'd to his Father, and honouring his Perfon, learns not to copy after her; and is not ashamed of the Blood of his his Paternal Line, by whom he inherits fo fair an Eftate.

[ 254 ]

Mx Lady carries on her Refentment fo far, that fhe won't vifit her Husband's Sifter, tho' fhe has married an Earl, becaufe fhe difdains to rank below her; and as to all the reft of Sir G——'s Relations, they are looked upon as not worth making a Bow to them, other than fhe would do to a Country Farmer, that comes to her Ladyfhip to pay his Rent.

AMONG her Intimates, she laments her Miffortune that fhe fhould be fo difhonoured in her Match; wonders at her felf, how fhe fubmitted to let fuch a Fellow come to Bed to her. and is horridly provoked that fhe has had any Children; for the prefent fhe has parted Beds with him a great while; fo long, that fhe thanks GOD fhe has forgot him in that relation : fhe made a Political Quarrel with him three Years before, and fhe fwore to him, he fhould have no more to do with her that Way, fhe would as foon lie with her Coachman; and fhe has kept her Vow most facred : And was it not for fome Conveniences of her Way of Living, Equipages, the Manfion Houfe, which is new and fine, and coft fifty thousand Pounds building, and the like, fhe would feign another Quarrel, and step out of his House too, and then she fhould be my Lord _____'s Daughter again, not my Lady ____, the Wife of a City Knight, which is much at one to her, as if fhe had been Mrs. ____, the Shop-keeper's Wife at Winchefter, or Mrs. Any-Body; or efpecially it had been much more honourable to the Family, to have been Lady Mayore s; then, at least, the had been Quality for a Year; and her good Man

[ 255 ]

Man had been once a Lord, though his Father had been the Lord knows who.

WHEN fhe talks to his Servants, that is to fay, those that are his Servants too, fhe taunts them with fuch an Air of Haughtiness, as if they were Dogs, not Servants; while she treats her own Servants with a difference, as if they were as much superior to his, as she thinks the is to their Master.

THE honeft Gentleman her Husband, is a Man of Senfe and Breeding, and particularly of abundance of Good-humour: He thought at first he should have been very happy in a Wife, and he chofe her for what he thought fhe had, (but fhe had it not) namely, good Tem-per, Senfe and Sincerity. He could have bet-tered his Fortune in a Wife, by thirty or forty thousand Pounds, whenever he had pleased; so that he neither married her for her Family, or her Fortune. Tho' he was not a Lord, he was able to buy a Lord when he pleafed; and as much despised a Title, unless it had been by Blood, or obtained by special Merit, as she adored it, only for the meer Equipage of it. His disappointment in her Temper was a great Affliction to him; and he did not fail to expoftulate it with her, tho' with the utmost Civility. But Pride had gotten the ascendant fo much over her Temper, that fhe was refolved to ruin her Family-Peace, as it were, in meer revenge, for her false Step, as she called it, in marrying beneath her Quality; tho' fhe really revenged it only upon her felf.

AGAIN; her Pride was attended with fuch unhappy Circumftances, that it exposed her very much, and made her the common Jeft of all the Families of Gentry, and even Nobility also alfo, of which there are a great many in the Country where the lives : As I have faid, that Sir G — was a well-bred Gentleman, and a Man of Senfe, he was acceptable to every Body; kept the beft Company, and was very well received in all Places; nor, however the Lady acted, did the Nobility, even of the first Rank, think it below them, both to Converse with him, and even to Vifit him; which relished fo ill with her Ladyship, that she could hardly refrain her little Sarcafins, even before them; reflecting on Perfons of Quality keeping Company below themfelves, as fhe call'd it, and of the antient Nobility debafing their Blood, by mingling with Mechanicks; that their Anceftors fcorned to intermarry with the Commonalty, and kept the Honour of their Families entire and untainted.

SHE was roundly anfwered once, at her own Table, by a certain noble Lord of an antient Family, who told her:

MADAM, fays be, your Ladyfhip very much miftakes the Cafe. In former Days, the Nobility poffefs'd great Eftates, and had powerful Dependencies; the Landed Intéreft was theirs, and almost all the Poffeilion was their own; the Commons held under them either in Vaffalage or Villainage, either as Vaffals, Tenants, Cottagers, or Servants; and then it was indeed beneath a Man of Quality to match among the Vaffals.

But then two Things are to be obferved, which have happened in England fince that Time.

1. THE Commons have grown rich by Industry and Commerce.

2. THE

[ 257 ]

2. THE Nobility are become poor, or at least poorer; be it by Sloth and Luxury, I do not determine.

THE Confequence is this, that the Nobility fell their Eftates, and the Commons buy them : And fo the Landed Intereft is feparated; and the Commons posses, I believe, ten Parts of twelve, hardly leaving the other two Parts of twelve to the better guided Nobility.

THEN, Madam, of thefe whom we still call the Commons, great Numbers of them are of noble Families; for the Gentry bringing their Sons up to Industry and Trade, they have found the Sweets of Commerce in fuch a manner, that they have raifed innumerable Families out of nothing; by which means it now is come to país, that many of our best Gentry are embarked in Trade; and there are fome as good Families among the Tradefmen, as most, out of that Class; we often go into the City to get Fortunes for our Sons; and many noble Families, funk by the Folly and Luxury of their Predeceffors, are reftored, by marrying into the Families of those that you call Me-chanicks; and, Madam, (added his Lordship) the Children of those Families, thus raifed by their Merit, are not eafily diftinguished from fome of the beft Houfes in the Kingdom.

HERE his Lordship thought he had pleased the Lady, becaufe the had three Sons, very fine from being pleased with his Difcourfe, she could not forbear being almost rude to his Lordship, and told him, she thought the Nobility could not Match fo among the Commons, without corrupting their Blood; and that those that had done to ought to be no more efteemed fteemed Gentlemen, or to rank among the antient Families.

[ 258 ] .

H1s Lordfhip finiled. Well, Madam, fays his Lordship, then you must let the Tradesimen keep their Money too, as well as keep their Daughters; and we fhall continue to decline and become poor, by our riotous and extravagant Living; and fo, in a few Ages more, the Wealth of the Nation may be almost all in the Hands of the trading Part of the People; and the decayed Nobility may be as Defpicable as they may be Poor. Pray, added be, what would all our noble Blood do for us without our Eftates? And pray, Madam, fays he, be pleafed to look into Things, and fee how many noble Families are, at this time, the Offspring of Trade; we do not find, that their Posterity are less valued among the Nobility, or lefs deferve it. Two Dukes, adds his Lordship, are, at this time, the Grandfons, and one Nobleman, the Son of Sir Fosiab Child, who was but a Tradefman; and the noble Families of Excefter, of Onflow, of Ar-, of many more, are married to the Daughters of Tradefmen; and, on the other hand, the Sons of Sir James Bateman, Sir Thomas Scawen, and feveral others, are married to the Daughters of our Nobility.

HIS Lordship was going on; but she begg'd him to fay no more of that, fearing he would have brought it down to her felf at last; and fo the Discourse went off. But the Lady was handsomely reproved.

THESE are fome of the Fruits of unequal Marriages, and in which much of this Matrimonial Whoredom may be committed; and I call it fo, becaufe the fubmitting to lie with a Man, only on the Account of a Settlement or Fortune; Fortune; at the fame time defpifing, and, in the vileft manner, contemning the Man; is a meer felling the Perfon for a Slave, or, though the Words are fomething harfh, proftituting the Perfon for the fake of the Money. And what is that more or lefs, according to my Notion, than Matrimonial Whoredom?

The next Article is that of Unsuitable Estates. This is of the fame Kind with the last, and, in its Degree, is equally destructive; and therefore I join them together in the fame Chapter; the only Difference is, that the first respects a Perfon of Quality marrying a Mechanick, a Patrician, or one of the Blood of the Patricii, marrying a Plebeian: But this latter looks a Stage lower, and refpects only the Difference of Eftates, where the Blood may be the fame; which Difference, however, is carried on by fome to greater Refentments than among the Nobility. This happens frequently among Tradefmen, and is diffinguished by many People, very much to their Difadvantage. Sir M - G was a City Baronet, that is, the Son of a Money Baronet; he married a Lady, the Daughter of a rich Citizen, not in the Bloom of her Youth, far from Beautiful; but then he had a vaft Fortune with her; all this was well of his Side. But, what is fhe ? Why, in the first Place, bringing her to a level with himfelf, fhe has a great deal of Money, that is true, and he has little or Nothing; he has a great deal of good Manners, and good Hu-mour, fhe very little of either; he is Handfome, the next Door to Frightful: She infults him upon the Inequality of her Fortune. What does he fay to her in return? Has he nothing to answer on his Side ? Truly, no, not at first. S 2 But

But being a Man of Breeding, as I faid above, he took it quietly, and was eafy; gave her all manner of Liberties, made no reply, gave her not one ill Word; till, at length, being provoked beyond all possible Degrees of human Patience, he refolved to make her a terrible Return; and, indeed, he was forely provoked, that he was. He first begg'd of her to be easy and quiet, and to use him better, and manage her felf better. She provoked him fo much with her vile Reproaches and Reflections, upon his being a Beggar, as fhe call'd it, and making a Figure with her Money, that one Day it broke out into a Flame that could not be quenched. But it was his particular good Fortune to have feveral of her own Friends to be Witneffes of the Provocation, and fo far to justify him, as, at least, to witness in his Behalf, that her Language was unfufferable.

NOR is it to be wondered at, that when he did break out, he did it with fuch a Fury that conquered all her Refiftance, and that put a full check to her Clamour; for it touch'd her in the most fensible Part, namely, her Character as to Modesty.

HE gave her this, even the very first time, in a full broad Side, as the Sailors call it, and when, as I fay, her own Relations were prefent. But he did not do it, till she had long and very often provoked him, by reproaching him with her Fortune, and his want of a Fortune, and that with fo much Bitterness, that even some of those Relations of her's begg'd her to forbear, and have done with it; and he, perceiving that Relation inclined to speak, withdrew, to give her an Opportunity, which the improved, and earness entry entreated her to forbear; bear; told her, it was now too late to reflect upon thofe Things; that they had Money enough to make them both happy; and that, let it be whofe it would before, it was a Stock in common now, and the fhould never make their Lives unhappy now about the foolifh Queftion, who brought it? She told her, the might eafily fee her Husband was exceedingly moved with what the had faid already; and that the would certainly provoke him by fuch outrageous Ufage, to make her fome bitter return; that the ought to confider the was a Wife, and that it is always in a Husband's Power to make a Woman's Life uneafy to her, efpecially when he has Juftice on his Side.

SHE was fo far from being prevailed upon by this calm and cool Reafoning, that fhe flew out into a Paffion againft her Husband, though he was not in the Room; reviled him over and over with his living gay upon her Fortune, while he was but a Beggar himfelf, and the like; fo that the poor Lady, who had talked fo calmly to her, had not room to put in a Word.

IN the highth of this Feud the Husband came in again, and calmly defired her to have done, and be quiet, and, at leaft, to talk no more of it then, when fhe feemed to be in a Paffion. But 'twas all one; fhe run on till, in a word, fhe was out of Breath, and began to have done, meerly for want of Strength, not Rage. To proceed:

Well, Madam, fays he, now, I hope, 'tis iny turn to fpeak a little; then, turning his Speech to the Lady that had fpoken in his Abfence, and to her other Relations, he gave them a brief Account how long fhe had treated him in this Manner; how little Occafion he had S 3 given given her for it; and with what Patience he had born it: How just it was for him to fay, that he could bear it no longer, and that he was refolved to use her as she deferved. Then, turning to hisWife, who ftill upbraided him with marrying her for her Money : He faid, 'tis very true, Madam, I did fo; and who the Devil would have married you for any thing elfe? He added, that if the would find any One to take his Bargain off of his Hands, he would return all the Money again, to be rid of her: And if fhe could not, fince the had taken him, and he was unhappily bound to ftand to the Agreement, he infifted, she should act the Part of a Wife, not of a Termagant; of a Gentlewoman, not a Billinfgate; and that, fince she had taken him, let her Fortune be what it will, he expected to be used as well, as if he had taken her upon an equal Foot, otherwife he is fold to her for a Slave, which he did not understand to be in the Contract.

SHE revil'd him upon this, with his taking her Money with defign to Abufe her; he reproaches her with giving him her Money and her Perfon too, upon a worfe Occafion; he tells her, he could have lived without her Money better than fhe could live without a Man; that he only hired himfelf out to her to be her Servant, (he called it by a harder Name) and that he had earned all her Money by lying with her, which a Porter would hardly have done cheaper.

IT is true, this was Bitter : But there were two Misfortunes, on her Side, attending it.

I. THAT she extorted it from him. And,

[ 263 ]

2. THAT it was true; both thefe joined to excufe the Knight, who otherwife, and as I faid, till by long and unfufferable Taunts and ill Ufage, he was put a little out of himfelf, was a Perfon of all possible Temper and Manners.

THIS also brings it home to my Point, namely, that thefe lewd ill-principled Matches are often as Miferable as they are Scandalous, as Unhappy as they are Unfeemly; and as they begin in Wickednefs, they end in Weaknefs; for Crime and Shame follow one another.

I fhall, perhaps, be asked here, What this Unfuitable and Unequal marrying relates to my Title, and to the Subject I am upon, (viz.) of Matrimonial Whoredom? And why I ramble from my Text? But I fhall make it out, that I am not gone from my Subject at all; becaufe almoft all thofe Inequalities and Unfuitable Things, which I complain of as the Bane of Matrimony, are generally the Confequences of thofe Marriages, which are guided by the Tail rather than the Head; forced on by the Inclination rather than the Underftanding, pufhed by the Impetuofity of the corrupt Part, not guided by the fteddy Refults of Reafon; the Fruit of Defire not Judgment, and with a View to fenfual Pleafure, not folid Enjoyments.

THESE are the great Moving-Wheels in the Machines of rafh and unguided Love; the Paffion of Love, not the Quality, is the Weight that makes them move; it is the Fuel of Love, not the Flame; the Flame would be pure, were the Materials that feed it pure: But S 4 when when the Combuftibles are naufeous, the Burning fcatters noxious Vapours; like the Stink-Pots, which the Turks ufed to throw into Ships when they Boarded them, which would poifon the poor Men out of their clofe Quarters, and make them run out, though they were fure to be killed.

SECRET, lewd and ungoverned Defires, make thefe open and fcandalous Doings fo frequent; were it all done in a criminal Way, I fhould take notice of it in Lump, as a Breach of the Laws of GOD and Man; and, as the Text fpeaks, an Iniquity to be punified by the Judge, Job xxii. 28. But it is quite otherwife here; the Fire is covered, the Stench is concealed, and we have all the criminal filthy Part acted under the difguife of Virtue, and the Protection of Law. This is the Offence, this is the Grievance complained of; and this the Reafon why I give it the new and, perhaps, a little fhocking Title of Matrimonial Whoredom.

THE meaning is plain; 'tis a Breach of Law under the Protection of the Law; 'tis a Crime, thro' the Policy of Hell, plac'd out of the reach of Juftice; 'tis a Sin against the meaning of Matrimony, but within the Letter of it; 'tis a Wickedness couch'd under the Name of Virtue; 'tis, in fhort, a Devil in Masquerade, whoring in the Vizor of Matrimony; a Sinner dress'd up for a Saint, a foul Difease under the Term of a Decay; 'tis Idolatry under the Cover of true Worship, and, as I faid above, Lewdness under the Protection of the Church.

WHAT Excufe can it be to fay, that the Law cannot reach it? Are there not many Sins which the Commands of GOD prohibits and forbids, which;

which, notwithstanding no Law can punish ? And are they lefs Criminal for that, or the more? The Laws of the Land punish no Man for Avarice, yet Covetoufnefs is expressly for-bid in the Scripture; and the Love of Money is called the Root of all Evil. The Laws of the Land take no notice of our Anger, Paffion, Fighting, Gluttony, Excefs of Drink, and feveral other Things, except Murther, Breach of the Peace, Drunkennefs, Ec. are the Confequences. You may eat till you gorge your Stomach, and deftroy your Life ; you may SIP, and WHET, and doze Nature, till it expires in a Lethargick Sotifme, you may Rage, Storm, and make your Houfe a Hell, and the Law takes no Cognifance of you. But no Man will fay, they are not all deteftable and abhorred Crimes for all this; unbecoming a Man of Senfe, and inconfiftent with a Man of Religion.

THUS, in the Cafe before us, the Law is filent, and the Sinner fafe, provided you do but marry. Let the Foundation of it be what it will, let the Reafon of it be all as grofs and corrupt as Hell; the Motive all Sulphur and Salt, the Views as vitious and filthy as Words can exprefs; that's all to be anfwered for fomewhere elfe, and you take it upon your felves, fo you do but marry; the Law, like Gallio, the Deputy of Achaia, cares for none of thefe Things, Acts xviii. 17.

BUT, are they the lefs Criminal ? Is the lewd Part lefs offenfive? Is the Soul lefs corrupted ? Is the Man lefs debauched? Not at all; but rather the more: Nay, the Devil, I make no queftion, as he has infinitely more Advantage to prompt, fails not to make use of the AdvanAdvantage, for he's no Fool: I'll answer for Satan fo far, he can hardly be ever charg'd with missing his Opportunities, or not feeing his Times and Seasons; he never fails to break in at every weak Place, and always knows where those weak Places are.

WE cannot doubt but the Devil, if you will grant there is fuch a Thing, takes all the Advantage that can be of this Part; he fhews the Law protecting; and perfuades you, that 'tis therefore juftifying the Fact, a Fallacy as black as himfelf; he prompts the vitious Appetite, and then fhews you how 'tis lawful to gratify it; he quotes Dryden upon you, and fhews the Cafe of King David, and the Polygamifts, for a Parallel.

What can be more fpecious, what more eafily gilded over? Inclination calls for it, and the Law allows it. Under this Pretence, all the criminal Things which the Marriage-Bed is capable of, are juftified.

BUT was the true intent and meaning of the Laws of GOD or Man impartially judged of, or enquired into, the Cafe would be quite otherwife. GOD forbid, we fhould dare to fay, that the Inftitution of Matrimony, which was Pure, as the Inftitutor was Holy, could be defigned for a Pandor to our impure and corrupt Inclinations! or that GOD's holy Ordinance can be made a Plea for any of our unholy and vitious Practices; and, above all, that they fhould be made a Cover and Protection for them.

ALL the Heats and Fires, rais'd within us by the Acrimony of the Blood, by the Inflamation of the Spirits and Animal Salts, are kindled from Hell, fet on Fire by the Devil, and made to rage and boil up in the Veins, by the inflaming [ 267 ] flaming vitiated Thoughts and Imagination, that Imagination which GOD himfelf fays is Evil, and only Evil, and that continually; and whatever the juft and ferious Reafonings are which we fhould ufe upon this, and the Confequences we fhould draw; furely they are not that we fhould apply our felves to quench this Fire in the Lakes of Sodom, (I do not mean literally as to Sodom) that we fhould ftudy Ways to fatiate and gratify those impure Defires; and then finding fome artful Method, give a loose to our Appetite under the Cover of a legal Protection, fheltering our Wickedness under the Letter of the Law.

On the other hand; if I was to enter into the Affirmative or Positive Part, and tell you what you ought to do, I should fay, these are the Deeds of the Body, which you should mortify, if you will expect to live, Rom. viii. 4. the Thorns in the Flesh, which you should pray againft, 2 Cor. xii. 7. the Enemies you should ftruggle with; and this is what the Scripture means, when it speaks of our crucifying the Flesh, with its Affections and Lusts, Gal. v. 24. But I must not Preach. To talk Scripture to a Man when he has a Woman in his Head, is talking Gofpel to a Kettle Drum; the Noife is too great; the Clamour of his Vices is too loud; and he will answer coldly, as the Wife Men of Athens answered St. Paul, We will hear thee again of this Matter, Acts xxvii. 32. or to put it into a kind of a Paraphrafe; We will hear thee again, fome time or other, when we have nothing elfe to do.

I come therefore to fearch the Crime, and fully to expose it. Your own Reason, and, if you have any, your Religion, will instruct you to reform it. Thefe unfuitable Matches are generally derived from thefe corrupt and depraved Principles, and thefe vile Appetites are the Things that carry us on to break into all Rules, Religious and Moral, in the purfuit of Women.

to

WHEN the Appetite governs the Man, he breaks all the Fences, and leaps over all the Bars that Reafon and Religion have fixed in his Way; and if he can but juftify himfelf, by pretence of keeping within the Bounds of the Law, tho' it be only the Letter of it, he troubles not himfelf with the intent and meaning of it.

HENCE all the Matrimonial Inequalities, the marrying at unfuitable Years, with unfuitable Fortunes, and all the indecent and ridiculous, not inceftuous, Matches, which we fee daily among us; fo that to fpeak of unfuitable Matches, is far from being out of the Way of my Bufinefs, or remote from my Subject; they are, generally fpeaking, from the fame impure and corrupt Originals, impure Streams, from the fame poifoned and corrupted Fountain.

THE Man is eager, urged by the Importunities of his vitiated Appetite; his Head is full of it; he runs from Place to Place to find an Object. To fay his Eyes are blinded with the Fumes and Vapours of his fermented Blood, is to fpeak according to Nature, it cannot be otherwife; as we fay Love is blind, and fees no Faults, fo 'tis undoubted, the Paffion is blind, the Rage of the Appetite blinds the Eyes, and he is not capable of feeing even the Defects of Nature, much lefs to diftinguifh the unfuitablenefs of Objects, and the inequalities of Circumftances; he is ftill farther off from feeing the [ 269 ] the Defects of the Mind, the Unfuitablenefs of the fuperiour Parts; 'tis all out of his Way.

As 'tis in the more vitious Part Men often abandon handfome and beautiful Ladies, their lawful Wives, and take up with the fouleft, uglieft, and most difagreeable Creatures, to make their Whores; fo in this Humour of marrying, meerly to quench Defire, the Vapour darkens the Eyes, the Vice clouds the Sight, the Man or Woman' takes what Offers, making no Judgment, no Diffinction of worthy or unworthy, fuitable or unfuitable, young or old; 'tis the Sexes that are only concerned; 'tis the Fire that is to be quench'd; neither Reafon, Religion or Reputation, are hardly allowed to give a Vote in the Cafe, nay, fometimes common Senfe: And, in this Heat, I fay, most of the unequal unfuitable Marriages are made; and, what is it all? what can it be called? Is this Matrimony ! Is this being join'd together according to Gon's holy Ordinance, or is it Whoring under the Mask of the holy Ordinance! Is this a chafte and honourable Marriage ! Is this the Eed undefiled, or is it rather a meer Matrimonial Whoredom !

I might include in this fame Chapter, the unfuitable Tempers which often come together on fuch Occafion; but as it is true, that this is a thing not always to be avoided, and is what too frequently happens in Marriages made with the utmost Confideration; fo I thall convince the Reader that I am careful not to run from the Subject in hand, by paffing it over as a thing out of my Way at prefent. It is not always possible fully to difcover the Tempers and Dispositions of one another before Marriage; and they that make the faireft and moft diligent Inquiry, fhould firft be fure they know, and regulate their own Tempers, that the Fault be not at home while they lay it upon their Relatives. But this would require a long Difcourfe; I have not room for it here.

age;

UNSUITABLE Principles in Religion would alfo come in here. But, I think, the People I am defcribing need not guarrel much about that; for all Principles, all Religion, feems to be burnt up in the impure Flame, and therefore all Care and Concern about them dies with it : How fhould that Man be fuppofed to think of Religion, who, in fpight of Reafoning, and in a perfect neglect of a Family of feven Children, could plead Necessity of having a Wife; make a thousand Shifts to turn off the fcandalous Part, and yet infift upon having fuch a Wife as fhould bring him no Children; that he might fatiate his Guft of Senfuality without the incumbrance of Procreation; contract Marriage with a Bar only to the original Reafon of Marriage, and enjoy his corrupt Pleasures under the difguise of God's holy Ordinance. Could this Man be fuppofed to confider the Unfuitablenefs or Inequality of any thing, much lefs the Temper or the Principles of the Woman he married.

AND the Confequence made it appear; for happening to marry a Woman that had neither good Temper, or good Principles, he ruined the Peace of his Family, difperfed and difobliged his Children, thruft them out of his immediate Care, and left their Education and Inftruction to other Relations; in a word, he robb'd himfelf [ 271 ] felf of the Comfort of his Children, and his Children of the Comfort of a Father.

AND where was the Religion of all this? In fhort, what of Matrimony was in it all? what was it but, as I faid before, a poifoned Stream from a corrupted Fountain, a difhoneft Flame quenched in a difhoneft Manner? And it can be no otherwife, where the Soul is governed by the Body, where the fpiritual Part is over-ruled by the flefhly, where the fenfual directs the rational, as is the Cafe here exactly; I fay, it can be no otherwife. The Order of Things is inverted; Nature is fet with her Bottom upward; Heaven is out of the Mind, and Hell feems to have taken Poffefhon.

Nature inverted; the Infernal Fires Burn inward, raging in corrupt Defires : Such as the fulph'rous Lake from whence they came, Alike the Fuel, and alike the Flame.

CHAP.

272

CHAP. XI.

Of going to Bed under solemn Promises of MARRIAGE, and although those Promises are after-wards performed; and of the Scandal of a Man's making a Whore of his own Wife.

Have dwelt upon the Inequalities of Matrimony the longer, becaufe of their Variety. I come now to fingle Cafes again, and I fhall difpatch them in fingle Sections as I go. I have now before me a very particular Cafe, in which Marriage is made a healing or protection to a fcandalous Crime. Promife of Marriage is Marriage in the Abstract, fay our Advocates for Lewdnefs; and therefore for the Parties to lie together is no Sin, provided they fincerely intend to marry afterwards, and faithfully perform it.

THIS is, in fhort, a fcandalous Defence of a fcandalous Offence; 'tis the weakeft Way of arguing that any Point of fuch Moment was ever fupported by. It is fo far from covering the Offence against GOD, that it does not recompence the Perfonal Injury done to Man. I have [ 273 ] have hinted at it already in the Chapter, and given you there the Opinion of the beft of Men, and particularly the Cenfure of the Protestant Churches upon it, in which, as I faid, they are more strict, and punish with more Severity, than in Cases of simple Fornication.

IT may be true, that Promife of Marriage is Marriage, but it is not marrying; it may be called Marriage, or rather a Species of Marriage; and therefore our Law will oblige fuch Perfons to marry afterwards, as well in Cafes where they have not confummated the Agreement, as where they have; and will give Damages, and that very confiderable, in proportion to the Circumftances of the Parties, where thefe Promifes are broken; effecially where the Perfon makes the Breach, by marrying another purely in Contravention of thofe Promifes. And this is all the Remedy the injured Perfon can obtain.

Also fuch a Promife, efpecially if made before Witnefs, will be, and frequently is admitted as a lawful Obftacle or Impediment, why a Perfon under fuch an Obligation fhould not be allowed to marry any other; nay farther, the Perfon claiming by Virtue of fuch a Promife, may forbid the Bans, as we call it; or may ftand forth, and fhew it as a Caufe, even at the very Book, why the two Perfons coming to the Book may not be lawfully joined together; and the Minifter cannot proceed, if fuch a Caufe is declared, till the Matter is decided before the proper Judges of fuch Cafes.

BUT all this does not reach the Cafe propos'd at all; for were Promifes of Marriage thus allowed, and lying together upon fuch Promifes T lawful. lawful, you would have no more Occafion of a fair and formal Efpoufal, and we fhould have very little open Marrying among us. And what Confusion would this make in the World? How would the facred Obligations of Marriage be enforced, Claim of Inheritances fecur'd, Legitimacy of Children clear'd up, and Obligation of Maintenance be preferv'd? How and where would these Promifes be recorded, when denied and revoked? How would they be brought into Evidence, and the Offender against them be convicted? In a word, what Confusion would fuch loose coming together make in Families, and in Successions, in dividing the Patrimonies and Effects of Intestate Parents; and on many other Occasions.

OUR Laws have therefore carefully provided, that Marriages fhould not be efteemed fair and legal, if not performed in a fair and open Manner, by a Perfon legally qualified to perform the Ceremony, and appointed to it by Office; and the Government is always concerned and careful to punish any Defect, in the Peformance even of those qualified Perfons, when they connive at any Breach upon the Inftitution . in the Office of Matrimony; fuch as marrying People clandeftinely, in improper Places, at unfeafonable Times, and without the apparent Confent of Parties; and though the Law is very tender with refpect to making fuch Marriages void, yet they are much the more fevere in fixing a Punishment upon the Person that officiates; in order, if poffible, to prevent all clandeftine and unlawful Matches.

THE Law then requiring an open and formal coming together, as a just Recognition and Execution of all previous and private Engagements, ments, and refufing to legitimate thofe Engagements, however folemn, and however attefted, fo as to admit them to pafs for a real and legal Marriage; at the fame time forbidding all Confummation of fuch Agreements, till the open and appointed Form of Marriage, fettled by the Legiflature, is fubmitted to, and mutually performed. All coming together of the Man and Woman, upon the Foot of fuch private Engagements, Promifes or Contracts, is thereby declared unlawful, and is certainly finful; 'tis no Marriage; the Children are Baftards; the Man and Woman are guilty of Fornication; the Woman, let her Quality be what it will, is no better or other than a W____, and the Man a _____; what you pleafe to call him.

5

BUT now, notwithstanding all this, we have an Excuse ready, which is, it feems, growing Popular; at least, it is calculated for abatement of the Censure, and alleviating the Crime or the Guilt, and confequently it is calculated to legitimate the Practice also; that is to fay, they allow it is not strictly legal; 'tis not a full Compliance with the Laws of the Land, and therefore they comply with that Part, and marry afterwards.

IT may be fuppofed, the Advocates for this Practice have ranged over all the Protestant or even Christian Nations of Europe, to find out fome Allowance for this Wickedness in the Practice of any other Country; and I have traced them in the Enquiry, and can testify, that they have but one little Corner of Europe to fix it in, and that is, our little diminutive would-be-Kingdom, called, The Isle of Man. And here Mr. Cambden tells us, it is a Custom, or rather was a Custom, that if a Woman be T 2 with Child, and the proper Father of the Child marries the Woman within two Years after its Birth, the Child fhall be legitimate.

Now supposing this to be fo; 'tis to be obferved,

1. THAT this was nothing but a Cuftom, in favour of the poor innocent Child, whofe Hardthip was great, in fuffering the Reproach of a Crime it was no Way concern'd in.

2. THAT this was only a Cuftom in that barbarous Corner, and before the People there had received the Chriftian Religion, or were civilized under a regular Government.

3. THAT it is not allowed fo at this time, fince the Christian Religion is received, and have been reformed, no not in that Country.

THE Advocates for it are therefore beaten from all their Defences; and they can find the Practice no where juftified, no where continued. All they have left for it now is, that they will not have it be Criminal in the Sight of Heaven, no Breach upon Confcience; in a word, no Sin: And if this can be obtained, the Practice has but one Obftruction more to remove, in order to make it general, and that is, the rifque the Woman runs, from the Weaknefs of the Obligation of Honour, and from the Men's making light of the Promife, after they have obtained the favour on her Side.

HENCE it feems the ftrongest tye upon Modern Virtue, is the regard to Safety; and the Women pay a greater Homage to that Security than to the Duty; to their Interest than to their Virtue; to their Alimony than to their Confcience; and to their Prosperity than to their [ 277 ] their Posterity. Let us state this Cafe a little clearer than it feems to stand in your present View, and see if we can bring the World to have a right Notion of it, for at present, I think, the generality of Mankind are greatly mistaken about it.

I. THE Obligation we are all under to the Laws of GOD, is a Foundation-Principle, every Chriftian muft allow it; and that we ought not to commit any Crime against Heaven, that is, not to do any thing which he has forbidden. He that denies Principles is not to be difputed with; and therefore I lay this down as a Fundamental, a Maxim, which, without begging the Question, I may take for granted, while I live among Chriftians, and am talking to fuch.

2. THE Obligation we are under to the Laws of the Country, under whole Government and Protection we live, is a rational Deduction from, and is commanded by the Laws of GoD, viz. to be fubject to the higher Powers, and in all Things lawful to fubmit to Governours.

3. THE Obligation we are under to our own Character, and the regard to Reputation, are undifputed; and we ought to do what is of good Report, feeing a good Name is better than Life.

ALL thefe three eftablish the Rules of Marriage to be not only lawfully imposed, but abfolutely neceffary, and that they ought to be exactly complied with: And all of them make it Criminal for any Perfons, that is to fay, Man and Woman, to lie together before, they are legally married.

HAVING

HAVING laid this down as a fettled and ftated Preliminary; it then follows, that no pre-exifting Engagement or Promife between the Man and Woman, no, nor any fubfequent Performance of the Promife, can be fubfituted in the room of Marriage, or make the coming together (which is fo, as above, forbidden) be lawful or juftifiable.

NOR can any fubfequent Performance, I fay, take off the Crime or Scandal of what is paft. It is true, a fubfequent Marriage makes it lawful for them to come together afterward, becaufe it is not indeed unlawful for fuch to marry. It is not unlawful for a Man to make his Whore his Wife, however foolifh; but it is unlawful for any Man to make his Wife his Whore, however feemingly and intentionally Honeft.

But the Promife, fay they, makes the Woman his Wife. I grant it does fo indeed, in Point of Right, but the Form alone gives the legal Poffethon. Signing a Writing, and depofiting an Earneft, or part of the Money, gives a Man a Right to the Eftate he has thus purchafed, and he may fairly be faid to have bought the Eftate; but he must have the Deeds fairly executed, fign'd, feal'd and delivered, and Livery and Seifin given in Form, before he can receive the Rents, and before he can take Poffethon of the Land, or the Tenants own him for their Landlord.

UNDER the old femill Inftitution, which, it must be allowed, was critically just in every Part, being inftituted immediately from Heaven, a Woman betrothed or espoused to a Man, was called his Wife, yet he never knew her till fhe [ 279 ] the was openly and lawfully married; that is, till he took her in Form.

THE Virgin Mary was efpoufed to Foseph, but fhe was not married, or, as the Word is, there used, he had not taken her to him; yet she is called his Wife, and he is called her Husband, Matth. i. 15. his Mother Mary was espoused But before they came together for was found with Child in the next Verse Foseph is call'd her Husband, ver. 19. Foseph her Husbaud being a just Man AGAIN, ver. 20. The Angel of the LORD appeared to Joseph in a Dream, faying, Fear not to take unto thee Mary thy Wife: And again, ver. 24. He did as the Angel of the LORD had bidden him, and took unto him his Wife.

THUS the Efpoufal made the Woman a Wife. But they were not allowed to come together, until the publick Ceremony of taking her to him; which publick Ceremonies alfo are to be feen at large in the Rites and Ceremonies of the Jewish Church. Vid. Dr. Godwin.

IN like manner, a Man and a Woman engaged by Promife, are Man and Wife, in foro Confcientia; but they are not legally Man and Wife, till they are legally and publickly married in due Form, as the Law requires.

ALL this Preliminary is made needful by the wicked Pretence of being Man and Wife, as they call it, in the Sight of GOD, which is a Miftake: They really are not Man and Wife in the Sight of GOD, any other than as efpoufed; fo indeed they are and cannot be lawfully feparated, much lefs joined to any other Perfon, but they are not effectual Man and Wife in the Sight of GOD, till they are fo alfo in the Sight of Man; till the Publick Marriage, T 4 which which is a Part of the Ordinance it felf, is performed, whereby the Efpoufals are recognized, and the Law fatisfied.

AND what is this Promife they generally fpeak of in fuch Cafes? Is it not expressly to made, and do they not call it, a Promife of Marriage? Is not the Woman's Excufe or Plea delivered always in those very Words, He promifed to marry me; at least these are the Promifes we mean, and that I am now speaking of. As to those wicked Promifes between two, so to take one another, and to live as Man and Wife without the Ceremony, it may be called an Agreement, but it is not a Promise of Marriage, and so does not relate to our present Difcourse.

BUT now, to bring it down to the Cafe in hand. Suppose here are two young People, a Man and Woman, they treat of Marriage, the Woman agrees, and the Man folemnly pro-mifes to marry her: But, in the mean time, the Fellow (Hell prompting, and his own Wickednefs tempting) preffes this Woman to let him lie with her. His Arguments are fmooth and fubtle; Why fould you refuse? fays he: We are fairly Man and Wife already by Agreement, (and, in the Sight of GOD, the Intention is the fame thing as the Action) there is nothing more to be done but just a few Words of the Parson, and the formality of repeating it in the Church, and that we will do too as foon as I can get the Licence down, (fuppofe it to be in the Country) or as foon as the Asking in the Church is over; and you may take my Word, for I affure you again, I will be very honest to you, (and then perhaps he fwears to it) and How can you refuse me? And then he kiffes her, and continues urging and teazing teazing her, and wheadling her to it, and perhaps fhe as much inclined to it as he, only more for waiting till Marriage than he; fo that the Devil takes hold of Inclination on both Sides, to bring about the Wickednefs.

UPON thefe Preflings and Importunings, at laft he prevails, and fhe complics. And what is this to be called? The Woman will not allow her felf to be a Whore, no, by no means: The Man declares 'tis no Whoredom, he fcorns the Thoughts of it; he abhors it. He promifed to marry her, and he performed it, and they were married afterwards. He did lie with her indeed, and fhe was with Child first. But what then? they were married before the Child was born; fo that the Child was born in Wedlock; fo that there's no harm done in all that.

But all this is wrong; 'tis all vile and abominable: 'Tis not only Whoring, but 'tis worfe than Whoring, or, if you please, the worft kind of Whoring, and that many Ways.

1. ON the Man's Part; here is a publick Confeilion, that you had a wicked filthy ungovernable Inclination, that could not contain your felf from a Woman for a few Days, but muft gratify your Appetite at the expence of Modefty, Honefty, Juftice to your Wife, Juftice to your own Reputation, Juftice to the Child to be born, and befides all, a Breach of the Laws both of Gop and Man. How fcandalous a Piece of Conduct is it ? How Brutifh, unlike a Man, and unlike a Chriftian ? And all this under a Circumftance fo eafily complied with, under an apparent Agreement for Marriage, and even while the Preparations are making perhaps on both Sides.

2. ON

2. On the Woman's Part ; to fay nothing of the vitious and Beaftly Part, and her want of Modefty, in refpect only to her Sex; yet befides all that, here is a Teftimony of most egregious Folly; a perfect neglect of her own Virtue, and of her Reputation : Abandoning the first to gratify the Man, and rifquing the last on a bare verbal Promise, which it is not only poffible he may break, and probable he will break, but highly improbable that he fhould not; nay, according to the Cuftom of Men, according to the profes'd Notion, and the common Language of the Town, the ought never to expect the performance of fuch a Promife. He's a Rogue, fay they, that gets a Woman with Child before Marriage; and he's a Fool that marries her afterwards: He's a Knave that promifes to marry her; but he's a Fool that performs it.

3. To return to the Man's Part. How abfurd a Thing is it to make a Whore of his own Wife; to expose her for a Whore, who he proposes to embrace as an honeft Woman ever after; to draw her in to be exposed, to be flouted at, to be jefted with, and infulted all her Days, to be the fcorn of her Neighbours, flighted and fhunned by modeft Women, and laughed at by every Body; and all this to gratify a prefent Gust of vitious Defire, which, in a few Days, would be fatisfied without the hazard of Reputation, without Reproach, and without Reproof? How ridiculous does it make the Man, and how ashamed is he afterwards to think of it, even as long as he lives? And it may be, that very Child born, the Product of this Matrimonial Whoredom, shall live to upbraid his own Father Father with it, or perhaps do the fame, and juftify it by his Father's Example.

4. AGAIN, to fpeak of it as to the Woman's Part. How rash, how inconfiderate? To expose her felf to the Reproach of being a Whore, whereas, in a few Days, fhe might have gratify'd both her felf, and her Husband too, without any Scandal to her Character. Now fhe exposes her felf, not only to the Reproach of all her Neighbours, but to the Contempt of the Virtuous, and to the Jeft of the Mob; and, which is more than all the reft, 'tis ten to one but her Husband himfelf comes to upbraid her with it, and, perhaps, hate her for it; at leaft he will be always telling her, how honest he was to perform such a Promife, which no Body but himfelf would have made good, and no Body but a Fool, that is to fay, no Body but her, would have trufted to and indeed, though 'tis ungenerous and unjuft in him to treat her in that Manner, yet 'tis what fhe has a great deal of Reafon to expect, and what fhe really deferves by her Conduct.

In the first Place, as he carried it but very indifferently to her as to Kindness, so he never failed to upbraid her with his extraordinary Honesty in taking her; how just he was, and how infinitely obliged she ought to think she was to him; that that it was what no Body but he would have done: And if he took any thing ill from her, though it was twenty Years after, he would not fail to tell her, fhe was Ingrate; that fhe ow'd him a Debt fhe could never pay; and fo run back the whole Story upon her; and how, if he had not been honefter than fhe was, he had never taken her, and then fhe had been undone.

2. To make the poor Lady compleatly unhappy, he is Jealous of her to the laft degree, and treats her very hardly on that Account; and when fhe expostulates with him upon that Head, and appeals to him for her Conduct ever fince Marriage, which has indeed been blamelefs, the Brute runs it all back to the first and only false Step of her Life, and, with a flout upon all her Integrity and exactness of Living, tells her, with an old Scots Ballad at the End of it:

Titty, Tatty, Kitty, Katty, Falfe to ea Man, falfe to au Men.

It feems, 'tis a proverbial Saying for a Man who has married a Whore, intimating, that as fhe was aWhore to him, fo fhe would be aWhore to any Body elfe, or to every Man.

THUS fhe is all her Life fubject to the Reproach; not forty Years Wedlock, and an unblameable Life, will make it up; the Debt is never paid, and yet always a paying; and all this for a fhameful yielding her felf up a few Days before the Form would have fanctified the Action.

Nox is it fufficient to plead, no not to himself, that he importuned her, or surprized her,

her, or drew her in; those Things are all forgot; or, if remember'd, amount to no Excuse. The Breach in the Woman's Virtue being once made, he must be a Man of uncommon Temper, and of a great deal of good Humour, that does not one time or other throw it in her Face, and load her with the Reproach of it.

IN the next Place, the hazard on the Woman's Part is unequal, extremely unequal; for the runs the hazard of Mortality. Suppose the Man would be just to her, and marry her; but then, as I once knew to be the Case, suppose he falls fick and dies; the Woman is undone, fhe is left with Child; fhe cannot claim the Man, nor the Child inherit from him as a Father; fhe has not only no right to any Thing he has left, but, for want of a Power to make fuch a Claim, the difcovers that the is not a legal Wife, but was his Whore; and this in fpight of ten thousand Promises of Marriage; ay, though there were ten thousand Witneffes of those Promises. So certain is it, that no Promifes of Matrimony make a Marriage, and that a Woman cannot expose her felf with greater Difadvantage, than to take Matrimony upon truft; that all the Affurance that it is polfible for a Man to give her, cannot be an equivalent to the facrifice of her Virtue, besides the rifque of Mortality, as above, in which Cafe fhe is inevitably ruin'd.

AND after all, what Pretence is there for the thing, fince Matrimony is the Matter treated of? Why is not the Treaty finished? and if the Treaty is finished, why in such has the for the Confummation? or why the Confummation without the Ceremony, or before it? Horrid unrestrained Appetite! Why must the brutal Part be gratified at the Woman's Expence, and that at an Expence fo very great, that nothing can make amends for it ?

[ 286 ]

I knew a Difafter happen on the very fame Cafe as this, when Mortality interpos'd; Death finatch'd away the Man, in the very critical Moment.

THE Cafe was thus: A young Man courted a neighbouring Maid; the Girl had a very good Character, was not a Servant, liv'd with her Mother, and liv'd tolerably well; but his Circumftances were the better of the two; fo that it was thought to be a very good Match for her.

THEIR Marriage was agreed on; and the young Woman, at his Requeft, took a Lodging in the Town where he liv'd; feveral Things for a time prevented their marrying, and particularly the want of a Licence; but he being, after fome time, obliged to go to London, on fome particular Occasion, he promis'd his Mistrefs to bring a Licence down with him to marry her.

HOWEVER, in this Interval it unhappily appeared that he had prevailed with her to let him Lie with her, and the Girl proved with Child. He was fo juft to her, that when he came back from London, where he had ftaid fome time, he brought the Licence with him, and twice they went together to a neighbouring Minister to be married; but still one Thing or other intervened; as once they came too late, the Canonical Hour being past, the fcrupulous Gentleman refused, and would not; and the next time the Minister was really very ill, and could not, but appointed them to come the next Thursday, that being Tuesday, and he [ 287 ]

he would not fail, GOD willing, to marry them.

ON the Evening of the Wednesday, the young Man was taken fick, which proved to be the Small-Pox, and, in a few Days, he died. He declared upon his Death-bed, that fhe was, as he called it, his betrothed Wife; own'd the Child to be his, obliged his Mother to take Care of the young Woman, and of the Child, which was as much as Providence allowed him time to do.

But this took Wind; the young Woman was known to be with Child, and known to be unmarried; and fome malicioufly informed the Parifh Officers of it, and they the Juftices of the Peace, on pretence of fecuring the Parifh. But the young Man's Mother anfwered prefently to the fatisfaction of the Parifh; and the Minifter teftify'd for both the young Man and the young Woman alfo, that they were twice with him to be married; fo that the honefty of Intention was on both Sides apparent; yet the young Woman was exposed by it to the laft degree.

WHAT Folly, as well as Wickednefs, was here? A young well-meaning Woman prevail'd with, on the weak Pretence of being effentially though not formally married; I fay, prevail'd with, to gratify the Man at the hazard, and, as it proved, at the coft or price of her Virtue and of her Reputation; forced to acknowledge her felf a Whore, and to bring a Baftard into the World; when, upon only waiting a few Days, all the Scandal, all the Reproach, and, which is more, the Crime alfo had been avoided. HERE was Whoredom under the Protection, or in the Colour and Difguife of Matrimony ! He told her, they were married in the Sight of Heaven; he called her his Wife, and 'twas too evident he us'd her as fuch; and Heaven, in Juftice, brought her to Shame for it. What was this but a Matrimonial Whoredom? and that of a fatal Kind; a Kind that has fo many weak and vile Pretences for it, but yet fo fair and fpecious, that many (till then) innocent Women, have been imposed upon by them, and ruined.

BUT that which is ftill unaccountable in it, is, that the Hazard is fo great, and the Benefit, the Gratification, or what other ugly thing we may call it, is fo very fmall : 'Tis like a Man and Woman on Horfeback, venturing to ford, or rather fwim, a deep and rapid River, when the Ferry-boat is just ready on the other Side, and may be called to them in a few Minutes, to carry them over fafe. There is no common Senfe, no rational Argument, in their favour. But the Brutal Part prevails; the Woman, abused with fine Promises, proftitutes her Honour, her Virtue, her Religion, and her Pofterity, on the lighteft and moft fcandalous Pretences that can be imagined; and when the has done, has nothing to fay but old Eve's Plea, The Serpent beguiled me.

I know nothing that can be faid for the Man; nothing but what is too vile for me to mention, too groß for my Pen; and, as I faid in another Place, the Crime must go without its just Censure, only because it is too großs to be named. The Motives to it are so wicked, the Pretences for it so foul, and there is so little to be faid in Defence of it, that, in short, the the beft Thing I can add, is to fay, 'tis the worft Piece of Matrimonial Wickednefs that can be practifed; I call it Matrimonial, becaufe committed under the Shelter of that facred Covering; the holy Ordinance is made the difguife for it, the Woman is beguiled, under the Mafque, and on the Pretence of its being no Crime.

THE Man is the Deceiver; he acts the Devil's Part every Way, he is the Tempter, and is a Party to the Crime : As for himfelf, his Reafon must be fubjected, or he could never fubmit to fo fordid an Action; he must be degenerated into fomething below a Man; his Appetite must be all brutal and raging, perfectly out of the government of his Underftanding; in a word, he must be out of himfelf; the thing is fo contrary to Reafon, that it is indeed contrary to Nature, and to common Sense, for a Man to defile his own Bed, corrupt his own Race, make a Whore of his own Wife; nothing can be more inconfiftent with Nature, and, as I fay, with common Senfe; not to fay a Word about Religion, or the Laws of GOD; Thefe, to the People I am fpeaking of, are not to be mentioned, or, in the leaft, fuppofed to have been thought of.

WHAT must the Man or the Woman think of themfelves, when, after Marriage, they come to reflect upon this Part? What Reproaches will they cast upon one another? What Comfort, as the Scripture fays, can they have in those Things whereof they are now ashamed? Granting for once what, however, very feldom happens, that they do not come to Reproach one another, and Revile one another; suppose the Man good-humour'd enough not to abule his Wife for her easy complying, or to be jealous of her doing the fame for others, according to the Scots Song mentioned above: On the other hand, fuppofe the Woman does not upbraid the Man with deluding her, making a thoufand fcurrilous Reflections upon him for drawing her in by his fair Promifes, his horrid Oaths and folemn Protestations, and now to upbraid her with yielding. Suppofe, I fay, the Man and the Woman both, not fo ill-humour'd as to Reproach one another with the Crime; yet they will deeply Reproach themfelves, for laying themfelves fo open to publick Scandal, for the fatisfying a meer Guft; and the prevailing Importunities of their corrupted Appetite, when fo finall a Time of forbearance would have made all fafe on both Sides.

IN the mean time, let the Self-Reproaches on either Side be ever fo fevere; let the Repentance be as fincere and as publick as you pleafe to imagine it, the Fact is the fame; and I cannot call the Thing it felf any thing more or lefs than, according to my Title, a Matrimonial Whoredom, and that in the courfeft Degree.

PERHAPS fome may think my Cenlure too hard on the other Side; I mean, I as to the Man's marrying the Woman afterwards; and that while I exclaim fo loudly againft the Offence of lying together, though under facred Promifes of Matrimony, I encourage the Men to break those Promifes, pretending, that the Offence being already fo great, they can be no worfe; for fince it does not less the Crime, fay they, what should they marry the Woman for? If the must be counted a Whore all her Days, and he a Criminal, though he is fo honeft as to marry her, what fignifies the Honefty? He can be no worfe if he lets it alone? And thus my Reproof, they fay, will do more hurt than good.

no

To this I anfwer : Let the Woman then provide against that; for I shall never think Pity due to any Woman after this, who, being thus warn'd, will let a Man lie with her upon Promises of After-Marriage; there can be no wrong done to the Woman, feeing the may avoid the Danger by avoiding the Crime, and yet the Man is greatly miltaken too, who pretends, that to break his Engagement with the Womon does not encrease the Offence. If this were true, and that by per-forming the Promife the Perfon was not the lefs Criminal, the Offender would always take care not to perform the Obligation; and fo we fhould have a continual Complaint. But, I fay, let it be fo; nay, let the Woman take it for granted, I am fure she ought to do so, that whenever she yields on such Terms, she will be left in the lurch, and exposed; and this, if any thing, would fhut the Door against her complying.

NAY, I must needs fay, the common Ufage is fo much against her, that one would wonder any Woman should be fo weak to yield upon those Conditions; and, to me, it argues necessfarily one of these two Things.

I. GREAT neglect of the Confequences of Things; great Indifference not only as to her being with Child or not with Child, taken or refufed, married or not married; and fo alfo alfo with refpect to her Fame and Character, whether Honeft or a Whore. But,

U 2

2. IT

2. IT argues likewife a perfect Indifference as to the Crime; and as to its being an Offence, againft GOD or Man; and fuch a Woman ought not to be fuppofed to value the Sin of being a Whore, any more than the Scandal of it.

INDEED; to be utterly thoughtlefs of the Confequence, and every Way as wicked as the Man, feems to be just the Character of the Woman in this particular Cafe: And I must leave it upon her, that she who thus complies, declares her felf, by the very Fact, to be utterly unconcerned about her Character, whether as a Woman of Virtue, or as a Christian; and if ever she is brought to her Senses again, she must be convinced, that she deferves to be fo understood.

CHAP.

[ 293 ]

CHAP. XII.

Of a Husband knowing his Wife after Conception, or after she is known to be with Child. Of the Reasonableness and of the Lawfulness of it. And whether this may not come under the just Denomination of MATRIMONIAL WHORE-DOM.

S the Procreation of Children is the only, or at least the chief Reason of Matrimony; fo when the Woman has once conceived, it is the Opinion of the learned and modeft World, her Husband ought to know her no more till she has brought forth, and is delivered of her Burthen.

SOME will have this be called a rigid Law; that there is nothing in the Laws of GOD to direct fuch a Restraint, and that therefore 'tis what the Text calls binding beavy Burthens; like the Pharisees imposing Severities on others, which they would not be bound by themfelves; and, as the fame Text hints, would not touch them with one of their Fingers, that is to fay, would not observe, or b eunder the Obligation of thole those Laws which they preached up the Necessity and Duty of to the People.

[ 294 ]

THE Queftion before me, at prefent, is not who does, or does not obey and obferve the Rules of Modefty, which we lay open to be their Duty; but whether thofe Rules are juft, and fuch as ought to be obferved, yea or no? If they who dictate Laws do not obey the fame Laws, be that double Guilt to themfelves, and be theirs the Repentance; the Debt is no lefs a Debt for its not being paid, but 'tis doubly a Debt upon thofe that inftruct others to pay it. However, that's a Subject to be entered upon by it felf, our prefent Bufinefs is to fpeak of the Thing as it lies before us.

THE Article I have now mentioned, is not fo much a Rule of Decency, as it is a Law of Nature; and the Obligation to it is therefore back'd with a fuperior Authority : It is not founded in Cuftom and Habit; it is not the Effect of the Curfe, or brought in as Modefty is, as the Fruit of the Fall. Shame and Blufhing may be the Confequence of Sin; but the Seafons, and the Laws of Generation, are the Offfpring of Nature; the great Parent of Life is the director and guide of Life, and has appointed the Laws of it as a general Head of Conftitutions, by which all the Creatures are directed, and generally fpeaking, all the Creatures are willingly, becaufe naturally fatisfied with those Constitutions, and freely obev them.

ŤHE Brutes obey the Laws of Nature; 'tis not a fubmiffion, not a fubjection, but a meer Confequence of their Life; and 'tis the manner in which their natural Powers are directed; 'tis the Channel in which they flow; they they know their Seafons, and they follow as Nature leads; chafte and referved when the Streams of Nature abate, hot and furious when the Animal Spirits return; in a word, they come when Nature calls, and not before.

BUT Man! ungoverned Man! neither influenced by the Laws of GOD, or of Nature, gives himfelf a loofe to his corrupted Defires, and fubjects Nature, Reafon, and even Religion it felf, to his Appetite, in fhort, to a corrupted and depraved Appetite, a furious outrageous Guft; his Will governs his Underftanding, and his Vice governs his Will; the brutal Part tyrannizes over the Man, and his Reafon is over-ruled by his Senfe.

IT is observed of the Deer, that whereas it is a mild, quiet, gentle Creature; tame, even by its own Difpolition, pleafant and inoffenfive, and this through almost all the Seafons of the Year; yet, in its Seafon, that is what they call its Rutting-time, they are the moft furious of all Creatures; and though they do not, like the ravenous and voracous Kinds, fuch as the Lyon or Bear, fall upon other Creatures for their Food, and to fatisfy their Hunger, which, as is observed, is a Reason for their being fo dangerous : Yet, on the other hand, the Stag, or the Buck, at that particular time, flies upon Man or Beaft, and will kill and trample under its Feet whatever comes near him, or, at least, offers to come near its Female.

No Park-Keepers, Rangers of Forests, or others, how bold and daring, or however familiar among them, will dare to come near them in their Rutting-time, unless very well armed and attended; that is, with Dogs and Guns; U 4 even even the Dogs themfelves, though they are their Terror at another time, except it be the whole Pack together, will not meddle with them if they can help it.

NATURALISTS tell us, that the Blood of the Creature at that time, is boiling hot; and though it be not in a Fever, which, they fay, in a Dog is Madnefs; or in Cats, and fome other Creatures, becaufe it does not lie in the Head, as it does in Dogs, and fuch other Creatures as are fubject to Madnefs, yet that the Spirits are in as high a ferment in thefe, as thofe are.

BE that as it will, 'tis certain this is the Work of Nature, not a Difeafe upon Nature; and when the End, which is Generation and Propagation of the Kind, is anfwered; when the Seafon is over, the Creature returns to its natural calm and quiet; to a Difpolition familiar and domeftick; will come up to the Keeper, feed out of his hand, and be as tame again as before.

THIS fury of the Blood, however raging in the Buck, I fay abates with the Seafon, and he returns to be the fame gentle pleafant Creature he was before. But it is not fo with the Man; when the fury of his Appetite, prompted by the youth of his Spirit, rifes to a highth a little more than common, it continues there; 'tis not flacked by the Evacuations natural to the Cafe, but he continues a Madman ftill, and knows no Bounds.

IN vain is Reafon given him, and intended by the Giver to be the guide and the governer of his Life; to be his Director, and to command his Paffions and Affections; his Appetite getting once the government, like a hardmouth'd [ 297 ] mouth'd Horfe, he feels no Curb, knows no Reftraint, and is guided by no Reins but thofe of his enraged Will.

I can defcribe the Article I am upon by no Mediums but those of Simily and Allegory. Decency forbids me speaking plainer than this. The Man is a Fury, and knews no limits to the Rage of his Inclination; but, pushed on by the Heat of ungoverned Nature, and suppofing an unlimited Liberty is given him by the Marriage-Licence, which, by the way, is a mistake, he acts all the immodest Things imaginable with a fuggested Impunity.

HENCE Sodomy it felf has been not only acted, but even jultify'd in the Marriage-Bed; and indeed, one may be expected as well as the other; for why may we not look for one unnatural Excefs, as well as another.

THE Turks, 'tis a little hard I must be forced to leave the Practice of Christians, and go look among the Turks and Infidels for Examples of Modesty and Decency, but fo it is; the Turks, I fay, have brought this very Offence which I complain of, under the Government of their Laws; and, as I faid before, it is remarkable, and a Pattern for Christians, that they try those Causes in a manner much more awful and grave than we do.

NOR is the Woman under that Reftraint, which they are here, where, tho' fhe is perhaps grofly injured, fhe cannot do her felf Juftice, becaufe Modefty forbids her Tongue expressing the Particulars, and defcribing the Fact. But there, if any unlawful Violence is offered to a Woman by her Husband, under the Liberties of the Marriage-Bed, and fhe finds her felf fo aggrieved aggrieved, as that fhe is obliged to feek redrefs, fhe proceeds thus :

1. SHE goes to the proper Officer, and demands a Summons for her Husband to appear before the Grand Vizier, to answer to her Complaint.

2. WHEN he appears, and fhe is call'd in to juftify her Charge, fhe fays not a Word; nor is her Face, unveiled till fhe comes to what we call taking her Oath : But then, unveiling her Face, fhe ftoops down, takes off her Slipper in the Face of the Court, and holds it up to the Judge (the Grand Vizier) turning it the wrong Side upward.

THIS is enough to the Court, who underftand her diffinctly, namely, that fhe fwears upon the Alchoran that her Husband offers unnatural Violences to her, and that fhe cannot live with him upon that Account. She needs fay no more; but upon this Procefs fhe obtains a Divorce against him, unlefs he can do one or both of the following Things:

1. CLEAR himfelf of the Charge; or,

2. GIVE fufficient Security for not offering the like to her again.

THERE is no need to demand a farther Explanation of thefe Things, or to ask me, what is meant by offering unnatural Violences to a Wife? Those Questions aim evidently at what I have from the Beginning protested against; and any just and modest Reader will understand what I mean by that. [ 299 ]

IT is enough to tell you, that the very Thing I complain of in the Head of this Chapter is one of them: It is enough, that the Woman has conceived, and is with Child. What can be defired of her more, is, in the Language of Mahometan Modefty, a Violence, nay, an unnatural Violence; and the Woman complains of it as highly injurious.

THE Woman has indeed a ftrong and unanfwerable Argument againft the Man in cafe of this Complaint, which, 'tis true, we cannot plead here; namely, that fhe holds up two, or three Sticks, which are given her by the Officers, intimating, that her Husband can plead no Neceflity for his ufing her in that manner, for that he has one, two or three Wives befides her, according to the Number of Sticks which fhe exposes, or holds up, and that therefore he ought to let her alone to go on in her Pregnancy, that fhe may bring forth a Man Child without danger of Mifcarriage, which, 'tis fuggefted, might otherwife happen to her by that Violence.

I very much doubt this will be called a new Doctrine here; and I have been told already (by a Man of Modefty too) upon reading it in the Manufcript, that I fhall never perfuade Chriftians to believe it Criminal, whatever the Turks may do. But why fhould I fufpect this, where, as I faid before, it is not the Law of Matrimony, or the Law of Turks and Pagans that I am mentioning, but the Law of Nature; though Cuftom may be argued to be a Law, or as a Law, and that in many Things. Cuftom is a Tyrant; Nature is a juft and limited Government. Cuftom is Anarchy and Confufion; Nature

[ 300 ]

Nature is a regulated Monarchy, and a welleftablished Constitution.

BUT, to go farther; the Law I am fpeaking of, is Nature, fupported by Reafon; or, if you pleafe, Reafon fupported by Nature. Reafon thinks it juft to follow where Nature leads, and where there is no juft and rational Objection againft her Dictates, becaufe Nature is certainly judge of her own Conftitutions, and beft knows her own Actings; her Influences run in fecret Channels, which no Force ought to obftruct, and, when they do not fwell beyond Bounds, ought not to be check'd and ftop'd up.

THERE are many Arguments in Philosophy, as well as in Medicine or Physick, why the Course of Nature should not be obstructed and interrupted; and except where her Exorbitances seem to break out into Offence, she ought not to be restrained, and even there but gently and with good Reason, and in its proper Time.

BUT Cuftom pretends to govern Nature with a kind of abfolute Dominion, and to tyrannize over all the Laws of Reafon and of Nature too.

" Cuftom, which all Mankind to Slav'ry brings, " That dull Excuse for doing filly Things.

Now if Cuftom has fet up a vitions Practice, in contradiction to Nature and Reafon too, fhall this be a received Law among us, who pretend to know and practife fo well? Befides, as the Devil faid to the Sons of Sceva, Nature we know, Reafon we know, but who are you? You, Cuftom, you are an Invader and an Ufurper 5 per; an Invader of Nature, and an Ufurper of the Throne of Reafon, that fets up for a Judge of Convenience, and a Judge of Right and Wrong, to which you have no more Claim than you have to judge of Truth and Religion.

IN all fuch Cafes, it is but a juft Enquiry to make here, What is this Cuftom derived from? And I am fure, in this Cafe, it muft be anfwered, this Cuftom is begun in Crime; it is derived from an Offence; and, as is the Tree, fuch is the Fruit, offenfive; for this Evil Tree cannot bring forth good Fruit; it derives from vitiated and corrupt Affections, heated Blood, and debauch'd fupprefs'd Reafon.

Do Men gather Grapes of these Thorns? Can good come out of this Evil? Corrupt Appetite, unrestrained Will, break out in corrupt Actions, and continued in, grow up to corrupt Habits, and this we call Custom; when it is grown up to that Name, Custom, it immediately begins to Tyrannize, and make it felf an Excuse for its own Errors. In a word, Men go on in a Custom, because it is a Custom; fo it gets Years on its Side, and then 'tis called an old Custom, an antient Custom, which adds Veneration to it, and, at last, an immemorial Custom, or, as we vulgarly express it, a Custom, Time out of mind; which is sufficient to make a Law of it.

THIS Corruption ufurped upon Nature, and, turned into Cuftom, is the Thing we have to combat with in the Article before us, in which we have this lawful Plea to bring againft it; (viz.) That Cuftom in Crime is just as much a Defence for it, as Antiquity, in Error, and is indeed the fame thing; and fo, in the Cafe before before me; for a Man to fay, I have always done fo, you ftartle me a little, 'tis true, I did not examine into the thing, but I never made any hefitation about it; 'tis a Cuftom, and, I believe, every Body does it as well as we; and therefore I cannot think 'tis a Crime; you muft preach it down in general; when it comes to be chang'd by other People, I'll think of it, but, I believe, every Body does fo, as well as I.

THESE are really dangerous, as well as unjuft Arguings, and the more fo, becaufe they are too true, and too real. But what is then to be done? Muft Cuftom, founded upon the moft fcandalous Miftake, take Place? It was, in its very original, an Encroachment upon Nature, upon Modefty, and upon Temperance, and fhall we plead its Antiquity, which is fo far from an Excufe, that it is an addition to its Crime; this is as if a convicted Highwaymen fhould plead for Mercy, becaufe he had been forty Years in the Trade, an old Offender, and long practis'd in the Crime.

IF the Cuftom is wicked; if it is, in its original, a Treafon againft Virtue, and an Encroachment upon Nature; will any Man plead for the Practice, becaufe their Anceftors were guilty of it before them.

THERE is indeed a happy Article in this Argument, (viz.) that there is not one Word of Excufe for it; but this foolifh Plea of its being a Cuftom; all other Arguments are againft it; 'tis evidently a Pollution in Nature, a Scandal to its Purity, to its Virtue, to its Moderation, and to all that can be called Prudent and Wife. PROCREATION of the Species, and the Generation of Mankind, is the juft End of Matrimony; 'tis express'd fo in the Office of Matrimony, and in the facred Text, in many Places; Now when the Woman is with Child, the End of Matrimony is answered; the Demand is at an End till some would fain plead a progressive Conception, and that there is a Supply wanting to compleat the Formation of the Fatus, and a great deal more of that Kind.

BUT this is evidently a Miftake, and the contrary is manifalt; the Work of Conception is hit off at once; the Materials being furnifhed, Nature being fet on Work, all the forming Parts are engaged together; they may, indeed, be hindered and interrupted in their Operation by future Agreffions, and by the very Offence which I complain of; but that any addition can be made to the Work of Nature, efpecially in the manner, and at the diffance of Time that we fpeak of, is grofly abfurd, and contrary to Nature.

THE limitation of Time when, as I fay, the Man fhould know his Wife no more, is plac'd at fo convenient a diftance, as that of her being known to be with Child. If there were any fuch Thing as a fecond Conception, or additions to the Work of Conception, auxiliar to Nature; I fay, if there were any fuch thing, as I can by no means grant, tho' I do not difpute here; yet 'tis evident it muft be at or about the Beginning of the Conception, not at four or five Months diftance of Time, for then a Woman might go with two or more Children at once, and bring them forth four or five Months after one another; nay, a Woman might be always always Conceiving, always Breeding, and always Bearing or Bringing forth.

[ 304 ]

WHETHER must these gross Ideas lead us? And into what Abfurdities must we run in our Thoughts of them? Let those that can conceive thus of fuch Matters, enter into a Decicifion of the Controversy; I think, our present Subject is no farther concerned to answer them, than only to appeal to Reason and Experience, and to all the learned Anatomists and Accouchers, to judge of it.

I observe, when I hint the Modestry of Mahometan Nations, and other People, who, as I have faid, abstain from their Wives as foon as they have Conceived, or, to put it right, as foon as they know they are with Child; I am answered with a kind of eagerness, that it is eafy to them, becaufe having Plurality of Women, or being allowed as many Wives as they will, they can lay by one, and take another as they pleafe; fo that they are never without a Wife; but as foon as one is with Child, fhe withdraws to her Apartment, and he knows her no more. But then he calls another to his Bed; and as the may continue four or five Months before he can be fure fhe is with Child, by that time the first is fure to be delivered, and be ready for his Bed again; and fo of all the Wives in their Turn. And thus the Man is never without a Woman for his Conveniencé.

IF this be fo, all that can be faid for it is, that this is a kind of Argument in favour of Poligamy, that is to fay, that we make use of it as fuch. But the Turks are very far from giving this as a Reason for their Poligamy': The Reason of that Practice is taken from the Custor. [ 305 ]

Cuftom of the Patriarchs, and is made a Part of Mabomet's Law; and if they were not fo allowed the ufe of many Women promifcuoufly, it is certain they would ftill abftain from their Wives, during the time of their being with Child.

It is looked upon as a prepofterous Thing, a Pollution and Impurity; nay, they take it to be naufcous and unnatural; the fober Men among them fpeak of it with deteftation, and upbraid the Chriftians with it as acting more than Beaftial, for that very few of the brute Creatures practife it; and, if you confider it with exactnefs, you will not find any of the Brutes that will admit, much lefs feek the Conjunction of their Sexes after Conception: However eager when Nature prompted, and however loud the Female calls the Male, yet, after the Fire of Nature is quenched, fhe fights him, and flies at him if he attacks her.

IT would be an unpleafant Task, and unfuitable to the juft Reftraint which I have put upon my felf in the firft Undertaking of this difficult Work, if I fhould pretend to enter here into a Philofophical or Anatomical Defcription of the Reafon and Nature of the brutal Appetites; their Seafons, their Conduct in them, and their punctual obferving the Laws of Nature in the various Circumftances of those Seafons; their Conception; their bringing forth their young; their fuckling and nourifhing them afterwards; how regular, how exact, and how punctual the Creatures are to those Seafons; and how modeft and unconcerned with one another when those Seafons are paft, or in the due Intervals of them. I fay, it would be an improper Search under the Limitations which I am otherwife bound by; the Enquiry would be very improving, critical and curious; and fuch a Thing may not be unprofitable in Surgery and Anatomy : But, at prefent, our Subject points another Way; and I am rather difcourfing the Morality, as well as the Modefty of it, the rational, not phyfical Foundation of it; and fearching into the Reafon why we give our felves fuch Liberties which the Savages, and undirected Part of Mankind, do not take.

As to the weak Excufe, that the Mahometan and Pagan Nations have a Plurality of Women, fo that they fupply Nature's demands another Way, 'tis a most fcandalous Confession, that the vitious Part of the Man is the only occasion of the Practice; and that this is done, not that it is fupposed to be right, but because the Power of the Vice prevails, and the Appetite rules the Man, the Reason, and Nature is subjected to Defire, and the pure Flame is overborn by the impure eruption of Salt and Sulphur.

AND where's the Christian all this while? Where are the necessary Mortifications of a holy Life? Where do fuch mortify the Deeds of the Body? Rom. viii. 13. How have they crucified the Flesh with its Affections and Lusts? Gal. v. 24.

SHALL Chriftians, that pretend to walk by the pure Pattern of their Saviour and his Apoftles, and by the perfect Rule of the Scripture, at the fame time plead a necefiity of Polluting themfelves, and that in a filthy and loathfome manner; a manner which they cannot fpeak of without Blufhes; fhall thefe plead a fupply of the Demands Demands of Nature, and a necessity for want of a Plurality of Women?

How ought fuch rather to remember, that they are Chriftians, and that the double Obligation lies upon them to abstain from fuch Things, by how much they pretend to a great-er Afliftance in their Mortifications from fuperior and invifible Helps of Religion? How do we fee the Clergy of the Roman Church devote themfelves to a perpetual Celibacy, and enter into folemn Vows of Chaftity, and perform them too; for tho' fome may offend, we cannot, with common Justice, charge it upon the whole Body of the Clergy, and of the Religious People?

AND shall Protestants only pretend to a neceffity of Crime, and that they cannot restrain themselves from fecret Lewdness or keep themfelves from fhameful Pollutions, but that they must allow themselves to act against Nature, and against Virtue, and even against the Stomach? This is the groffest Piece of confess'd Frailty that one can meet with any where, and nothing that I know in Story can come up to it.

As to the Abstinence of those who, in some Countries, are allowed a Plurality of Wives, we are affured that fome, yea, many of them, after having had the Knowledge of one of their Women, they knew her no more, till they have an Affurance that fhe has not conceived, and that fhe is not with Child. The Grand Seignior, 'tis certain, acts thus among the Ladies of the Seraglio; and, if we may believe fome who pretend to know, lives a much more temperate Life, and acts with a great deal more Modera-tion among three or four hundred Ladies, all at his X 2 his Command, than the Gentlemen I am fpeaking of do, with one Wife, and no more.

[ 308 ]

IN a word; among those People, for a Man to know a Woman after she was already with Child, would be detestable, it would be an abomination to them; the Woman would refuse it with as much Resolution as she would a Ravisher, and the Man must be abandoned to all that was counted brutish and unclean, that should offer it.

WHETHER it be fo among us, or how it is received and practifed among us Chriftians, I leave to the general Opinion, and to private Experience, not meddling with that Part, as too gross for me; though I might give Examples too notorious, from the Mouths of our flagrant Friends of the unblufhing Club at Tony's _____ and from the Teffimony and Confellion of abundance of the modeft Society at ____'s, befides fome of the Ladies who have intermeddled fo lately, I do not fay fo decently, in the Affair, as to be partly the occasion of this very Chapter, and of all the Parts of it; of whom my wonderful Concern for their Fame, gives me leave to fay no more. It were to be wished, that they would, for the future, be as careful of their own Characters, as Ι am.

I am forry, after all I have faid upon this filthy Subject, to obferve, that here are yet no want of Advocates to defend the Practice; though I muft add, that there is a perfect fterility of Argument, or, at leaft, reafonable Arguments, to fupport their Defence of it.

WHAT they fay amounts to fo little, and that little is fo fcandalous in its Nature, and fits fo ill upon the Tongues of Men of Virtue and Moderation, much lefs Men of Christianity and Religion, that I blush for them, and conceal it. Nothing requires a more just and fevere Censure, except it be the Action they would defend by it.

lits

To fay they cannot refrain, is to confess a frailty which Papifts and Popifh Votaries defpife, and pretend to make flight of, nay, which Pagans and Mahometans overcome by the Power of their Religion. The Nuns dedicated to Chrift, and to fuch and fuch Saints, undertake to preferve an entire Chaftity; and the Reli-gious Orders of Monks and Friars do the fame; the Clergy univerfally make no Difficulty of it, and this for the length of their whole Lives. And fhall Protestants not be afhamed to fay they cannot ---- for fo little a Time, and fo just an Occasion? 'Tis a most fhameful Necessity they are under; if the Fact be true, they ought, as I faid in another Cafe, take Phyfick, use Medicine, and strive by justifiable Methods, to abate the Acri-mony of their Blood, bringing themselves into a Rule or Regimen of Diet, that they may remove the Caufe, and enable them to command their raging Defires, by weakening the Defire it felf.

NOTHING is more certain, than that luxurious living, eating and drinking, what we call rich Diet, high Sauces, ftrong Wines, and other Incentives, are great Occafions of Vice; are Provocatives, and Raifers of other and more fcandalous Appetites; the Blood is heated and fired, and the Spirits are inflamed; Nature is elevated and prompted, and then we Plead and Argue what we ought to be afhamed fo much to name, and would Blush to do it it another time.

<sup>[ 309 ]</sup>

[ 310 ]

THIS Luxury is not only a Sin in its own Nature, but it is a ftrong Motive to other Sins; 'tis the Devil at the Elbow, prompting and exciting, and we ought to avoid the Caufe as we would obey the Scripture, which fays, Flee youthful Lufts; the Reafon is given in the very fame Verfe, for they War against the Soul; they raife a Tumult in the Man, they arm his Vices against his Reafon, and procure him Enemies, even from within, that are too hard for 'him; in fhort, they raife the Devil, which he cannot lay.

IT is an undeniable Maxim, that a luxurious Appetite in eating and drinking raifes an ungoverned Appetite in other Pleafures; Nature obeys its own Laws: Great takings in muft have great goings out; groß feeding, and ftrong rich taking in of Diet, muft have Evacuations in proportion; if there is an Acrimony in the Blood, there is a phyfical Application neceffary in its Courfe; great Digeftures muft have ftrong Emeticks; there muft be Evacuations of one Sort or other.

Now a vitiated Appetite of one kind is the Effect of a vitiated gorging the Appetite on the other; and the groß feeding occations groß Defires; on the other hand, to reftrain and limit the Appetite in eating and drinking, is the only Way to get a compleat Victory over our own Corruption.

A mortified Mind therefore, a Soul refolv'd not to be overcome, or be drawn afide of its own Lufts, and enticed, but refolved to mortify the Flefh, with its Affections and Lufts, would reftrain it felf voluntarily, and fubdue all the Occations cafions of the Crime. Certainly high feeding is the Original of high Vices, and brings the worft Inconveniences of this kind upon the Man. Hence Fastings were introduced in the primitive Churches, and Mortifications, in order to bring under the Body, and bring the Fle.h into Subjection; and they are practis'd among the most devout of the Popish Recluses to this time, in order to enable them to reftrain natural Inclination, and they do find them effectual; the abating the quantity of Animal Food, the pungent Particles of which fharpen the Blood, prefs upon the Nerves, and give an ungoverned Vigour to the Spirits, is certainly the Way, and an effectual Way to reduce the Corruptions to the Government both of Reafon and Religion.

IF this Devil cannot be caft out but by Prayer and Fasting, then Prayer and Fasting must be practis'd; for the Evil Spirit must be caft out, and the ftrong Man must be difpoffefs'd.

Nor is it necessary upon a religious Account only, and to reduce us to the Rank of Chriftians; but indeed, 'tis neceffary in the Cafe before us, to bring us to a due Exercife of our Reafon, and to act like Men, that we may not live like human Beafts, without all Government, and without any Subjection to the Dominion of our Reafon.

THIS then is the true Way to take off that pitious Plea, (viz.) That they cannot reftrain themfelves. To act reasonably would be to reftrain our felves; and those that really cannot fo reftrain themfelves, grant, that they have not the exercife of their Reafon. If due Mortifications were practifed, the difficulty of reftraining themfelves would be taken away; in the the particular Cafe I am fpeaking of, and the Inclination would not be able to conquer the Averfion; for there muft certainly be fomething flocking to Nature in the Thing it felf; and there wants nothing but a decay of the Ferment in the Blood to make the Victory eafy, and to bring the Enemy to be fubdued.

AND to add to this Phyfical Refolution the Methods of Diet, why fhould not both Men and Women tie themfelves by folemn Vows, Promifes and religious Refolutions, to keep themfelves within Bounds? Perhaps then they would affift one another in the Performance. Why do not Protestants, as well as Papists, enter into Vows of Continence? No doubt if they would be affiftant to one another to break those Charms of Hell, those Filtres and Bewitchings, which are certainly the Attacks of the Devil, they might break them.

DID they do this, they would fortify one another in the Ways of Virtue; and it would not be fo eafy to be drawn into Crime; a threefold Cord is not eafily broken, and here is a threefold Help: As, (I.) A Conviction that you ought to perform it. (2.) A folemn Vow to engage the Performance. And, (3.) Mutual Afliftance both in the Vow and in the Refolution, to pay it.

I would hope, that this vile Practice is carried on among us, rather for want of knowing how offenfive it is, than for want of Power to refolve a Performance, and to engage the Mind in it. Cuftom has made the Vice, however odious in it felf, fo natural to us, that there are thoufands of People among us at this time, who, if you fhould ask about it, would readily  $\begin{bmatrix} 3 \\ 3 \\ 1 \\ 3 \end{bmatrix}$ readily answer with a surprize, I profess I never thought it had been an Offence.

MEN go into it eager, without Confideration. Nature gives faint checks to the Mind; for even Nature, left entirely to it felf, would yet have fome Reluctance, and would a little recoil at the unnatural Action. But the Men are us'd to it; there is no express Law against it; they fee no notice taken of it in the Scripture, or in any fubfequent Institutions; they are under no Restraints of that kind; and where should they then be restrained, and by what?

IGNORANCE then of the nature of the Offence, renders the Man in danger of committing it. The Cuftom of the Country he lives in is a terrible Plea, and he is too apt to cleave to it, and venture upon the Cuftom; he knows no Law againft it, and therefore fees no Crime, no Breach of any Law in the committing it.

How weak is corrupted Nature not to fee the Scandal of fo really odious and filthy a Practice? And how far is this Ignorance from being an Excufe? It is indeed a Sin of Ignorance, but then it is a criminal Ignorance too, and fo it makes no excufe for, but aggravates the Charge, as Murther committed in Drunkennefs is an aggravated Murther.

To be ignorant of a thing that Nature dictates, is flutting the Eyes againft natural Light; refifting the most powerful Motive that can be found opposing it. Why do not fuch People open their Eyes? Nature affifts them to do it; but the debauched Inclination will fully close them; fo that the Ignorance is really as criminal as the Action.

SAINT

SAINT Francis, if you will believe the Writers of his Hiftory, was particularly perfecuted with wicked and raging Inclinations to Women; and the Devil, who, by the way, knows how to prompt us in that particular Article, where Nature is weakeft and most inclined to yield, often laid Snares for him, and would appear to him in the shape of a beautiful Lady. or in the appearance of lewd and indecent Geftures. But to refift him, and keep down the rebelling Vice in his Blood, he would fall upon his Body, with the Scourge and the Difcipline. Ha! Brother Afs, fays he, that was the best Title he could give his Carkals, do you want Correction? Is your Blood fo hot ftill? Then he would fast forty Hours, and all the while whip and tear himfelf with a Wire Scourge, till he made the Blood come.

BE the Hiftory true or not, the Moral is good. The unmortified pampered Carkafs is the real Fund of all thefe raging, tyrannizing Inclinations, which we make our fimple Excufes for doing fordid Things; and though I do not preferibe Difciplines and Faftings, by way of meritorious Mortification in this Cafe, as the Papifts do; yet I muft tell my guilty Reader, they are abfolutely neceffary in the Cafe, to reduce the (Carkafs) Body into a due Subjection to (the Soul) Reafon; and he that cannot otherwife conquer an outrageous Appetite, ought, and muft ufe the proper Methods to reduce it; the Caufe muft be taken away that the Effect may ceafe.

A Man who not only has a rational Soul, but has the Powers and Faculties of it, (viz.) His Understanding and Will in their due Exercife, fhould be ashamed to say, he cannot reftrain ftrain this or that corrupt Affection; the Affections are certainly regimented in a fubordinate Station in the Soul, and are placed in fubjection to the Understanding. He that gives them leave to advance beyond their Appointment, fuffers his Soul to be hurry'd down the Stream of the Affections, is fo far divested of himfelf, and out of his own Government, and ought to use rational Means to recover the Exercise of his Reason, and to give those upftart tumultuous Things, called the Affections, a due and fevere Check.

THIS Doctrine of Difcipline and Mortification, how much foever it may look like Popery, is notwithftanding a moft abfolutely neceffary thing in the Life of a Man of Senfe; and tho' I am not talking of it here as a religious Exercife, at leaft not in the Manner and on the Principle of Merit, as the Pa*pifts* practife it; yet I muft own, 'tis the moft effectual Means to anfwer the End in fuch Cafes as thefe.

IF it be true, that the Affections, which are the groffeft Part of the Man, are up in Arms; if this Mob is rais'd in his Soul, for fuch it is, the Militia muft be rais'd to fupprefs them; Violence muft be fupprefs'd by Violence; the Torrent muft be check'd, and the Man be reduced to the Government of himfelf, and brought into good Order by proper Powers; for as it is (in fhort) a Tumult in his Soul, and a Rebellion againft the juft Dominion of his Reafon, fo he muft ufe the means Nature has put into his hand to quafh and fupprefs the Rebellion, and chain them down like Galley-Slaves to the Oar, to humble and mortify them.

THE

THE Allegory is good; it is the highth of the Animal Spirits which Occafions all the Exorbitances in the Affections, and thofe Heats are to be abated by Aufterities and Difcipline. Nature calls for it, whether Religion calls for it or no; it is a Political, as well as a Phyfical Method; Prudence will direct; and any Phyfician, if you were honeftly to tell him your Cafe, would take it as a Difeafe in the Blood, an Inflammation and Fever in the Head, or elfewhere, and would prefcribe you juft fuch Phyfick, fuch Abftinence, and fuch Mortifications as I mention, as the beft Medicine for it as a Diftemper.

I am the longer upon this Subject of Abftinence and Mortification in this Place, because the Pretence in this Article is, the Strength of Inclination is too great; and that we CANNOT compleat it, tho' it ought rather to be faid, WILL NOT. Now were it really true, that they could not reduce and conquer the Inclination by the force of ordinary Refolution, then the reducing the Principle of it is the next fure and effectual Method. Water may, if the Quantity be fufficient, conquer and put out a Fire; but removing the Combustibles, taking away the Fewel, is a never-failing Method; the first may do it, but the last must do it. No Fire burns upon it felf; that which we call Burning, is nothing but penetrating and dividing the Particles of Matter, if the Mat-ter be removed, there is nothing to feparate, nothing to operate upon, and the Fire goes out of course.

THE like Plea for Mortifications holds good in most of the other Cases I have mentioned in this Work; for should we trace all the raging Excesses ['317] Exceffes which I have touch'd at in the former Part of this Work to their true Original, we fhould find much of it owing to the Extravagances of our Living in England ; I mean, as to eating and drinking. What is the Reafon we have to many People die of Fevers here more than in any other Part of the World? and that, every Year or two, we have what we call a new Diftemper, which carries off fo many, that at those Seafons the Weekly Bills in London rife up to fix hundred or feven hundred a Week ? Why is the Small-Pox fo fatal, and particularly among the Gentry and Perfons of Diftinction, but becaufe of the Exceffes of eating and drinking, in which, as well as in the Nature of what we eat and drink, we go beyond the reft of Mankind?

THE fame Reafon is to be given for other Things; the fame Exceffes ferment the Blood, raife the Spirits, and produce all the immoderate fcandalous Things which I have been complaining of, and which there is fo much Reafon to complain of among us; in which the Turks and Savages appear to act more like Men of Reafon than we do.

THEIR Way of Living is not fo high; their Blood does not boil with the fame intemperate Heats, confequently their Abstinence is not fo much a Virtue; but I must add too, that our Incontinence is the more a Vice; 'tis a Crime occasioned by a Crime; and we ought to use Temperance first in our Diet, and then we shall, with the more ease, practice Temperance in other Things.

THE Crime of Sodom, however unnatural the Vices are which they practifed, is laid all upon a Caufe, which was of the fame Kind with eurs, Pride and Idlenefs, and Fulnefs of Bread. By which I underftand, that their lafcivious Wickednefs proceeded from their luxurious Diet; Sloth and Gluttony enraged their Blood; and they fat upon the high Places to do Evil.

OUR fulnefs of Bread muft be acknowledg'd to be a great Affiftant to our immoderate Appetite another Way; for this high Feeding gives high Spirits, and thefe prompt to all exorbitant Crimes. Excefs of the Animal Spirits fill and fire the Blood, and when thofe heats rage, then the Head contrives Wickednefs. I need not fpeak it plainer, the Cafe is eafily underftood. Nothing can bring us to a Life of Moderation in our Pleafures, like a Life of Temperance and Moderation in eating and drinking.

BUT I come from the Caufe to the Crime; and muft fay a Word or two more to that.

AMONG all the brutish Circumstances of it, this is one, that 'tis an Action stript of all modest Pretences, all tolerable Excuses; as it is a meer Act of Pollution, fo there is not one Word to be faid to extenuate it; the Man can only fay, that he does it as an Excursion of meer fenfuality, or a gratification to the Flesh. There can be no End in it, or Reafon for it, that can be fo much as named without Blufhing. The Woman is with Child, that's fuppofed. It is known, and fhe acknowledges it. What then can be faid on that Side? The End of the conjugal Act is already answered; Wherefore does he come near her? 'Tis only to fatisfy the cravings of his Vice, only to gratify his fraileft Part, to pleafe himfelf, or, as the Scripture fays, to fulfil the Lufts of the Flefh.

THIS

THIS IS an End fo bafe, fo mean, fo abfurd, that no Chriftian Man can plead it in Excufe; and yet, at the fame time, 'tis impofible to find any other Excufe for it: In fhort, it is a meer fhamelefs ufe of a Woman, to abate the heat of his Spirits, and cool his Blood; 'tis making a Neceffary-House of his Wife, and nothing more or lefs; and that indeed is a fordid Thing, fo much as in the fuggeftion of it; 'tis adding Scandal to the Crime, covering it without a Cover; there's no Excufe can be made for it, no tolerable Name be given to it (that I can find at leaft) but this of Matrimonial Whoredom, according to my Title.

LET us then think of reforming this fcandalous Practice; let us look at it in a due Perfpective, in a clear open Light. If any one thing can with Modefty be faid in Defence of it, let us hear it; if not, if it is to be only confefs'd as a Crime, let it be forfaken as a Crime. What cannot be defended, ought to be reformed: What every one is afhamed to fpeak for, none fhould be afhamed to forfake.

I could offer fome Examples upon this Subject, but they are of fuch a courfe kind, that it is too foul to mention; there's no entring into the Particulars; it would offend the Ears of all those that have the least Pretence to Modefty. Some of our worthy Neighbours will indeed, on this very Score, pass unreproved, and the filthy Circumstances not be animadverted upon, because they cannot be mentioned; but it is fo, it cannot be helped, fo they must escape.

I have the Honour to converse with fome Gentlemen fo abstenious, that they are able to clear themfelves of this Charge; and 'tis to their their Honour that I mention it; though, but in general, Sir  $W \longrightarrow G \longrightarrow$ , and his Lady, have treated one another always with fuch Juffice, and with fuch Referve in this Cafe, that as foon as ever the Lady has found her felf with Child, fhe always lodged in Apartments by her felf, till fhe was delivered, and the like at other Seafons; that no Occafion might offer, where there was fo much Love, to have any excefs.

320 ]

NOR has this modeft Cuftom been fo much a Stranger to our Anceftors, as it feems to have been to us; a Truth not at all to our Advantage; this was, without doubt, the Original of that good Cuftom among Perfons of Quality, and of any tolerable Fortunes, to have feparate Apartments, the Gentleman's Lodgings and the Lady's being feparate, fo that, when Decency required, they went from one another for a while, till proper Times returned, and made Lodging together reafonable again.

It is true, middling Families have not this Convenience, and cannot keep feparate Lodgings furnifhed for one another; it may be faid of fuch indeed, that they have the greater exercife for their Virtue, becaufe they are obliged always to lodge together. But how great foever the Exercife is, and how difficult foever to be put in Practice, ftill, as it is a Virtue, it ought to be ftrictly obferved; nor, in my Opinion, can any Man be faid to live a Life of Virtue that neglects it.

THE reft is all Profitution; nay, 'tis worfe, 'tis unnatural, 'tis a kind of leffer Sodomy; for, I doubt not, but Sodom's Sins, the Foundation of which was laid, as I have obferved, in high feeding, emphatically express'd in the facred Text Text by Fulnefs of Bread, fo the Confequences broke out in divers other Exceffes, befides that one deteftable Crime, which bears the Name and Reproach of the Place to this Day. Their gorged Stomachs difcovered themfelves, no doubt, in all the Exceffes of a provoked Appetite, and an inflamed Blood; and it is fo, in like Cafes, to this Day.

WE have a Teffimony of this in all Places, and, I may fay, in all Ages of the World: The high Feeders are the high Livers; excels of Wine is defcribed in Scripture to produce excefs of Vice, and the Fire of Nature burns in proportion to the Fewel. Hence the Italians, a Nation who revel in all the Varieties of Luxury, fuch as rich Wines, luscious Fruits, high Sauces, Pickles, Preferves, Sweet-meats, and Perfumes, to an Excefs. How do the hellith Fires rage in them? How do they run out to all the Extremes of criminal Riot, even to that Fury of Love, called Jealoufy, and this often ending in Blood ? How do they dwell in Wantonnefs and Lafcivioufnefs, and carry it on to all the most unnatural Extremes of the dead Lake it felf, and this not only now, but in the Romans Time alfo it was the like.

At the fame time the more moderate feeding Nations round them, are in proportion, lefs outrageous in their Vice, and whether it be from any Principle of Virtue or no, they are fo by the meer Confequence of Things; they live more fparingly, and their Blood is kept lower, not always inflamed (as is the Cafe in Italy, and other Parts of the World); they are forbid Wine, which to thefe Northern Climates is the Fewel of outrageous Actions, and leads to innumerable Crimes. How eafily then is this fcandalous Excefs to be cured? They have very little regard to Modefty, to the demands of their Reafon or of Religion, who will not reduce themfelves to a moderate Degree of Heat, in order to mortify fuch criminal Defires as thefe; if a little abatement of Wine, or of ftrong nourifhing and rich Diets, and feeding more fparingly, would do it, they muft have no defire to live within Bounds, like Chriftians, and like Men, who will not abate a little at the Trencher, that they may be able to abate in another Place.

GLUTTONY and Drunkennefs are too near a-kin to the Debaucheries of Love, as they may well be ftiled, not to be called the Parents of the Vice. If you reftrain the Original, you cut off the fequent Crime; if the Springs are cut off, the Streams will foon fail; if the Fountains are ftopt, the Rivers will foon be dry; and they that will not fuffer fo fmall a Mortification as the denying themfelves a little in the exceffes of the Table and the Bottle, in order to abate fome of the more criminal Exceffes in the other Place, loudly tells us, they are in love with the Crime, that they are pleas'd with the Vice; and that it is not that they cannot reftrain themfelves, but that, delighting in the vile Part, they don't defire to reftrain themfelves, or to be reftrained; that they will not remove the Fewel, left the Fire fhould abate : Thus one Excels follows another ; a Debauchery of one kind follows the Debauchery of another; the Matrimonial Whoredom follows the Drunkennefs and the Gluttony, by the fame Necessity, and as naturally as the Confequence follows the Caufe; the Influx occafions the Efflux, and the Man is but the fame : fame; he is a Voluntier in both, a willing Servant to the Devil, and defires not to be delivered from the pleafing neceflity.

I am the longer upon it here, as I faid before, becaufe indeed 'tis the fame thing in all the other wicked things I have mentioned in this Work. Whence comes all the indecent lawful Things we have been talking of, but from this Sin of Sodom, (viz.) Fulnefs of Bread? while the Stomach is gorged with animal Food, of which no Nation in the World feeds like us; while the Blood is filled with thefe pungent Particles, and the Veins fwelled with animal Spirits, no wonder the feminal Veffels are over full, and fummon the Man to a Difmifilon or Evacuation, even at the Price of his Virtue, of his Confcience, and of his Reafon.

LET them that are truly defirous to prevent this unhappy eruption of Confequences, begin in the right Place; abate the first Mifchief; let them remove the caufing Evil, and the confequent Evil will die of courfe.

A Mortification of the Palate would be an effectual Reformation upon the Life; by a due Regimen of Diet we might bring our felves to be a reformed regular Nation; and I fee no other Way ever to bring it to pafs.

WE are ruined in our Morals by lawful Things; the Exceffes in our lawful Enjoyments make them criminal; even our needful Supplies of Life are the ruin of Life. We not only dig our Graves with our Teeth, by mingling our Difeafes with our Food, nonrifhing Diftemper and Life together, but we even eat our Way into Eternity, and damn our Souls with our Teeth; gnawing our Way through the Doors of the Devil's Caftle Y 2 with with our Teeth. In a word, the Drunkard may be well faid to drink himfelf to the Devil; the nice eating Glutton feeds and fattens himfelf up for the Devil's Slaughter-houfe; becaufe one Vice feeds another till they are made ripe for Hell, by the diftracted Ufe of lawful and laudable Things; making lawful and even neceffary Things criminal, and fowing the Seeds of Vice in the ordinary Ploughings of meer Nature.

324 ]

How ufefully might we apply this to our particular Friends, of whom fo many will ftrive to Blufh, when they read it.  $A_{---}$  $L_{---}$  Efq; had never been a Whore-mafter if he had not din'd fo often at Puntack's; nor had good and grave Sir  $L_{---}$   $W_{----}$ , vifited Tabby  $R_{---}$ , by Moon-light, if he had not dwelt fo many dark Evenings at Brown's; fo he goes from the Bottle to the Bawdy-houfe; in which the Man may be faid only to act Nature, and purfue, as all the World does, the direct Courfe of Caufe and Confequence.

IF  $G_{--}$   $W_{--}$  will ceafe to make his Houfe a Stews, his Marriage-Bed a Pollution, and bring his modeft Wife to a neceflity of turning her Slipper the wrong Side upward at him, if he will be able to give a better Excufe for his Matrimonial Whoredom, than that he can't help it; let him ceafe to eat three Hours together at Breakfaft; let him not gorge at Noon till he falls afleep at the Table, or drink at Night till he lies under it; let him read Cornaro of Venice, and live upon two Ounces and five Drams a Day, and half a Pint of Wine in three Days; I'll anfwer for it, his Wife fhall not lock her felf up for fear of coming to Bed to a Fury, nor fwear the Peace againft him to get him bound to the Behaviour of a Chriftian, for fear of being murthered in the lawful Method of Man and Wife.

get

[ 325 ]

MADMEN by Day will be Madmen by Night; they that have no government of themfelves one Way, how fhould they have it another Way ? I expect it will be objected here, that the Nations which I have named, fuch as the Turks and Moors, though they drink no Wine, and do not feed, as we do, upon Flefh, yet are as wicked and vitious as other People.

THAT those Nations are vitious, may be true; and having no Laws of Confcience cr Religion to restrain them, they are, no doubt, much the worfe. But yet I deny one Part, (viz.) that they are fo privately wicked, fo (lawfully Lewd) as I call it, as we are; they have their many Wives, as they will, but not fo much conjugal Lewdnefs as, I believe, we have; and I have many Reasons to think fo.

THE Subject of this Chapter is indeed ONE, but have I not given twenty Inftances of Matrimonial Whoredom in the compass of this Work? Is not the common ordinary Courfe of our married loofe Ones, a Series of most scandalous Doings; fuch and of fuch a Kind, as the Mahometans and Savages, who have no guide but Nature, no check but the averfions of common Senfe, would abhor?

OF the fame Nature with this, is that of a Man coming to his Wife after Child-bearing, and before her Body be fufficiently cleanfed from its natural Impurities; before the Seafons fet apart for her proper Purgations are finished. This is an Article to be lightly touch'd too, becaufe (forfooth) we will not bear to be fpoken plainly to, of the the Things, which we yet are openly and fhamelefly guilty of.

[ 326 ]

THIS is one of the Breaches Mankind make in their ordinary Practice, not upon the Laws of Decency only, but upon the Law of Nature, for the Separation is evidently directed by the Law of Nature; 'tis dictated from the first Principles of that Knowledge which the most Ignorant are furnished with of themfelves.

THE Women indeed ought to be the Confervators of this Law; and as they feem to have a kind of abfolute Power over themfelves during their ordinary Separations, they feem to be the moft chargeable with the Breach of it; becaufe they are not altogether fo Paffive at this time as at another.

IF there is a Breach of Modefty here, 'tis on her Side chiefly, and therefore the Reproof is to her, and ought to be fo taken; for it is as notorious a Charge upon her, as that of admitting a Man, upon Promife of Matrimony, before it was formed into a Marriage; which indeed, tho' the aggreffing was chargeable upon the Man, yet the yielding or confenting which was wholly upon the Woman's Side, and in her Power, plainly makes her chargeable with the Offence, makes it all her own Act and Deed; fo it is here; and therefore it is true, that the Crime is her's, and the Reproof is upon her, and upon her only.

THE Law of GOD, in the publick Inftitution of the femifh OEconomy, ftates this Cafe with respect to the Woman's Separation after Child-bearing in fuch a manner, as that tho' the femifh Conftitutions, being abolished, do not feem to be binding to us, yet they are certainly tainly a just Rule for us to ftate a Christian Regimen or Government from; they are a good Standard to measure Decency and the Laws of good Order by: They were certainly formed upon the most perfect Model of Justice and Equity, perfectly fuited to the Nature of the Thing, and are binding in Decency, if they are not absolutely fo in Confcience, and under the usual Penalties, as the rest of God's Law at that time was.

Most of the facred Conftitutions of the Jewish State were enjoyn'd upon the feverest Penalty, generally of Death; being cut off from the Congregation of the LORD, Ec. and amongst those Things to which those Severities were annexed, those which respected Uncleannefs, and natural or accidental Pollutions, were fome of the chief; fuch as having the Difeafe of the Leprofy, Iffues of Blood, nay, even eating leavened Bread in the feven Days of the Paffover; counterfeiting the facred Oil and the facred Perfume, were punished with Death, that Soul was to be cut off, &c. the Reafon was, becaufe it was a defpifing the Legiflator. But when he comes to enjoyn the needful Purifications, and the particular Uncleanneffes which were to be purg'd by washings and feparations, as alfo for the eating of Blood, the Reafons are given in plain Words; GOD fpeaks them himfelf, I have feparated you from other People that ye should be mine, and ye shall be holy unto me; as in Exodus, chap. xii. and Leviticus, chap. xv. and xvii. and feveral other Places.

 $\bar{N}$ ow if thefe legal Purifications were appointed only that the People might be a more exactly clean and fanctified People, than the other Nations about them, the Reafon holds, Y 4 tho tho' the Sanction of that particular Conftitution is ceas'd, as in other Cafes; for example, the Law for the Man who had trefpafs'd upon his Neighbour, cheated or deceived him, was made to appoint a Sacrifice to attone for the Crime, and reftitution for the Trefpafs; the Crime is ftill the fame, though the manner of making an atonement for it is ceafed.

THE Uncleannefs is the fame, whether the Law be in force or no. By the Mosaick Infitution, the Woman was to perform her Separation, or, what was then called a Purification, a certain time; upon her bringing forth a Male Child, fhe performed an exact Quarentine, viz. three and thirty Days, and feven Days; and for a Female Child fhe was obliged to perform a double Quarentine, namely, fixty and fix Days, and fourteen Days; during which time the Man was not to be fuffered to come near her, or fo much as to touch her, upon the fevereft Penalties, as above.

Now, not to infift upon the legal Purifications of that ftrict Law, enjoyned from above, and which had fuch folid Reafons given for it; yet the Law of Nature, upon which all that Part is originally founded, is the fame. You may fay, the neglect of it is not a mortal Sin, or that deferves Death. But you cannot fay it is not a Pudor, a fhameful, an immodeft Thing, or that it is not loathfome and odious, even in its own Nature; for the Regulation of clean and unclean, like right and wrong, is ftill the fame, fettled and unalterable, as Things eftablished in the Law of Nature, which are not altered by Customs and Habits, whether good or evil.

IT is true, that our Ufage has reduced thefe Separations and Purgations of the Sex to a Month [ 329 ]

Month or thirty Days, which the Law of Gop had fixed at fix Weeks; and has made no difference in the time of the Separation between the Circumftances of a Male or Female Birth; for all which we give phyfical Reafons, fuch as generally fatisfy our Scruples in those Affairs; nor is it my Bufinefs to difpute here the Reafon and Nature of the Alteration, and whether it is fufficiently grounded. Our Phyficians and Anatomifts are beft able to anfwer for that Part, and, I fuppofe, can do it.

BUT even, with all the abatement of Days, and I doubt not 'tis reduced as low as it can be. yet, I fay, with that abatement we find it is not observed; our Libertine Age brecks thro' it all, and, if it were a Fortnight, would perhaps do the fame; and this is the Thing 1 implain of; and for want of which Decency or Duty rather, Feople of this Age may be justly faid to deferve the Cenfure which a Wife and good Man put lately upon them, namely that we have not lefs Holinefs than or Anceiers. nor lefs Honefty, but much more; only that he thought the Holinefs and the Honeity of the Days differed, and that fome Things would pass now for Holiness and for Honesty with us, which would not pass for fuch with our Anceftors.

THIS indeed may alter the Cafe very much, and the Ages may differ in the Species when they do not differ in the Name of the Things; the Standard of Virtue may alter as the Standard of our Coins frequently do; but the real thing, the Silver, and its intrinfick Rate or Value alters not, 'tis always the fame, and ever will be.

Τo

To bring it down to the Cafe in hand. Virtue and Modefty were Things our Anceftors had to value themfelves upon in a particular manner; and indeed they had a great Share of them, fuch as they might juftly value themfelves upon. Now we may boaft, I hope, of Virtue and Honefty, in Quantity, as much as they, and, I believe, we do talk as loudly of it as ever they did; but whether our Virtue and our Honefty are of as fine a Standard or not, I dare not enter upon a nice enquiry into that Part, for fundry good Reafons, not fo fit perhaps to mention, as we might wifh they were.

SOMETIMES I am afraid there is a bafer Alloy among us, and that the Species is a little altered (in thefe Ages of Mirth and good Feeding); I won't venture to fay it is not fo. But even in the Particular before me, I have been told, our Forefathers were flricter in their adhering to the Laws of Nature than we think our felves obliged to be; that they abhorred the Pollutions that I complain of, and that they left us their Pofterity, much a founder and healthier Generation for that very thing, perhaps, than we may leave thofe that are to come after us.

It is a very unhappy Cafe, that thefe Practices fhould affect Pofterity fo much as they fay they do, becaufe whether we confider it fo much as we might do or not; I cannot doubt but our Children will be touch'd in their Health and Conftitution a little, if it be but a little, by the corrupt Practices of this lewd Age. What we bring upon our felves is nothing but to our felves, and we might be apt to fay, we alone fhould fuffer for it; and it were well if it were no otherwife. BUT to forfeit for our Posterity, to entail Difeases upon the Blood of our Successfors, to fend them into the World with aching Heads, rheumatick Joints, entailed Difeases, inflamed Blood, and affected Nerves, and caufe them, as we may fay, to come WEEPING into the World, and go GROANING out of it; this would give a confidering Mind a Pang of Remorfe, and make us anticipate our Children's Sorrows a little, by fighing for them fometimes before they are born.

LIFE at beft brings Sorrows enough with it, and we need not feem to be concerned left our Children fhould not have their fhare of them; they will bring Evils of that kind enough (and faft enough too) upon themfelves; we have no need to fend them into time with an Inheritance of crippled Joints, and aching Bones, and take care to give them caufe to curfe their Fathers and Mothers, as many do every Day.

I make no doubt but the Intemperance and Exceffes I have fpoken of in this Chapter, have fometimes defcended from Line to Line to the third and fourth Generation; and that many of the Miferies of Life are owing to the infected Blood of those that went before them: And let fuch People reflect ferioufly upon the Number of Children born into the World in this luxurious, intemperate vitious Age, and in this City in particular, who die in the very Infancy of their Life, who coming into the World loaded with Diftempers, the effect of their Parents Intemperance and unnatural Exceffes, ftruggle a few Days with the unequal Burthen of Life, and expire under the Weight of it.

IT

It is but within a few Days that I have feen Examples of this kind, in Families within the reach of a little enquiry. One has four Children left out of twenty-four; another two out of eighteen; another three out of twenty-two; and to of many more; whereas  $T_{--}C_{--}$ , a Man of Virtue and Temperance, within the reach of my own Acquaintance, has had thirteen Children, and never buried one; but at ninety Years of Age fees them all grown Men and Women, healthy, ftrong, fruitful, and full of Children of their own.

 $G_{---} D_{---}$ , another antient, grave, and religious Gentleman, had but four Children, his Wife dying young, and himfelf living fingle afterwards to a great Age, faw those four, being all Daughters, bring forth just eighty Children, and had at one time One hundred and thirteen of his Children, Grand-Children and Great Grand-Children, dining with him at his Table.

THESE are fome of the Examples of Temperance and Modefty, which allift to a ftrong Conftitution, whofe Vigour extended in the Courfe of Nature, multiplies much more than the Heats of an outrageous Flame, and leaves a Tincture of Health and vigorous Spirits upon their Pofterity; whereas a tainted Soul, corrupting the Mafs of Blood with Vice and Lewdnefs, brings a Generation of difeafed and diftempered Animals, fit to be fent to an Hofpital, Cradle and all; and calling for Phyficians, and the help of Art, even before they can be fairly faid to live.

IT is true, I do not place this all to the Account of the two particular Branches of Intemperance and Excess only, which are mentioned in this Chapter, but to the whole practice of immodeft and indecent Actions, the product of extravagant Defires, mentioned in the Chapters foregoing; for being now at the clofe of the Account, (and 'tis time I were, for it is a black Account indeed) the Application refers to the whole, (viz.) the general Immodefty of the Day, as practifed among married People, and pleaded for, vindicated and defended, under the cover and protection of the facred Office, and under the pretence of being lawful, becaufe within the Bounds of Matrimony.

[ 333 ]

NOR do I pretend that I have yet gone through all the Branches of this dirty Practice; the Wickednefs is differfed among a vaft variety of Caufes and Circumftances, as it is among abundance of People; not a Back-door, but the corrupt Blood, the Offspring of a corrupt Race fally out at, and which Way foever you look, you may fee daily new Indecencies, not only acted but contrived, fludied and found out, in order to gratify the Vice, and lay us open to the Scourge of the Satyr.

It is time to combat an Evil that is thus growing upon us, and that encroaches under the Protection of fo many fpecious and plaufible Outfides: One pleads Nature, another Law, another Neceffity, all of them Things that have their additional Pretences as hard to anfwer as the Offenders pretend they are to refift. It is not eafie to perfuade them that they offend; and if they feem to be convinced that they do, 'tis yet with fuch Extenuations, fuch Excufes, and fuch apparent Inclinations to continue the Practice, that there is fcarce room to hope for any Amendment.

Cou'n-we but conquer the avow'd open defending these Practices, it would be a great Point gain'd; Men would ceafe to infift upon the Justification of it, or to boast in the Facts: Could we but perfuade them not to publifh their own Shame, but to ceafe valuing themfelves upon what they ought to blufh at, this would give fome room to hope for a Reformation of the Practice; we might promise our felves, that what they were once ashamed of they might perhaps, in time, think of reforming, at leaft, it wou'd be a Step towards it. But how thall we fuppofe L — G — , of _____fhire, Efq; or his eminent Neighbour the I-ce, fhould quit the Crimes which they meet without fail twice a Week to contemplate of, committing them over again in Imagination, least they should not be guilty enough, and forming an accumulated Guilt in their Souls, a Guilt which few People are wicked enough to understand, (viz.) once in the Fact, and again in the Reflection; in-ftead of Repentance, committing the Crime again in the Mind, by thinking it over with Delight.

THESE are Proficients in the Art of Sinning, that knowing how to offend in the most exquisite manner, are fo far from Repentance, that, if they have any regret at all, it is that they know not how to be wickeder than they are, but rejoyce over the Opportunities they have, and with for more.

RATHER than not be wicked, they will run lawful Things up to a criminal Excefs, and make themfelves Offenders when they need not. THIS is fuch a kind of pleafure in Crime, fuch a fondnefs of doing Evil, that I am perfuaded the Devil does not come up to; the Devil does not commit Sinas a pleafure, but with other and farther Views, fuch as affronting Gop hisfupreme Governor, and who he hates on innumerable Accounts; ruining Man, the fubject of his Envy; leffening the Authority of Heaven, and counteracting divine Providence; and fuch other hellifh Ends and Reafons, for which he exerts himfelf in Crime to the utmoft; and the Pleafure the Devil takes in Crime is no otherwife, but more or lefs, as it anfwers fome of thefe hellifh Defigns, and aims at more.

BUT my accurate Friend the 'Squire _____, pleafes himfelf in the meer Crime, laughs in the Satisfaction he finds in the very Enjoyment of Vice; like a Man that would Blow up a Houfe, and the whole Family in it, for the meer Satisfaction of hearing the Bounce; and pleafe himfelf with it afterward, upon the meer Pleafure of feeing the innocent Wife and Children fly up in the Air, and be dafh'd in Pieces with the Fall.

THE Fact is not fo bloody and cruel indeed, but the Principle is the fame; he that can look back upon a hundred Adulteries, and act them all over again in his Imagination, with the fame Pleafure as before, wifhing for Occafions to commit a hundred more. I appeal to the learned Divines, who know what the meaning of that Text is, bas committed Adultery with her already in bis Heart, Matth. v. 28. whether fuch a Man is not really, tho' not actually, guilty of three hundred Adulteries, putting them all together.

IT is a particular Snare to these Men, in the Cafe I am upon, that they fay the Crime they they are thus daily committing is no Crime, much lefs Adultery, and that it has a Cover for it, which they make their Refuge, and under the Protection of which, they run out into all thefe Extravagancies with a kind of quietnefs and fatisfaction upon their Soul, that is not eafily to be defcribed; this Covering is the Article of Marriage, the very Thing I am upon, and is upon this very Account that this whole Book is written.

It is under the Cover of Marriage, that thefe Exceffes and Immodefties are committed. But under what Protection are they committed over again with the Tongue, boafting and talking lewdly of the Extravagancies they have committed? Of which I have this double Charge to lay againft them, (viz.) In the firft they finn'd with their Wives; in the fecond without their Wives; nay, to carry it farther, in the firft they finn'd againft Heaven, in the fecond againft the facred Ordinance of Marriage, and againft the Wife alfo.

AND not to leave them room to Cavil at the Expression, I explain and infift upon it, that a decent concealing the conjugal Freedoms between a Man and his Wife, is a Debt due to Modefty as a Virtue, and to the Wife as she is a Woman. He that exposes those Things deferves no more the Name of a rational Creature, much less of a Man of Modesty, nay, hardly of a Man. In a word, he Sins against his Wife, and exposes himself, and the last most abominably.

NOR will his Marriage cover either of these Crimes, but rather aggravate them, for, as I faid, he Sins against the very Marriage it self: Marriage is a Contract of Liberty to lawful Things Things; but Marriage is no Protection for Crime; Marriage covers the Bed undefiled, and makes it pure and honourable. But the Man may pollute even his Marriage-Bed, and when he does fo, he makes that criminal which would otherwife be lawful.

THUS unnatural Crimes may be acted in the Marriage-Bed; and will any Man fay, it is no Sin becaufe it is under the Cover of Marriage; the Woman may be ravifh'd in the Marriage-Bed, and the Man deferve the Gallows for Crimes offer'd to his own Wife. Let fuch confider of it, left the Woman turn the Slipper up againft them, and leaft they be exposed as they deferve.

As Matrimony is no Protection for unnatural Vices, fo neither is it for indecent Exceffes and Immodefties; and as for the Pleafure they take in the contemplation of what was criminal in the committing, as it is doubling the Offence, fo it is with the addition of fomething unnatural in it alfo. In a word, talking Lewdly, according to a known Author, is infamous, but talking lewdly of conjugal Actions is unnatural and odious; 'tis a kind of a Sodomy of the Tongue; 'tis a Crime that wants a Name, but 'tis great pity it fhould want a Punifhment.

CHAR

[ 338 ] .

C H A P. XIII.

Of indecent and untimely Marriages, whether as to the Years of the Perfons, marrying Infants and Children, or marrying immediately after the Death of the Husband or Wife that went before.

HOUGH every Indecency is not equally criminal, yet every Thing fcandalous and offenfive is really Criminal, as that which exceeds it in Degree; and therefore the Article I am now upon, though it may not be fo odious fingly, and in it felf feparately, though it is not fo much a Matrimonial Whoredom as the paft Heads I have mentioned, yet it is Part of the Crime, and in the Intent and Meaning, the Perfons are as really guilty as in any of the other.

EVERY thing comes within the Compafs of what I call Matrimonial Whoredom, wherein the Marriage is made the meer Cover for a wicked, ungoverned fenfual Defire. Marriage is the Refult of a pure Flame, 'tis entring into a facred Relation with the Ends and Views which conform to the immediate End and Reafon of the Inftitution it felf. [ 339 ]

As it is an Ordinance of GOD, its original is Divine, the reafon of it good, the nature of it facred; and it ought to be preferved in its Purity, not debauched by the corrupt Inclinations of Men, and made a Tool to a vitious ungoverned Appetite.

THIS is the Cafe when any Excursions are made out of the ordinary Road of those two obligatory Articles, which I mentioned at first, (viz.) Decency and Modesty.

To rufh into Matrimony as a Horfe rufhes into the Battle, intimates a Fury, not a rational fober Chriftian Proceeding; in a word, it detects the Perfon of the Crime I have mentioned fo often, (viz.) a raging inflamed Appetite; let it lie ever fo deep, covered with whatfoever Pretences, guilded over however fmooth and fhining, let the outfide be as fpecious as you will, the Poifon is lodg'd within, the Venom of it works in a fecret manner, till it breaks out in Scandal and Crime.

TAKE it in which Sex you will, the Offence is the fame; nor do I always yield that it is worfe in the Woman than in the Man; the Crime is the fame, and the Obligation to Decency is equal; we may load the Woman the harder, becaufe we pretend Modefty is ever peculiar, at leaft ought to be fo, but I do not grant it at all. Men indeed make the boldeft Sallies, and the Men have brought themfelves to a kind of allowing themfelves in Crime by the Authority of Cuftom; but I deny that in the Original it ought to be fo.

A Man ought no more to fwear and be drunk, quarrel and commit murther in his Rage than a Woman'; and the Offence is as great when he does it. Cuftom only has given Crime a more odious Title, where the Woman is the guilty Perfon, becaufe it is not expected from her fo much. But is there any Law that flows us, the Man has more indecent Liberties allowed him than the Woman? Not at all; the Obligation is the fame, and the Offence the fame.

ALL indecent Matrimony is mutual, and the Crime is mutual, the Scandal affects both; the Woman is as guilty as the Man, and the Man as the Woman. Suppose, for example, a Man having buried his Wife, goes the next Week, or next Month, or next Day (for 'tis much alike) to court another Woman. This is not unlawful, that's true, but 'tis highly inde-cent; and where lies the Crime ? In the Man, fays Cultom, becaufe he is the Aggreffor: But I deny that there is the leaft Difference in that Part, for the Woman knows it, and the knows 'tis fcandalous; Why then does fhe come into it ? The Crime is hers as much as his. Nay, if a Breach of Modefty is greater in the Woman than in the Man, as some pretend, then the is the greatest Offender here too, for the Indecency on her Side is utterly inexcufable.

BUT a Queftion or two returns upon us here: What is the Indecency that you fhould bring it into the Rank of Matrimonial Whoredom, or that the Woman fhould be charged with it? The Indecency is a want of refpect to the Memory of the Dead, and pray what is the Woman concerned in that? Perhaps fhe did not fo much as know her, or had ever feen her in her Life; what then is the Memory of herto her that comes after?

THE next Queftion is this, Breach of Decency is an invation of Cuftom only, and this Cuftom Cuftom is a meer Thing of Nothing, an Original of no Authority. Matrimony as an Ordinance of GoD, and as a facred Inftitution, Cuftom can have nothing to do with that; it is not binding at all in Law, neither the Laws of GOD or Man, and what have we to do with that? The Man is fingle, and the Woman is dead; the is as really dead as if the had been in her Grave feven Years; nor is there the leaft Injury or Injuffice done to her; all the reft is a meer Homage paid to Cuftom, and which is not at all its due.

I give this the greater Length becaufe 'tis a popular Argument, and often brought to defend thefe fudden, hafty and indecent Marriages I fpeak of; and likewife to let you fee, that though I fhould grant every Word of it, yet my Objection against the Practice of fuch hafty Marriages stands good, and the Reproach is the fame.

For, 1. My Objection is not fo much againft the Breach of a Cuftom, as it is againft a Breach of Modefty; and if Cuftom only has made it fo, for Cuftom or Crime made Modefty. a Virtue at firft, yet fince it is fo we are bound by it fo far, as we are to do every thing which is of good Report, to avoid every thing that gives offence, and is an occasion of Reproach, though it may in it felf be literally lawful.

2. But my Objection lies chiefly another Way, and points at another thing; the hafty and untimely, or unfeafonable Marriages which I complain of, and which, I fay, are fcandalous and criminal, are fo, as they difcover themfelves to be the Effect of a raging, ungoverned Appetite, a furious immodelt Guft of Z 2. Sen[ 342 ]

Senfuality, a Flame of immoderate Defires.

As thefe are Things which fhould be mortified and retrained, not indulged and gratified, fo every indecent untimely Step taken in purfuit of this corrupt and vitiated Flame, is a Crime; and therefore I think a Marriage founded upon this Foot is neither more or lefs than a Matrimonial Whoredom, or at leaft a Degree of it. 'Tis a criminal Guft, giving Beginning to a feandalous and indecent Action, which by that means becomes criminal too, though otherwife literally lawful; that is, it becomes Matter of Scandal, and gives offence to others, which is what, by the Scripture Rule, Chriftians ought induftrioufly to avoid.

Now when a Woman, within a Month or two after her Husband's Death, fhall receive the Addrefles of another, or a Man within fuch, or fometimes a fhorter Time, fhall apply himfelf to a Woman for Matrimony; can this be imposed to be from a modelt Foundation, or within the compass of religious Regards? It cannot be.

MATRIMONY, though it is not fo regarded, is really a religious, facred and divine Inftitution; it ought to be taken as fuch, and never undertaken without Regard to its religious Foundation: So far as it is made a ftalking Horfe to a corrupt and bafer Defire, fo far as it is made use of as a Pretence to cover the vitiated Appetite, give it what fine Words you will, and guild it over with as many fair Outtides as you will, 'tis fo far turned into a Matrimonial Whoredom: The Vice is at the Bottom, the Matrimony is enter'd upon meerly to gratify it, and to please the Appetite under the  $\begin{bmatrix} 343 \end{bmatrix}$ the Cover of Liberty, and under the Plea of Law.

IN a Word, all fuch Marriages, or fuch Motions to Marriage, where the fenfual Part is the effential Part, are fo far liable to this Charge; when the Vice, I fay, is the moving Caufe, and the Ceremony is the Tool to introduce and colour it; that's what I call legal Wickednefs; when the Law of Matrimony is made a Key to the Union of the Bodies more than of the Souls, opening the Door to the infatiate Appetite, and covering the Fire of Vice under the legal Inftitution. This I call Matrimonial Whoredom, and, I think, it merits the Name very well.

MATRIMONY is a chaft and modeft Scheme of Living; 'tis a State, not a Circumstance of Life; the End and Meaning of it is the raifing Families, procreating Children, to be brought up religioufly; 'tis an Eftablishment contracted, or at least ought to be fo, as an Appointment of Heaven; and for folid and fubstantial Enjoyments; it is durable as Life, and bounded only by the Duration of Life. If it be enter'd into upon other Foundations, and fo far as it is fo engaged in, fo far 'tis abufed; fuch are joined together indeed, but not ac-cording to GoD's holy Ordinance; 'tis debauching the Ordinance, corrupting the propofed End; 'tis a good Means made use for a bad End; and as 'tis purfued with wicked Defigns, 'tis fo far a wicked Engagement: Such do not come together like Man and Wife, but like W- and R-; in thort, they come together to take their Fill of Crime, and that, made a Crime by the Manner of it, tho' not in the Letter of it.

As when a Set of Gentlemen make an Apa pointment for what they call a Drinking-bout, they make their Agreement to meet at fuch a Tavern on purpofe: 'Tis certainly and literally lawful for them to meet. Society, and even Society for diversion, is lawful and good; but this is a Meeting meerly to be drunk, meerly to fatisfy the Appetite or Thirst of Wine, and with an Intention, nay, with a refolved Purpofe of being Drunk; and what is to be faid then of the Meeting it felf? It was a Wickednefs in it felf; 'twas a purpofe to gratify a vitious Appetite; and fo far the very Meeting it felf was a Crime; 'twas an Act of Debauchery; 'twas founded on a thirst of Wine, and a Thirst not to be quenched but by Excess and Intemperance.

THE Parallel is exactly juft, the Matrimony contracted in the manner I fpeak of is juft the fame; 'tis founded in Crime, the fenfual Part is the Foundation and Original of it; and the Matrimony is only the help, the convenience to bring it to pafs lawfully, as two refolving to go over a River to commit a Theft; the patting the River, and the Robbery, is the Intent; the Ferry-Boat is only the lawful Affiftant to an unlawful Purpofe.

BUT neither is this all, for it is criminal to abufe the Ordinance, to turn the facred Appointment of Heaven to a corrupt and vile Ufe, making it the affiftant to Senfuality, and to gratifying the Flefh, to quenching a difhonourable Flame, which was very far from the meaning or defign of the Inftitution. That was all pure and upright, fingly and fimply, honeft and clean in every Part and Branch of it, and cannot without a Crime be turned, turned, and applied to gratify unchaft Defires.

ř,

IT is greatly wanted that our Governours and conftituted Powers fhould take notice of fuch Things, and, as far as lies in them, prevent the turning and inverting the End of thefe nice Inftitutions, that they may not be apply'd to wrong Purpofes, or debauched by Men of vitious Inclinations, to fuch Ends as are fcandalous to Religion, and to humane Society.

'Tis true, it would be hard to make a Regulation which fhould fuit to every Circumstance which might happen, and to the nature of the Thing too; yet fomething might be done; for Example, I think there might be a Law made which fhould limit the Rule of Decency in the Cafe of fecond Marriages, binding the Parties furviving to a certain Time, in which it fhould not be lawful for the Man or the Woman to marry after the Death of the Wife or Husband that went before; and if any did marry within that Time, it fhould be efteemed not only unlawful but fhameful and odious, done in meer fenfuality, and to gratify the worft Part, not the Christian Part; it fhould, in fhort, be a Brand of Infamy on the Perfon, whether Man or Woman, either to marry, or even to treat of, or about Marriage, within that Time.

SUCH a Law would, at leaft, diftinguish People one from another; they would be known and mark'd out; and if that Law was duly and exactly executed, the Offence would, in time, grow out of use, be really fcandalous, no Body would be guilty of it that had any any Value for their own Character, becaufe it would expose the Crime, as well as the Fact.

346

I grant, that the Refpect to the Dead is not the thing that makes the Crime, but that Refpect being a Debt of Decency, why is it not paid? Let the Reafon be enquired into, the Anfwer muft be natural, becaufe the Party has a fecret Inclination to gratify, and which is to be obliged in fpight of that Pretence. Now all Matrimony that is meerly enter'd into to gratify the Inclination, that is undertaken meerly for the fenfual Part, is, in my Senfe, a debauched Matrimony, becaufe Senfuality is not the true End and Defign of the Ordinance of Matrimony, but a Corruption of it, and an Abufe.

It is for the Honour of Matrimony, and to dignify the Ordinance in a due Manner, that those Things fhould be avoided which bring Scandal upon it, they it be but in the Circumftances, not the effential Part: To fee a Couple come together meerly and openly to gratify the vitious and Brutal Part, and fatisfy their Senfuality, and then take the facred Name of G o D in their Mouths, and tell us, they do come together according to GoD's boly Ordinance. This is making, not a Jeft of Religion only, but 'tis Prophanenefs, 'tis turning facred Things to debauched Purpofes, 'tis giving religious Titles to corrupt Undertakings, and fanctifying Crimes by the Mask of Innocence.

LET Proteftants and Chriftians, or those who would be effeemed fuch, look back upon the Purity which they profess, and no longer fludy to cover and conceal Crime under the Appearance of Religion, but honeftly explode the vitious Part, and diffinguish rightly between Things. Things fincere, and Things fhameful and hypocritical.

WHERE Matrimony is pretended, let it be as it ought to be, according to its Inftitution, according to God's holy Ordinance; and as after joining Chriftians are ftill bound by the Laws of Decency and Modefty, let their coming together be fo too; let it be without the Reproach of Crime, without the Brand of Indecent and Immodeft, which are the Offspring of a most infamous Principle. They that fix the Blame upon themfelves thus at first, may depend that the Brand of it, like burning in the Hand, will be Indelible, the Blot never wears out; whatever their Characters are afterward, the Hiftory is told with this Hefitation, But He or But She did so or so, married in a most scandalous Way, immediately after the Death of the former Wife or Husband; and with this Reproach they must be content to go on to their Graves.

How eafily may People avoid thefe Reproaches? And how much is it every Chriftian Man's Duty to avoid them, if pofible? A little mortifying of the Fleih, with its Affections and Lufts, would do it, efpecially as to the religious Part; a little Prudence in reftraining their Inclination; a little Government of the corrupt Flame; a little Concern for Reputation, for Character, and for the Honour of Posterity, would fmooth the Way; that's the civil Part.

Bur wretched Conduct'. How are all thefe Things laugh'd at? How are all the Obligations of Decency and Modefty forgot? When the Vice prompts, when the fenfual Part ftirs, the Voice of Reafon is drown'd and ftill'd by the Clamour

[ 348 ]

Clamour of the Senfes; Nature rebels againf Principle, Vice gets the better of Virtue, and the wicked Appetite finks all the Refolutions of Abstinence and Moderation.

AND what is all this Scandal heap'd up for ? How mean, how fordid a Thing, if it be confider'd, abftracted from that fpecious Pretence ? And what is the Difference betwixt this and Whoring, if there was not this Refuge of a fcandalous Marriage? Would fuch Men fcruple quenching the Flame a more irregular Way ? How long would Virtue reftrain them, if Modefty and Decency will not ? How long will they be afraid of Crime, that are not afraid Scandal ?

THE Man, outrageous in his Appetite, must have a Relief, his fenfual Part teazes and importunes him : How long would he hold out against it, if there was not this Relief under the Colour of Law? As if the Letter of the Law would defend him, where the Effence, the intent and meaning of the Law is against him.

I can never hope for fuch a Man, that he would reftrain himfelf for fear of the Sin, who will not for fear of the Scandal; efpecially where the Scandal brings Crime along with it too: 'Tis a Crime upon himfelf; 'tis a Sin againft himfelf, againft his Fame, and againft his Family and Pofterity; it lays an indelible Blot upon them, and he Brands himfelf with fuch a Mark of Infamy, that not only his Children after him fhall bear a Share of, but fuch as his Children themfelves fhall reproach him with in their Turn, and when 'twill be too late for him to Blufh, if it fhould not be too late for him to Repent of it.

No-

NOTHING that I know of, at leaft nothing of the Kind, can be a worfe Blot upon the Character of a Chriftian, than this of an unbounded, ungoverned Senfuality, and of doing fcandalous Things from fuch a vile Principle. The Man himfelf, or the Woman either, will be as much afhamed of it, and as much reproach themfelves afterwards as any Body elfe, unlefs the Crime it felf hardens them against Shame.

CAPTAIN --- H was a noted Offender of this kind, he was a Commander of a good Ship, and his Name is now a ftanding Precedent, both of the Crime I am fpeaking of, and the Penitence; he buried a virtuous, fober, beautiful Wife, and with a Face of unconcerned Levity, looks immediately round him for another, even before his first Wife was buried. As the Thought was furprizing and impudent, fo he could not expect any Woman of Modefty would talk with him upon that Subject; and as he found he was abhorr'd and fcorn'd upon the very mention of it, he feeks out where he thought he fhould not be refufed: and that Way he answered his wicked Defign immediately; for he married in two Days after his Wife was buried.

IN an ill Hour, purfuing his vitious Appetite, he fingles out a Woman, Fool as I was, (faid he afterwards). What need I have ask'd her to marry? If it had been t'other Queftion, I need not have fear'd a Denial.

IN a word, he marry'd her, lov'd her, lay with her, and hated her, and all within the compass of a Fortnight; in another Fortnight he went to Sea and left her, and, in two Months more, was caft away, drown'd, and faw her no more; more; and the Woman marry'd again the next Day after fhe heard of it.

THE Man was always (before this Step) lov'd and efteem'd among his Friends; he pafs'd till that time for a Man of Virtue and Sobriety; and, had he thought fit to have fubdued his vitious Appetite but one Year, or perhaps half a Year, he had preferved that Character, and might have had his Choice of a Wife among the Ladies in his Neighbourhood; very few would have refus'd him. And this he acknowledged in the hearing of the Perfon from whom I had the Relation.

BUT overjoy'd with the Liberty he had upon the change of his Circumstances; quitting a fick Companion, and left to range the World for another, he facrificed his Fame to his Senfuality, and could not prevail with himfelf to ftay, no not a Week; which Precipitation inade him the fcorn of all about him; and, as I faid, in lefs than a Month he could have hang'd himfelf with the fame fatisfaction, compar'd to what he had in the prepofterous Step he had taken: But it was too late to look back; he could never retrieve it. He was indeed a Penitent, as to the Folly of it; and own'd to me perfonally, that it was nothing but meer Matrimonial Whoredom. I use his own Words; and it was the very first Cafe that put the Purpose of reproving it in this manner, into my Thoughts.

THE Tragedy of this poor Gentleman was enough to fill any Man's Mind with a juft Indignation at the Practice; and though we fee it often done, where perhaps the Confequence is not to fatal, vet the particular Scandal of it is not at all leffen'd: Had he not found that favourable vourable Paffage out of Life, whether in Judgment or in Mercy, GOD alone knows, I know not what might have been his Fate; for it was fuch a mortification to him to fee himfelf fo univerfally defpis'd upon this fcandalous Occafion, and, as he himfelf faid, to deferve it too; whereas he was, on the contrary, fo generally beloved before, that it was more than all the Philofophy he was Mafter of could fupport.

He was indeed a Memento to his Friends, and a Warning againft Matrimonial Whoredom to all that knew him. I fay nothing of the Creature he took; fhe is below our Confideration in the Cafe, becaufe fhe had no Character, no Virtue to expose.

ALL the Argument this unfortunate Perfon had to excufe himfelf was, that he was loth to go to a Whore; but he was horribly afham'd to mention it; nor did he fpeak fo but to his very intimate Friends, of whom I was one. But he repented heartily of that Caution, and own'd to us, that he believ'd his Sin was as great, and efpecially, as he faid, the Scandal was greater. Nor did he think himfelf lefs guilty of Whoredom for the formality of the Marriage; and I am to acknowledge that it was from this Man, and from his Penitentials, that, as above, I had the very Words which I make the Title of this Work, and which I have on fo many Occafions repeated, (viz.) Matrimonial Whoredom.

FROM this fad Hiftory in a Man, whom I efteemed as a Man of Worth, and for that Reafon effected his Story as confiderable, I might proceed to give flagrant Examples of the like fcandalous Matches, and from the like unjuftifiable Principle, but without the like penitent AcknowAcknowledgment; fuch is the famous  $B_{----}$ , of wanton Fame, who married five Husbands in lefs than four Years; and impudently declares, fhe refolves never to ftay above a Fortnight unmarry'd at a time. But thefe Examples are too mean for our mention; the telling a fcandalous Story of a fcandalous Perfon is no Novelty, there's no Inftruction in it, nothing elfe is to be expected. But the practice of fuch things where Men pretend to underftand themfelves, to have a Senfe of Reputation, of Virtue, Prudence, and, above all, of Religion; this indeed has fomething wonderful in it, and is worth recording.

ANOTHER fcandalous Piece of Matrimonial Whoredom, and which I call untimely Marriages, is that of marrying Infants and Perfons not of Ages fit for Marriage, or, as we fay, not marriageable. This has fomething extreamly fhocking and furfeiting in it, and, indeed, will lefs bear a repetition, than any thing we have fpoken of yet; and I am harder put to it to express the just Detestation of it, especially in the Cases which represent themselves on the Particular before me, because the Particulars, and the Motives of them, can hardly be modeftly mentioned.

 $\mathcal{J}$  — M —, liv'd not twenty Miles off of Highgate, he had two young Ladies in his Houfe, and who were bred up by him, or under him, his own Daughter, and a little Coufin his Child's Play-fellow; his Wife died, that was the first opening to his Wickednefs; they were both young, his Daughter about eleven Years old, the Coufin between eleven and twelve, from his little Coufins, being his Daughter's Play-fellow, he wants to make her his own, and and, in about two Years, made himfelf fo familiar with her, (to defcribe it no nearer) that he divefted her of all Modefty alfo; but that he might not make it a Piece of Debauchery, as he called it, he gets a profligate Parson, and marries the Girl, himfelf upwards of Forty, and the Child a little above Thirteen, which he alledged was a marriageable Age, and before the was Fourteen the was with Child by him. Whether fhe died in Child-bed or no, I do not remember; but this I have heard for Truth, that a few Years after he was under Profecution, or at last fled the Country for a more criminal Conversation with the tother Child, (viz.) his own Daughter, when, to palliate the Matter, he would have marry'd her too; but the Defign was happily prevented. I hope no Body would deny, but that whatever the first was, the laft was not Matrimonial Whoredom only, but Matrimonial Inceft.

IT is true, the last is a superlative in Wickednefs, and is needful to our Cafe; but the first I take to merit very justly the Title of Matrimonial Whoredom, and to come within the reach of my Text.

I could give a Counter-example to this in a Woman upwards of Forty, who, having bred up a Youth almost in Charity in her Family, and being her felf left a Widow, married the little Boy, fo I call him, and did it with Circumftances scandalous enough: The Particulars indeed I have not at large, but at his Thirteenth Year fhe married him, and before he was Fifteen Years old, had a Child by him, and after that three more.

I cannot enter into the Detail of her Story, no not fo much as I have had an Account of; 'tis <sup>t</sup>tis too foul; I have indeed no Words for it; the Englift Language is not able to cover fuch dirty Work, fo I muft leave it, as I am forced to do feveral others; but you may depend upon it, if there is fuch a thing in Nature as that I call Matrimonial Whoredom; it was here in its higheft Extent, and in the extreme of Indecency and Immodefty.

IT is true, thefe ought to have belonged to the Chapter of Marriages in unfuitable Tears; but I rather place them here, becaufe I treat thefe particular Articles as really criminal in themfelves, and in the Nature of them; the other might be unhappy, occafioned by the unfuitable Circumftances; but thefe were, as I fay, criminal; as fob fays, they ought to have been punifhed by the Judge, they ftink in the Noftrils of all mcdeft People, and are hateful and odious in the Sight both of Gop and Man.

To bring it to the Cafe in hand : Here was the Effence of Matrimonial Whoredom; the meer incentive to this Marriage must be the wicked Part, the fatisfying the brutal fenfual Appetite. What can it be lefs? The Office cf Matrimony was made but the Introduction, I had almost faid the Usher, to the Whoredom; only that indeed the Matrimony is a paffive Circumstance, not a voluntary Act; in a word, Matrimony is abused, and brought into it unjuftly; and therefore, I think, they are right in foreign Countries, where, in fuch Cafes, the Perfons are liable to Punifhment, not for the vitious Part only, which it is hard to come at there, as well as here; but they are liable, I fay, to Punishment, for abusing the holy Sacrament, fo they call Matrimony, and making it to be a Tool to hand them on to commit the Crime; this this they call Infulting the Church, and, indeed, fo I think it is; and they have their Ecclefiaftick Conftitutions, by which it is punifhable, and the Prieft is punished also that officiates in fuch a Marriage.

BUT to quit this naufeous Part as foon as we can; untimely Marriages are certainly fcandalous in their Nature, efpecially where the Age is unequal, where one, being young, and fcarce Ripe, by the ordinary Courfe of Nature, for the Marriage Bed, the other is of full Age; 'tis not a Matrimonial Whoredom only; 'tis, in my Opinion, a kind of a Matrimonial Rape, becaufe it has fomething of Violence offered to Nature in it on one Side, and fomething odioufly and criminally Immodeft, on the other.

It is true, and 'tis objected againft me here, that in other Countries it is ordinary for the Children, efpecially of great Families, to come together young, and they have a ufual Saying, that like Fruit gathered green, and laid up, they will ripen together; upon this Foot they frequently marry very early, the Ladies at eleven to twelve, and the Gentlemen at thirteen or fourteen; and, as it is the practice of the Country, there's no Scandal in it.

I have little to fay to this Practice abroad; I know_it is fo in Spain, Portugal, and fome other Places in the World; and there may be natural Reafons to be given in justification of the Practice; fome taken from the Constitution of the People, fome from the Climate, fome from one Cause, fome from another. Naturalists can fay more to it than is needful here. Man and Woman have a Vegetative, as well as a fensitive and rational Life; and there may A a 2 be be a phyfical Reafon given why Nature may be riper in one Part of the World than in another, and in fome People fooner than in others; as it is evident the Seafon for the production of the fame Fruits differ in one Place, and in one Country from another, the Vintage and the Corn-harveft, differ in one Country from another; here they gather in Auguft; there in October; and it may be the like in other Things, and in Men and Women, as well as in other Creatures, for, as I faid, the vegetative Life obeys the Law of Nature in them, as well as in Plants and Trees.

But 'tis enough that this is not the Cuftom in our Country, neither, perhaps, has Nature prepared Things to have it be fo; and though fometimes we may fee Exceptions here too, and Contracts may be made fooner, yet at fooneft the Lady fhould be fourteen to fifteen, and the Gentleman fixteen to feventeen, and even this would be thought very foon too.

I know, as above, it may be otherwife fometimes; but it is not looked upon as Modeft or Decent. I hear of an Inftance at this time of a young Lady that is big with Child, at a little above thirteen. But 'tis ill thought on; 'tis made a Jeft of; 'tis call'd a Child with Child; the Mother of the Girl is look'd awry upon, and fpoken ill of, for fuffering it; the young Thing, is looked at as People look at a Sight or Show, and as fomething monftrous.

BUT what is this to the Cafe in hand, where the Couple is equal, the Matter is the lefs; and if there be a Fault any where, it feems to lie upon the Parents, or the Guardians, or whoever had the Conduct of the young People. But this does not relate to the Cafe that I am upon a on; the two wretched Examples I have given, and which were both within the narrow Compafs of my own Knowledge, are not at all juftified by the practice of other Nations; we are, as Chriftians, to be bound by the Laws of Decency and Modesty, and, as Subjects of a just Government, by the Laws practised and received in our own Country. It is the Cuftom in fome Nations to go naked, and in others they cloath fo light, that it is, as we fay, next Door to going naked; their Cloaths being fo thin and light, that all the Parts of the Body are, as it were, defcribed to the Eye, by the Garments fetting fo close to them; as in Italy, in Turkey and Barbary, and other hot Countries: But fuch a Practice, though 'tis thought nothing of there, would be thought immodeft here to the laft Degree, and indeed scandalous; and Chriftians are to cleave fo far to the Cuftom of the Place, as to do all Things that are of good Report.

BUT I return to the Cafe of untimely Marriages, and I fhall clofe it with a Story which I have very good Authority for the Truth of, where, though I cannot fay there was any thing of Immodefty in the Defign or Intention, nor any thing Immodeft practis'd, or intended to be practis'd, yet Heaven feem'd to make it an Unhappinefs to the Party, at leaft it was a furprizing Difappointment.

A certain antient Widow, having a tolerable good Eftate, but no Children, and being upwards of fixty Years of Age, had fixed her Thoughts upon two young Women, which were her Relations (Nieces I think) to leave what E<sub>x</sub> ftate fhe had to, and which, divided between the two, would have made them tolerable good Fortunes. A a 3 As

[ 358 ]

As fhe intended them this good Luck, fo'tis likely fhe gave them fome tolerable Additions while fhe was alive, as to their Education, and perhaps to their Equipage.

HOWEVER, the foolifh young Girls, fuppo-fing their Aunt had no Body elfe to give her Eftate to, and not perhaps fenfible of the Kindnefs shew'd them, at least not fo fenfible of it as they ought to have been, carry'd it but very indifferently to the old Lady; not only flighting her, and neglecting her on many Occations, but fometimes took upon them to be faucy to her; and, in a word, at length they too plainly difcovered that they looked upon the Estate to be, as it were, their right, and 25 if the old Lady lived too long for them ; they would be frequently talking to one another, or to others, what they would do, and how they would live when they came to the Eftate, if the old Woman was but out of the Way.

EITHER fome officious People, perhaps Servants, had fpite enough to report this to the old Lady, or the Nieces had the Indiferetion to let her hear fome of it; the latter not very unlikely; or fhe gathered from the whole Tenour of their Conduct, that they flighted her; that they only waited the good Hour, that what little Refpect they flew'd her, was evidently for what they were to get by her, and no otherwife, and that they waited with impatience when fhe would be pleafed to walk off; all which was indeed true in Fact.

AFTER the old Lady had thus taken notice of their Conduct fome time, fhe once took Occafion more particularly to let them know it : She told them what fhe had obferved, how [359] how unkindly they treated her, how perfectly at liberty fhe was to give her Eftate to whom fhe pleafed, and that the was not fo old, and come to doat fo much, as to give what fhe had to thofe that did not think it worth their while to deferve it, or that could not afford to be Civil to her; that fhe found they only gap'd for her Death, and that fne fhould take care, if they did not alter their Conduct, they fhould have little enough to expect from her.

THIS alarm'd them a little; and if they had been any thing but thoughtlefs Girls, they would have chang'd their Methods a little. But it wore off in a little time, and they went on just as they did before.

At length the old Lady, thoroughly provoked by their ill Ufage, and her Refentment being quickened by fome particular extraordinary Carriage, takes a fudden Refolution to change her way of living, leave off Houfe-keeping, and retire into the Country, to end her Days, as the called it, in Peace, and do good with what the had.

HER Nieces foon found they had loft themfelves fo much with her, that they had not Intereft enough to alter her Refolutions, though they hung about her then with Tears and Entreaties, fo they employ'd other Relations to intercede with her. But fhe foon ftopt their Mouths, with letting them know how her Nieces had treated her, and what fair Warning fhe had given them, adding fome particular Unkindneffes which fhe had met with from them, and fome Speeches which they had been weak enough to let her overhear; upon which, in fhort, fhe was unalterably refolved either to give away her Eftate to charitable Ufes, or A a 4 otherotherwife to difpole of it, fo that they fhould never be at all the better for it; and that it was too late now to perfuade her, for fhe was fixed in her Meafures; and the Reafons being fuch as could not be anfwered, her Neices had nothing to do but to confider of fome other Ways to maintain themfelves, for fhe had no more to fay to them.

THIS was difinal News to the two Girls; but they had no Remedy, fo they fhifted as they could; we have no more to fay about them.

THE old Lady, according to her Refolution, as above, put off her Houfe, and went into the Country where her Eftate lay, and dwelt with one of her Tenants in the Country; here fhe liv'd perfectly retir'd, and attended only with one Servant; and by this Time fhe was about fixty-five Years old, but of a found, hail Conflitution, a chearful, cafy Difpofition, calm Temper, and all the happy Tokens of long Life.

It happened one Day, talking ferioufly with her Tenant, a good honeft plain Man, but a Man of Senfe, and particularly of abundance of religious Knowledge, fhe made her Complaint to him, how unkindly fhe had been treated by her Nieces, and how fhe had refented it, and was refolved, as above, that none of them fhould be the better for her.

THE good Man exhorted and perfuaded her to forgive the young Women, to confider they were young and gay, and wanted Difcretion, and that, no doubt, they would carry it otherwife to her now, if fhe would receive them again; he added the Command of our Saviour, to forgive Enemies, and our offending Brother; and to pleaded often with her for the two poor Caft-off Cait-off Girls. But he found the old Lady in flexible; fhe had taken Things fo ill that fhe could not go back; fhe would forgive them, fhe faid, and pray for them, but fhe would never give her Eftate to them; that fhe faid fhe was not bound to do upon any Account whatever. In a word, the good Man found there was no room to fay any thing farther upon that Subject, unlefs he would utterly difoblige her, which it was not his Bufinefs to do; fo he meddled no more with it.

AFTER fome time, the old Lady tells her Tenant, the wanted to fpeak with him, and his Wife and Daughter together; the Daughter was, it feems, a young married Woman, but a fober, grave and religious Body, like her Father; and alfo of a Judgment above her Years; and this, it feems, made the old Lady take her into the Council; the Tenant had alfo a Son, but he was but a little Boy of about nine or ten Years old.

AT this Meeting the old Lady tells them. that as fhe was now in Years, and could not expect to live much longer, she thought it was time to fettle her Affairs in the World, and to difpose of what Estate she had to leave behind her; that they all know how fhe had been treated by those to whom she had been fo kind, and to whom fhe had purposed to be ftill fo much kinder; That they likewife knew what her Refolutions were with refpect to that; that at his Importunity however, fhe had fo far forgiven them, as to refolve to give each of them a Legacy of One hundred Pounds to help to support them, and to teftify her Charity, notwithstanding the ill Ufage they had had been pleafed to give her; but that now it was time for her to fettle the reft.

AFTER this Difcourfe, fhe told them, that fhe had been ftudying all pollible Ways how fhe might difpofe of her Eftate moft to her fatisfaction; and that, upon the whole, fhe was refolved to marry. The Tenant, a grave, and, as I faid, good Man, feem'd to be greatly diftafted at that kind of Propolal for fettling her Eftate, and the Tenant's Wife and Daughter, both began to difcover their furprize at it, and a kind of naufeating the Propolal.

BUT hold, fays fhe, hear what I have farther to fay before you give your Opinion. My Propofal of marrying Thall have no Scandal in it, I'll promife you; I shall leave no room for Reproach; and you will fay fo, when you hear who I have pitch'd upon for my Husband. In fhort, there is a little Boy in your Town whom I have chosen for a Husband, and upon whom I will fettle my Eftate; and he is fo young, that no Body can raife any Objection against it; for, to be fure, I shall be in my Grave before he will be grown up to Man's Eftate; and, giving them no time to anfwer, fhe added, this little Boy is your Son. I think, fays the, you fay he is not above nine or ten Years old, and I am almost feventy; and, if you give your Confent, I'll put him to School ; and after that, if I fhould live fo long, I'll put him to 'Prentice at London to a good Trade, and give One hundred Pounds with him, and, to be fure, I fhall be dead before he will be out of his Time; and then, felling Part of the Eftate, he will have a good Stock to fet up with, and the remainder will make a good Jointure for a Wife.

THE Tenant was strangely furprized with the Propofal, and indeed was embarafs'd with it. As for the Women, they were quite filenc'd. But the good Man told her, that indeed the Propofal The had made of marrying a Child, would take away all the Scandal which he was before concerned about on her Account; but that it would be a fad Blow to her own Relations; and tho' he knew not what to fay as to his Child, whom he would be very tender of hurting, feeing fhe had fuch kind Thoughts about him, as to Defign him her Eftate, yet he could not ftill but beg of her to confider very well before the Difinherited her two Nieces, and, at leaft, to do fomething more for them. But, in fhort, fhe was immoveable as to that Part ; and, after fome other Difficulties which the old Tenant started, for he did not feem to come very willingly into it, no not to the laft, it was however agreed on, and fhe was married to the Boy.

ACCORDING to her Propofal, fhe put him to School, and had him made a very good Scholar; and fhe liv'd not only to fee him come home from the School, but to be big enough to go 'Prentice, and alfo to fee him come out of his Time; by which time he was about twenty-two Years of Age.

BUT, as I faid, even this unfuitable Match did not prove fo fatisfactory as might have been expected; for it pleafed GOD this Woman liv'd to fuch a prodigious Age, that the little Boy was feventy-two Years of Age when he follow'd her to the Church to bury her, and fhe was One hundred twenty-feven Years old.

THIS Story I had attefted to me by a Perfon of an unqueftion'd Veracity, who told me, he was himfelf at her Funeral: She was fixty-five when fhe marry'd him, and liv'd fixty-two Years with him; fhe indeed made him fome Amends for the difparity of Years by this, that fhe was a most excellent Perfon, of an inimitable Difposition, preferv'd the Youth of her Temper, and the Strength of her Understanding, Memory and Eye-fight to the last; and, which was particularly remarkable, fhe bred a whole new Set of Teeth, as white as Ivory, and as even as a Youth, after she was ninety Years old.

HERE was a Difparity, 'tis true; but here was none of the corrupt Part, which I have made the Mark of my Reproof, and fo juftly too. Here was no Vice, no fenfual Part, to be fo much as thought of; and yet, I fay, it could not but be a difappointment to the young Man; and fhe would often complain to him of the Injury fhe did him in living fo long. But I did not hear that it gave him any Uneafinefs; her extraordinary good Temper making him fo much amends for 1t.

THERE is a Cuftom of marrying Children one to another by the Compact of their Parents, while the faid Children are very young; as has been the Practice abroad, and as we had lately an Example of in the French and Spanifb Courts, tho' not very encouraging neither by its Succefs, or fitted much for an Example.

THIS has its Inconveniencies in it on many Accounts; but as they do not come within the reach of the criminal Part, I do not fay they are concerned in the Reproof of this Satyr; nor am I fpeaking of fuch.

BUT fince I am taking notice of the various Sorts of untimely Marriages, and I have mentioned tioned this; I fhould do Juftice to the Practice of our own Country in those Cases, namely, that in fuch Compacts of Parents they are generally made thus, upon Condition that the young People like one another when they are grown up, and fit to come together.

THIS has both Reafon and Religion in it, and feems to be founded upon the great Principle of Liberty, both Civil and Ecclefiaftick, which this Nation are happy in the Enjoyment of.

INDEED, it feems a kind of Tyranny over our Children, which we have no Power to exercife, to anticipate their Affections, and oblige them in their Infancy to take up with an Object they have no liking to, and bind them down here or there before-hand. I will not fay, but it may indeed be a kind of befpeaking their Diflike from the natural Averfion which Men commonly have to every Thing which is impofed upon them, and to that irkfome Thing call'd, Being Impofed upon.

CHAP.

366

LEDNGE ENCLESSION CALL

CHAP. XIV.

Of Clandestine, Forcible and Treacherous MARRIAGES.

T is with a great deal of Reafon and Justice, that our Laws have made stealing of Ladies criminal; I mean a Capital Criminal. It feemed a little hard, that a Gentleman might have the fatisfaction of hanging a Thief that stole an old Horfe from him, but could have no Juffice against a Rogue for stealing his Daughter.

THE Arts and Tricks made use of to Trapan, and, as it were, Kidnap young Women away into the Hands of Brutes and Sharpers, were very fcandalous, and it became almost dangerous for any one to leave a Fortune to the difpofal of the Perfon that was to enjoy it, and where it was fo left, the young Lady went always in Danger of her Life, the was watch'd, laid in wait for, and, as it were, befieged by a continual Gang of Rogues, Cheats, Gamefters, and fuch like ftarving Crew, fo that fhe was obliged to confine her felf like a Prifoner to her Chamber, be lock'd, and barr'd, and bolted in, and have her Eyes every Moment upon the Door, as if the was afraid of Bayliffs and Officers to arreft her; or elfe fhe was Inatch'd up, feized upon, hurry'd up into a Coach Coach and fix, a Fellow drefs'd up in a Clergyiman's Habit to perform the Ceremony, and a Piftol clapt to her Breaft to make her confent to be marry'd: And thus the Work was done. She was then carry'd to the private Lodging, put to Bed under the fame awe of Swords and Piftols; a Fellow that fhe never faw in her Life, and knows nothing of, comes to Bed to her, deflowers her, or, as may be well faid, ravifhes her, and the next Day fhe is called a Wife, and the Fortune feized upon in the Name of the Husband; and perhaps, in a few Days more, play'd all away at the Box and the Dice, and the Lady fent home again naked, and a Beggar.

THIS was the Cafe within the Times of our Memory, till the Parliament thought fit to make it Felony, and that without Benefit of Clergy, and till fome of these Fortune Ravishers have fince that paid for their Succefs at the Gallows. And now, indeed, the Ladies are a little fafer, and must be attempted with a little more Art, not taken by Storm, Sword in hand, as Men take fortified Towns; but they must be brought to give a formal Affent by the cunning of Female Agents, wheedling and deluding them, and playing the Game another Way, till they are decoy'd into Wedlock; the Man pretending himfelf Quality, and a Perfon equal in Estate; by which Craft a certain Kentill Lady of Fortune, was most exquisitely drawn in at once to marry a City Chimney-fweeper and was forc'd to ftand by it too, after the came to an underftanding of the Bargain fhe had made; and another Weft Country Lady, a Highwayman, and the like.

THESE

THESE Matches, however, come within the reach of our Complaint, and are but with too much Juffice branded with the Charge of Matrimonial Whoredom. It is true, in these Cafes it is the Money more then the Senfuality, the Fortune more than the Woman; and fo it might be called Matrimonial Avarice. But as the knowing of the Woman is the effential finifhing Part of the Work, and the Title or Claim to the Eftate is fix'd upon a full Poffeffion, which they call a Confummation of the Marriage; the Word Whoredom is not foreign to the Charge, at least on the Man's Side, becaufe he lies with the Woman, not as a wedded Wife, according to God's holy Ordinance, but meerly to entitle him to her Eftate, which, in fhort, is perfecting the End of Matrimony 5 and no Man can fay, it is a legal Marriage in the Sight of Him whole appointment only can make Matrimony lawful.

MARRYING Women by force, can never be called marrying according to Gon's holy Ordinance; for all Violence is unjust, and all Injustice is inconfistent with Holinefs. For an impure and righteous Defign can never be comprehended in a holy and pure Inftitution it is determined by almost all the Laws of Matrimony in the World, that Marriage ought to be the Act and Deed of both the Parties, the Act and Deed not of their meer Compliance, and fubmifion by Necessity, but the Act of their Minds, their free and unconftrained Choice; and if it be not fo, it is not really a lawful Marriage. Marriage by conftraint is like a Bond given in Prifon, the Party is not bound to the Payment : To be marry'd by force is not to be Married, but to be taken Captive and and ravifhed, as the Turks take Slaves, and then chufing them for their Beauty, fingle them out for the Seraglio, to be lain with by the Emperor, or by the Bafha or Grand Vizier, whofe Serail they are enclosed in, whenever he pleafes to demand them.

[ 359 ]

In a word, a forc'd Marriage is a Contradiction in Speech, the Terms are inconfiftent; 'tis no Marriage at all, or, if you will call it a Marriage, 'tis no Matrimony. How are the Women to us'd, faid to take fuch a Man to be their wedded Husband? The very meaning of the Word Matrimony, in feveral Languages, fignifies chufing: Can a Woman be faid to thuse the Man, when the is dragg'd to his Bed as a Malefactor is dragg'd to Execution, or, as we express it, as a Bear to the Stake? that is to fay, to the Place where he is to be Baited with Dogs, and which he knows is to be his Cafe, and therefore hangs back till he is haul'd along by the Ring in his Nofe, and cannot refift it.

BRING this back to our former Teft: Every Marriage where the pure and fimple End of the Matrimony is not fuch as agrees with the religious End of the Inftitution, is, in my Senfe, a Matrimonial Whoredom, and no other, and, among all the reft, this of forcing a Woman to be marry'd, is one of the worft.

I must be allow'd here to except Political State Marriages, made for the Interest of Nations, forming Alliances and Friendships, binding or engaging Confederacies and Leagues, between Princes and People.

ALSO Family-Marriages for the preferving Eftates in the Lines and Blood of Houfes, keeping up the Names and Relations, and the like prudent Ends; in which Cafe, though Violence is not ufed, yet 'tis generally expected the Women fhould comply, and they do comply, I may fay they do always comply indeed. I fearce remember an Infrance in Hiftory of any that have refufed.

IF there is any thing in these Matches to the diflike of the Parties, they must take it as an Accident to the Dignity of their Birth, and go through it as well as they can; they have generally the State and Honour of their Birth and Families, and the Titles they poffefs, to make up the Deficiencies, and to be Equivalents for the lofs of their perfonal Endearments; fo we have nothing to fay to those Things. If Princes and great Perfons are content to marry on those Conditions, they must do as they pleafe, the Confequence is to themfelves. We are not fpeaking here of People under the Influence of Politick Government, and who move this Way or that, by Reafons of State ; but of People within the Circle of Equality with our felves, and under the Government of Laws both of Juffice and Reafon, and alfo of the Conftitution; and to fuch, I think, what I have obferved, is juft. Matrimony is a Law of Decency, binding to Chriftians, and to Peeple who pretend to live and act as Chriftians do, or fhould do; and those who do not proceed in it with a due regard to Decency and Chriftianity too, fhould lay afide the Name of Chriftian, and pretend to it no more.

IT is true, there are various Sorts of forced Marriages. Those which I have named, viz. taking a Woman away by Strength, and terrifying her afterward into Compliance, our Laws, as I have [ 371 ] have faid, have declared against; so that I need fay nothing more to them.

THERE is alfo a violence of Importunity, and a violence of Authority; both thefe alfo I have fpoken to at length, as well as the Violence occafioned by the Perfon having it in his or her Power to give or with-hold the Fortunes and Portions of the Perfons.

BUT there is yet a violence of Treachery; and this is alfo a Crime which indeed ought to be punished by the Judge. This is generally practis'd upon the Ladies indeed, but fometimes both Sides are engag'd, and it is done with the utmost Cunning and Artifice: First, a Spy, or fecret Agent is plac'd in the Family, (or as near it as may be) where the Perfon lives, and who infinuating into the Acquaintance of the Lady, and perhaps into her Confidence and Favour, fails not to encroach gradually fo far, as to bring the Perfon who defires her Affiftance, or employs her for that Purpofe, into the Lady's Company ; recommends him, gives his Character, fets other People to give his Character; and thus, in a word, the Lady is SET, as a Rook fets a Cully, for a Sharper, that is to fay ; for, &c.

PERHAPS my Readers may be too fober to underftand the Newgate Language, that is fuitable to this wicked Work; namely, that the Cully is an innocent or ignorant Perfon, who a Sharper, that is a Gamefter, wants to draw in to Play.

THE Rook is a third Perfon, who fets him, as they call it, that is, gets into his Company, infinuates into his Society, fcrapes Acquaintance with him, and fo gets him to an Alehoufe or Tavern, where the Gamefter is fure to lie B b 2 ready, ready, and fo draw the poor ignorant Man in to play, and cheat him of his Money.

[ 372 ]

IN like manner the Sharper here employs the Rook too, and who, in these Cases, is alwavs a Woman. She is fure to get acquainted with the Lady; and, after fome time, and getting into her Confidence, takes care to let the Lady know, that fhe understands that a certain Gentleman, who lodges in fuch a Place, is in Love with her; that fhe came to understand it by a very odd Accident; and then the tells her a formal Story, that being at fuch a Place a vifiting, and fome Company coming in that were Strangers, they all fat down to drink Tea; that there was a young Gentleman, a pretty modeft kind of Gentleman among them, which the Lady of the Houfe call'd Coufin, and that accidentally rifing up to make Room for more Company, the Gentleman, fays the Spy, hap-pened to be plac'd to fit next to me; upon which, fays fhe, I pufh'd my Chair back to fit farther off.

BUT what do you mean, fays the Lady; (perhaps willing enough to hear of the Thing) of being in Love with me, when he was a Stranger to you?

LAW, my Dear, fays fhe, I never faw the Gentleman before in my Life. But-

BUT what — What makes you talk fuch Stuff? fays the Lady; ftill nettled with what fhe had faid fubtilly and flily before.

WELL, he's a clever handfome Gentleman, that I must needs fay; and fo she passes it off, and talks of something else to see how the Lady would take it.

As fhe thought, fo it was; the Lady was touch'd with the first Piece of the Tale, and ftill kept kept her original Speech in her Thoughts, that the Gentleman was in Love with her; but being refolved to put her to the Ncceflity of asking her again, fhe kept back a great while; at laft the Lady brought it about again, and ask'd, Who this Gentleman was?

SHE anfwered nimbly, fhe did not know him; but, it feems, he was one of her Admirers.

WHAT do you mean by that? Jays she, I don't know him.

'IIs no matter for that, fays fhe, he knows yeu.

How do you know that? fays the Lady, when you fay you don't know the Man.

O, Madam, fays fbe, I know it for all that.

AND thus the led her on Artfully, till the found the had raifed her Expectation a little; and then the told her Story thus:

WHY, Madam, fays fhe, as I told you, I thruft my Chair back to fit farther off, the Gentleman being like to fit next me; but Madam —, meaning the Lady at whofe Houfe they were, came, and thrufting the Gentleman's Chair next to mine; Come, Sir, fays fhe to him, pray fit next to this Gentlewoman, fhe lodges in the fame Houfe where the Lady lives that is your particular Favourite.

SAY you fo, fays the Gentleman, with all my Heart; I honour every Thing that is but known to Madam —, meaning your felf; and fo he fat down.

Wно can that be ? fays the Lady.

NAY, indeed, fays fbe, I don't know that; but he is a very fine Gentleman, I affure you; fo fine a Carriage, fo modeft, and talks fo fine.

Тнем

[ 374 ]

THEN you talk'd with him, it feems, fays, the Lady.

THE Company were very merry, fays fhe, and every Body talk'd. But he has a World of Wit, that's certain.

NAY, I know you are a good Judge, fays the Lady.

No, Madam, fays fhe, that don't follow; but all the Company faid fo, as well as I.

Not to his Face, I hope.

No, Madam; but he went away. My Lord fetch'd him away in his Coach and fix.

THIS touch'd her again; and the cunning Manager could perceive it plain enough. So the dropp'd the Difcourfe again, and run on upon other Things; but upon feveral Turns the Lady brought it about again: At laft, fhe was fimple enough to ask her, If the thought there was any Thing in it? Which was all the Creature wanted.

SHE anfwered, yes, indeed, fhe believed there was, for fhe could perceive the Gentleman was mightily pleafed when any Body did but fpeak of her.

BUT who, fays the Lady, could pretend to name me to him.

O, Madam, fays fbe, I doubt not he had given Occafion enough for that before.

I hope you took no notice that you knew me, fays the Lady.

NAY, Madam, how could I help that, fays fhe, when they all told him I lodged in the fame Houfe.

WHY, that's true indeed, fays the Lady, I didn't think of that.

WELL, Madam, you need not be concern'd, fays fle, I faid nothing to your Difadvantage, I affure you.

THEN

THEN fhe began to enquire into the Difcourfe; and the fubtil Creature took care to tell her a thousand fine Things of him, which he never faid; how he toafted her Health, and what fine Things he faid of her, when, perhaps, not a Word was ever mentioned. But she faw it work'd as fhe would have it, till, in fhort, fhe brought her to be in Love with the Gentleman too, and that before the had feen him.

TIME brought Things about; and the young Lady was weak enough to go and vifit the Lady at the Houfe where this Gentleman had been feen, and which, it feems, was but a few Doors off; and the Spy had fo much Knowledge of it, as to give the Gentleman notice, who found Ways to get into the Company, and to make his Acquaintance with her. And thus it began.

FROM this Beginning, the Manager carry'd on all the reft. The Gentleman was reprefented as an Heir to a great Eftate, but not quite of Age, and that if the had him the might depend upon a thousand a Year Jointure; and, in a word, fhe drew the unwary Lady into a private Marriage, and fo to throw herfelf away upon a young Fellow, without a Shilling in his Pocket, and a good-for-nothing emptyheaded Fellow to boot. As good hap was, he was not a Rake, and fo fhe was lefs ruined than fhe would otherwife have been; but still fhe was fo far undone, as to be able to make no Provision for her felf but what he pleafed to do in good Nature, which was about One hundred Pounds a Year; and was all fhe could fave out of about Thirteen thousand Pounds.

I could fill up this Account with fuch Matrimonial Frauds as this, and fome much more tragical; but there is no Room for it : This may.

B b 4

may fuffice to fhew the Meaning of the thing; 'tis not fo remote from the Defign as may be fuggefted. Trapanning of Women is not much better than Whoring. It is true, the Woman is innocent, the Whoredom is on the Man's Side only, but on his Side it is evidently fo, and no otherwife; 'tisaComplication of Crime; 'tis a double Robbery, for they plunder the innocent Lady of her Honour and of her Eftate, both at once; not only her Money is feiz'd on, and immediately wafted, fquander'd, perhaps gam'd away, or worfe, but fhe is expofed to the utmoft Contempt and Difgrace.

FIRST, expecting that fhe is received into the Arms of a Gentleman, and that fhe takes into her Embraces and to her Affection, a Man of Honour and Fortune, fhe is profituted to a Scoundrel, a Mechanick, or, which is infinitely worfe, a Rake, a debauch'd infected Carkafe, who at once defpoils her of her felf, fo we may juftly call it, and communicates to her the worft of all Contagion, a Poifon in her Blood, an impure and loathfome Plague, fo that fhe is ruin'd at once in Life and Eftate.

THIS is worfe than Matrimonial Whoredom, for it is Matrimonial Murther, and the poor Lady is undone; fhe is Beggar'd on one hand, and ruin'd on the other, and is foon tranfpos'd from a fine furnished House to an Hospital, and from thence to the Grave, and perhaps ftarv'd too, to make her Miseries more compleat.

THIS is a Mifchief we yet want a Law for; and, indeed, 'tis wonderful to me that we fhould do fo. It feems to me, that a Man in fuch Circumftances merits as much the Gallows for an attempt of that Nature, as it is possible for him to do by any other Crime he can commit. I would would humbly recommend it to the Legislature to think of proper Remedies for fo dreadful a Mifchief.

It is not for me to dictate Measures in such Cafes; 'tis enough that I represent the Crime, that I endeavour to drefs it up in such Cloaths as are proper to fet it forth in. All that is due to a Robber, a Ravisher, and a Murtherer, feems to be due to the Person that is thus guilty; for he manifestly commits all these Crimes, and that in the most intense Degree. I. He is a Robber, for he vests himself with a legal Claim to the Lady's Estate, by a fraudulent, furreptitious and deceitful Attack, a Feint and Difguise, making himself appear to be what he is not, and taking Posselion as a Robber; being quite another Person than him he was fupposed to be.

2. HE is a Ravisher of the worlt Kind, because he possesses the Person and Honour of the Lady by Fraud, and in a Circumstance, which if she was acquainted with, she would never submit to, but by the utmost Violence, and perhaps would much rather chuse to be murthered than to be fo used.

3. To conclude: He is a Murtherer, and that in the moft horrid Method of Murther that can be imagined. I need go no farther to defcribe the Cafe, than is done in an Example given in this very Work, Page 177. where the Tragedy was lamentable indeed.

WHAT now can be efteemed a Punifhment equal to this Crime? And why might it not be called a righteous Law to punifh with Death a Man, that, deceiving a Woman in Marriage, fhould bring to her a Body infected with the foul Difeafe, and give it his Wife, it being known known that he contracted the Diftemper before Marriage.

[ 378 ]

Nor would it be fo hard to prove the Fact as fome may imagine; I mean, that it would not be difficult to flate in the Terms of fuch a Law, certain and publick Claufes, by which the Fact fhould be both enquired into, and admit a fair Proof; for fuch is the Nature of the Contagion, that it is not eafily concealed, and the Evidences may be made very clear; as particularly the Perfon's having been under Cure before his Marriage; fuch a Man ought never to dare to marry, except with the Whore who infected him; and there indeed he ought to go, that they may Rot together.

But for fuch a Man to apply to a Woman of Virtue and Modefty; found in Body, and and upright in her Intention, come to her with a Contagion in his Vitals, and abufe her in fuch a vile, odious and abominable Kind ! As the Crime is not to be named without Abhorrence and Exectation, fo the Criminal merits to be turn'd out of humane Society, that he may abufe no more, and may be a Terror to others.

CERTAINLY this deferves Death as much as feveral Crimes, which are at this time punifhed with it, and particularly as much as Highway-Robbery, for the Plunder is attended with infinitely worfe Circumftances, and has many worfe Aggravations attending it.

I add no more. I cannot doubt but the fatal Confequences, and the frequency of this horrible Crime, (and that in thefe Days, I believe, more than ever) will at length awaken Juffice; and we fhall, one time or other, have a fuitable Law to punifh it; and this, I believe, would be the only Way to prevent it for the future. THE

[ 379 ]

ТНЕ

CONCLUSION.

am now come to the Conclusion of this Work: I had Thoughts to have given a longer Preface to it, intimating the trueEnd and Defign of it: But I think 'tis better in the Form of a Conclusion: For when can a Work be better explain'd than after it is done?

I can find but two Objections that can lie againft this Undertaking, or the Performance of it; after the ftricteft Inquiry into every Part of it, and, as Author, I think my felf pretty clear in them Both. Of which the impartial Reader is to be the Judge.

I. WHETHER the Satyr be Juft.

2. WHETHER the Manner be Justifiable.

IF indeed the Satyr is not just, the Authorhas done nothing, and can have nothing to fay why he fhould not lie under the worst of Cenfure; but he is under no Care upon that Subject: Even the most Innocent will hardly enter upon the Point with me, or venture to fay, that that tho' they may be clear of it themfelves, that therefore no Body is guilty; and as for the reft, tho' they are harden'd againft Blufhing at it, I don't find any of them harden'd enough to deny it.

We are come to an Age, wherein 'tis not the Mode to acknowledge and reform a Miftake, but to add a Front to the Fact, and Triumph in the Crimes, which they fhould be afhamed of: It feems below them to vindicate their Character, they'll rather illustrate it with the Fault they fhould wipe off, and count the Shame of it their Glory.

THIS happy Cuftom is the Author's Vindication in this Work; for now fcorning to deny the Charge, or enter into an Enquiry in form, whether guilty or not guilty; they are for giving the Matter of Fact in Evidence, and infifting that there is no Crime in it. And thus we join Iffue upon the Merit of the Caufe.

IF it be io; if there is no fuch thing as Immodefty after Matrimony, and that nothing can be indecent or unlawful between a Man and his Wife; if Matrimonial Liberties are without Bounds, and there are no Limitations to that conjugal Freedom, neither by the Laws of Gop or of Nature.

IF the Man cannot fin againft his Wife, or the Wife againft her Husband; if no Exceffes can be complained of, and nothing can be either out of Measure, or out of Season; if no unnatural Violences can be offered, and the Woman can have no reason to turn her Slipper the wrong Side upward against her Husband.

IF the Laws of Matrimony cannot be broken, the Ends of Matrimony not defeated, the Reafon of Matrimony not be miftaken, and a Marriage cannot be made a Mafque to a Crime.

IN

IN a word, if all the Complaints of this kind are caufelefs and needlefs, and there are neither the Crimes or the Criminals to be found, or to be heard of among us, then indeed the Satyr cannot be juft, and the Author deferves the Cenfure of a falfe Accufer. Let him be try'd by GoD, and his Country; and let the abufed Perfons who are without the Sin, throw the firft Stone at him.

BUT if the Fact is to be prov'd, if the Guilt is notorious, if he not only has pointed out the Crime, but is ready, if called upon in a lawful way, to point out the Criminals too, and to convict them upon their own Evidence, and out of their own Mouths; if they not only daily commit those Things, but daily boast of them; if the Coffee-houses are witneffes on one Side, and the Tea-Tables blufh on the other, and lewd Dialogues on that wicked Subject circulate from one to t'other; if the differing Sexes are united in the guilt, tho' in a differing way, and the odious Facts are become flagrant, 'tis then high time to combate the Vice, and endeavour by any poffible Ways to bring the World to blufh for them, fince they are paft blushing for themfelves.

As the Guilt thus legitimates the Satyr, fo the Circumftances of it, and the unhappy ftate of Things juftifies the Author in the Method of attacking it. The Law cannot reach it; the Fact is not cognifable in a way of Juffice; no criminal Procefs can lie in the Cafe, 'tis one of the Offences that are too vile to be hid, and yet too fecret, and too much hid, to be laid hold of. They feem to be fenced and protected by thofe very Laws that fhould cenfure and expofe them; and tho' they frequently fally out, and and make criminal Excursions, yet when they are attack'd, they retreat behind the Fences and Fortifications of the conjugal Laws, and the Letter of Matrimony is turn'd against the Meaning of it, as the Cannon of a Bastion, when the Work is taken, are turn'd against the Town which they were mounted to defend.

SATYR can fourge where the Lafh of the Law cannot; the Teeth and Talons of the Pen will bite and tear; and the Satyr has a Sting which is made for the Correction of fuch Offences and fuch Offenders as bully Juftice, and think themfelves out of the reach of Prifons and Punifhments; as finall Arms are of ufe in Battle where the Cannon and Mortars cannot play, and the Point of the Lance can wound where the Balls cannot fly.

IF Men are fenc'd againft one Thing, they may not be fenc'd againft another, and the fenfe of Shame may reftrain where even a fenfe of Punifhment will not. There are Crimes which a lafh of the Pen reach'd when a lafh at the Cart's-tail would not; and a time when Men that have laugh'd at the Law, and ridiculed all its Powers, have yet been laugh'd out of their Crimes by a juft Satyr, and brought to the necessity of hanging themfelves for Shame, or reforming to prevent it.

IF then the Crime be evident, and yet the Law impotent, who will contend that the Satyr is not juft? 'Tis the only unexceptionable Cafe in which not the Juftice only, but the Necessity of a Satyr, is to be infifted on.

SOME will fay, and in this particular Cafe I think they are right, that there is no fuch thing as an unjust Satvr; that a Satyr is never wrong, nor can be fo; for that, i. IF the Fact be not true, 'tis no more a Satyr but a Slander; 'tis a LIE, and merits the Correction of the Law.

I. IF

[ 363 ]

2. IF the Fact be true, but is in it felf no Crime, the Satyr has no Teeth, no Claws, it can neither Bite or Sting; and then again tis no more a Satyr; it has only a kind of clofe par'd Nails with which it can feratch its own Face, and can hurt no Body elfe; fo that 'tis no more a Satyr, nor will it bear to be call'd by that Name. But this is out of the Way here.

WE infift upon the Juffice of the Satyr, as well from the Nature of the Charge it brings, as from the certainty of the Fact proved by the Confeilion of the guilty Offenders, and the general Teftimony of the Times, as above.

IT remains then to fpeak of the Manner of the Performance, and enter upon the Vindication of it, a thing much more properly undertaken, now 'tis finish'd, than it cou'd be before it was begun.

THE only Objections which can lie againft the manner, I think, come into thefe two. (1.) The neceflity of fpeaking a Language that is unpleafant to hear, and which, at leaft, feems to tread on the brink of the fame Indecency which it reproves; AND which alfo the Author has fufficiently express'd his dread of. OR, (2.) The deficiency of the Reproof from an overreftraint, and declining to express Things fully on that very Account, for fear of offending one Way, offending too much the other.

I have, with the utmost Care, avoided the first of these; I have studied to shun all Indecency of Expression, or saying any thing that might might offend the chafteft Mind, and the molt rhodeft Ear, allowing but just room to mention the Crime that is reproved, and hardly that in fome Places fufficient to have it understood.

IF I have given the leaft Caufe of Complaint, I profefs it to be unfeen and undefigned; nor upon revifing the whole Work, do I yet fee any Reafon for altering or wiping out any thing on that Account.

THE Scripture it felf, the facred Pattern of Modefty in Expression, and which I have all along kept in my Eye as a Director in that particular Point, has, in many Places, been obliged to speak plainer than I have done in the like Cafes.

BUT when the Cenfure is to be pafs'd, there muft be fo much faid at leaft, as may let the Reader underftand what it is we reprove, or elfe we fpeak of nothing, and to no purpofe; yet I have ftudied with the utmost Care to do it, fo as to leave no room for Reproach. None can find Occasion to blush here but those that are guilty; let them blush and reform, then the End of the Satyr is answered.

As to the fecond Cafe; I cannot but lament the neceflity I have been under to omit feveral flagrant Stories, with Names and Sirnames too attending them, good Evidence of Fact ready, which yet I have not been able to find Words to express with Decency enough to bear reading, or to preferve the Purity of the Defign, and the Dignity of a juft Satyr.

WHAT vile and perhaps unheard-of Practices could I have exposed, could I have found Words to drefs up the Relation in? And what inimitable Examples have I ready to produce to fupport [ 385 ] port the Truth of the Facts, would the Stories but bear telling.

I confefs, 'tis fomething hard that Men fhou'd fin on, only becaufe they cannot be modeftly reproved; that they fhou'd go on in fuperlative Wickednefs, with an Impunity only owing to the horrid exorbitance of their Crime, too dirty to be fpoken of, too naufeous to be mentioned. Why has not our fruitful Inventions added fome Signals, fome Figures, to ferve inftead of Speech, (as I have obferved the Turks do, by turning up the Slipper) by which Signals or Figures the filthy Part might be expreffed, without fouling the Mouth, or affronting the Ears of others.

BUT it is not to be done, and therefore, as above, I have chofen to leave out many long Hiftories of inexprefible Lewdnefs, particularly under the Matrimonial Cover, and which would have given a keener Edge to the Satyr, and have confirmed the Neceffity of the Reproof in this Cafe, more than all that has been exprefs'd. But, I fay, it is not to be done.

WHERE I have been neceffitated to come to the very Brink of the Fact, and to go as far as Language would fuffer me; certainly I hope for fo much Charity in the Reader, as to acknowledge the Juffice and Neceffity of going fo far, at the fame time giving the true Reafon of my going no farther.

'Tis a hardfhip an Author is feldom put to,' to be obliged to break off in the middle of his Evidence; to omit and drop all the Illustrations of his Story, and fcarce give you enough of the Generals to guefs at the Particulars by; but this is my Cafe, and all in obedience to that C c Modefty, Modefty, the trefpaffing upon which is the ground of the whole Complaint. If thefe Men could be talked to in their own Language; if the odious Expressions they use in their ordinary Discourse could be thrown in their Faces, and they could be daub'd with their own Dirt, it would describe them in a more effectual manner, they would be painted in the most fuitable Colours, and drefs'd up in the Robes that would best become them; and, in one respect, it ought to be so, that every Crime might be shown as it really is.

IT was a Practice in fome of the Nations in the Eaftern Countries, that if a Woman was convicted of Adultery, fhe was ftript ftark naked, and led about the City, that fhe might be exposed in the fame Nakedness in which the had voluntarily exposed her felf, and to be punished in the very kind of her Offence.

BUT this would not do in a Chriftian Country; it would be it felf an Offence againft Decency, and a Breach of the very Modefty which it was intended to punifh, and therefore it cannot be done; in like manner the Crime I am reproving, cannot be expos'd in the lively manner that other Offences are expos'd in; becaufe, as I may fay, we cannot fpeak the Language: The Dialect thefe People talk is a great part of the Crime ; and as it is not to be made use of for their Reproof, so we are straiten'd exceedingly in Reproving; and they triumph over me in this very Part, that I talk in the dark, and reprove by Allegory and Metaphor, that People may, know, or not know what I mean, just as it may happen.

THIS may, in some Sense, indeed be true, as I have faid above; but the Hardship rifes from [ 387 ] from the black Circumstances attending the Crimes they commit ; and, of all People, they fhould be the last to boast of that Advantage, feeing they must own at the fame time, 'tis becaufe their Behaviour is fo much too vile to be reproved, that it cannot be mentioned; the Language of it is fo foul, that it will not read modeft Tongues cannot speak it; modeft Ears cannot hear it; like fome particular Trials in our Courts of Juffice, when they are obliged to defire of the Women to withdraw, because they inay be obliged to use fuch Expressions as it is not decent to mention before them, or modeft in them to be in the hearing of; and yet, without which Words fpoken in the groffeft and plainest manner, the Cause cannot be tried; the Évidence be taken, or the Offender convicted.

THIS is exactly the Cafe; and under this Difficulty the whole Work labours in almoft every Part. But I have taken the Part that; I think, Religion and Decency directs; that is; to go as far as I can, and leave Confeience to work the reft its own way. I have painted out the Crime as fairly as juftifiable Language will allow; and where it will not, I content my felf with leaving the Guilty to judge themfelves by the general Hints given them. The filent Needle in the Compafs points to the Pole, but fays no more; yet the Pilot, which knows its meaning, fteers by that Direction, and brings the Ship fafe into Port.

 $\hat{T}_{HE}$  Facts are indeed notorious, and the lefs plain Engli/b will ferve; the Things I reprove are not fo very abftrufe; there are few married People but will understand me; and all the guilty, I am fure, will read their Crimes plain C c 2 enough, enough, they will need no Explanations; if they pretend to it, they will be too eafily confuted, by referring them to their own Practice.

It is true, there are ftill fome ill Ufages among thefe People, fome Matrimonial Whoredoms which are wholly omitted, which it is impoflible to mention, no not at the greateft diffance, no not by Simily, Allegory, or any other Reprefentation. They are too wicked to admit the leaft Suggeftion about them, or fo much as to guide the Reader to guefs at them. Nor are they a few Things which I am thus obliged to overlook. But there is no doing it; they muft be buried in Silence if they cannot be reprov'd, becaufe they cannot be mentioned. Let the Offenders, the guilty Perfons, confider, Heaven can find out Ways to punifh them, tho' we cannot find out Words to reprove them.

THAT Juftice, that brings to light the hidden Works of Darknefs, can make the Crime publick in the Punifhment; and there it may be read with Terror by every one that looks on it, when their Ears will not be offended with the Defcription. Nor is it an unufual Method; Providence often thinks fit to do fo. Drunkennefs, tho' in fecret, is made publick by Solomon's Signals, Who has rednefs of eyes, who hath wounds without caufe? they that tarry long at the Wine, &c. Prov. xxiii. 29.

Thus it may be faid again, who hath leannefs of Countenance, who hath rottennefs of Bones, who hath loathfome Difeafes? Are they not the People I fpeak of? Let them take heed; 'tis not the Whoremafter and the Strumpet alone that contract Filthinefs and Diftempers; and 'twill be a dreadful Rebuke for a pretender to to lawful Things, and no more, to fee himfelf brought to the fame Diftrefs by his Exceffes, that others are reduc'd by their Vices and open Wickedneffes, and loaded with those Difeafes, which fo ftrongly intimate another kind of Guilt, that no Body will believe him Innocent, tho' he really be fo.

I leave it to Phyficians to explain what I fay, and to tell whether there are not many fcandalous Difeafes which People bring upon themfelves by their Intemperances and Exceffes, which are fo near the main Contagion, that no People will believe they are Innocent that have them, and that yet may befal those who have never been guilty out of the Marriage Bed.

LET fuch People reflect upon the Grief it will be to them, to be univerfally condemn'd where they are not guilty; and to bear the reproach of a Crime they have not committed for the Crime which none imagine, and which they have dwelt unreprov'd in fo many Years, till they come to be a Reproof to themfelves, and a Reproach to all about them.

I could give Examples of feveral who have fatally fuffered in this Manner, under the Weight of their own immoderate Practices, to fay no worfe of them; and I could, I believe, find fome Inftances of those who have perished under the Mifery, rather than difcover the Grief they lay under, least they should be suppofed guilty of what they abhorred fo much as to think of.

BUT how just is divine Vengeance thus to reprove those Intemperances in his own Way, which were otherwife out of the reach of human Laws, and indeed of human Eyes ? And how how fhould the People I fpeak of, whole Conz duct I cannot reprove, becaufe too foul to be mentioned, reflect, that Heaven can find out Ways to make them a Punifhment to themfelves, and join their Sin and their Shame together?

C c 3

I could have alfo given fome living Examples of the Intemperances which I have mentioned, which have liv'd to be extreamly exposed, even tho' they have not heen spoken of in print; in whom the distemper'd Bodies, aching Heads, tottering Joints, besides the many nameles, filthy and unclean Diseases that have hung upon them, have been their lasting Reproof, and they have carried the repreach of their Follies about with them where-ever they went, till no Body has car'd to come into their Company, and they have been a Shame even to themfelves.

THESE Things have been the Fruit of thefe Doings, which they call lawful; their conjugal Excelles, those Liberties which they have all along pretended Heaven allow'd them; Liberties Nature dictated, Love prompted, and Matrimony made lawful; as if Heaven, Nature and the Matrimonial Law, which is founded on the Laws both of GOD and Nature, had directed them to an immoderate Ufe of the Liberties they allow'd; which is no more true, than that becaufe God gave the Wine (a noble Plant) and the Juice of its Fruit, for our Comfort, and for the fupport and fupply of the Spirits, had allowed us to drink, and to drink it with Pleafure; and that Nature, conforming to the Bounty of Heaven, had given us a guft or love to the Liquor it felf; that therefore GOD and Nature allowed us to be drunk, to drink to Excels, to to drink away our Senfe, our Underftanding and our Life, as many daily do.

I would conclude this with an earneft and ferious Monition to all the confidering, rational Part of Mankind, who call themfelves Chriftians, and would be called fo, who are willing to act as fuch, and to anfwer to themfelves, not fuppofing they had any other Account to give for all their Behaviour; I fay, I would move them to enter fof ar into the Government of themfelves, as becomes Men of Senfe and of Virtue, to put a due Reftraint upon themfelves in the ufe of lawful Liberties, and to act, not like Madmen and Furies, but like Men of Underftanding, to act in fuch a Manner, as they may not reproach themfelves hereafter with wafting their Youth and Strength, and bringing Age and Weaknefs upon themfelves before their Time.

CERTAINLY, GOD Almighty, who form'd the Man, and who committed him, in a great Meafure, to the Government of himfelf, did not do fo with a general leave to live how he pleafed; did not leave him to the guft of his Appetite, without giving the leaft Limits to himfelf by his Reafon, but as he gave him fuperior Faculties, fo he gave those Faculties, and placed them in a fuperiority one to another, that they might be a Check to the feparate Motions and Operations, and keep the whole Machine in order.

IF the Man breaks this Order; if he invertent Nature; if he gives himfelf Liberties that GOD and Nature intended him not, and fuch as are inconfiftent with the good Order of the Machine, he will put the whole Fabrick out of Tune; nor can he expect the reft of the Motions can perform as they would otherwife do.

Cc4

IĘ

IF the Spring of a Watch be over-ftrained, it will ceafe to Draw; if the Ballance be overloaded, the Motion ftops. It is the like in all other natural Motions, and 'tis fo in this of the Man. He that will put Nature out of her proper Courfe, and upon Extreams which fhe has not equal Powers to perform, will ruin thofe Powers which fhe has, and, in a word, ruin the whole Fabrick.

IF the Man is himfelf; if he is Mafter of his Reafon, and found Argument can make any due Imprefion upon him, he will confider this Part for his own fake; abftracted from its being an Offence againft his Superior, the Governor of his Life, to whom he muft Account; if, I fay, he would only confider himfelf, act like a rational Creature, and ftudy his own Intereft, it muft move him to behave himfelf prudently.

I know nothing, no not one Inftance in Life, wherein Virtue may be more truly faid to be its own Reward, than in this Particular: Take the Cafe inverted, who has length of Days, who found Conftitution? who has ftrength of Body, agility of Limbs, who enjoys an uninterrupted Health, but the Temperate, the Moderate, and the Virtuous? Their Vitals are not exhaufted; Nature is not opprefs'd; the Vigour of the Spirits expended, and the Marrow of their Bones wafted: Their Youth has not robbed their old Age; or their untimely Vice diverted the Channels of Nature, and turn'd the Water from the Mill.

THE Modeft, the Chaft, the temperate Youth, is the hail, the chearful, and the healthy old Man: He that lives too faft, goes to his Grave too foon; 'tis a courfe, but fignificant Expredion, He that lives a Gallop, goes to the Devila Trot.

Trot. The meaning is plain ; excels in Youth anticipates old Age; they that will tear themfelves in Pieces, who can patch them up? 'Tis in vain to fly to Art; Phyfick may cleanfe the Blood, correct the noxious Humour, clear the Stomach, and help the Digefture; but Phyfick cannot make the Body anew; Phyfick cannot give a new Fund of Life, and form Nature upon a new Foundation. Phyfick cannot reftore when the Liver is wafted, when the Lungs are fpit out of the Mouth by early Catarrhs, when the Wheel is broken at the Ciftern: when, as Job fays, the Reins are confumed within us, what can Phyfick do for us? Art may affift Nature; but Art cannot give Youth, nor reftore that Vigour which Vice has exhaufted. When the Dart is struck through the Liver, when the Heart ceases to beat Time to the Pendulum, 'tis in vain to talk to Phyficians: As you have put your felves in the Devil's stead to destroy, Physicians cannot put themfelves in Go D's stead to Create : Who shall supply in Age what the Spendthrift, the Extravagant has wafted inYouth? A frugal Use of an Estate preferves it for the Heirs; whereas he that cuts the Timber down young, shall have no large high Trees to leave behind him; and he that, without manuring and good Husbandry, leaves the Land to be beggar'd, and plough'd out of Heart, shall be fure not to keep up the Rent; but the Estate will decay, and the Heir be reduc'd.

IN a Word, Temperance and Moderation keeps Nature in a due ftate of Health, and lays in an early Provision for Time, a Stock for old Age to live upon, hands on Vigour with the Years, and makes Age triumph in the goodnefs of the Conftitution: Whereas Vice leaves Youth groaning and mourning under Aches, Rheumaticks and Hydrophicks before its Time, the Joints trembling cannot fupport the Body, the Nerves are innervated, the Sinews fhrunk; in a Word, the Blood is poifon'd, the Spirit exhaufted, and the whole Mafs corrupted; thus the Fabrick finks like a Noble opulent City fwallow'd up in an Earthquake, there it ftands a fad Monument of the devouring Teeth of Crime, and a Sacrifice to Debauchery.

of

WHENCE is it, that the Number of Phyficians, Apothecaries and Surgeons, are fo encreas'd among us, and efpecially the latter, befides the innumerable Throng of Quacks, Pretenders and Dealers in Plaifters and Dofes? If Difeafes were not multiply'd, the Remedies would not crowd in upon us as they do; 'tis the Stench of Carcafes that brings the Vultures about us and our Families: As the Groans and Cries of dying and decaying Bodies are loud among us; fo Phyfick is grown noify and clamorous.

How many Doctors and Surgeons, nay Apothecaries, ride about in their Coaches? Perhaps, as one cunningly alledg'd, not for the Vanity of the Equipage, but for Expedition, and that he might be able to make more Vifits in a Day; otherwife he could not difpatch his Bufinefs, or fee all his Patients fo often as they defir'd him,

As our Yearly Bills are encreased, the Phyficians grown Rich, their Number more than doubled, and their Equipages advanc'd in fuch a Manner, Whence is it all? It cannot be all meerly by the Encrease of People about us; tho that I know is alledged; there must be something elfe; and the Reason is evident, our Luxury is encreased; and with our Luxury, our Vices Vices, and other Extravagances, our Lafcivioufnefs, Senfuality, and, in a Word, our Impudence, and with all thefe our Diftempers: Thefe enrich the Doctors, thefe call the Surgeons and Apothecaries about us, like the Crows about the Carcafe; and they Bombard us with the Gallipots and Glaffes, as the Algerines afiault a Ship with Carcafes and Stinking Pots.

IF the Numbers of People are encreas'd about London, that may be fomething, though *tis begging the Queftion most egregiously to fay fo, as we do by Lump, that this is the only encreafe of the Mortality. Some fuggeft fuch an Encrease as amounts to a third Part of the whole; and others will go fo far as to tell us they are doubled; and this they gather (as they fay) not from the excellive Numbers of Buildings only, but from the Throngs of People which are to be feen in the Streets upon all publick Occasions. I will readily grant both these, par-ticularly, that there are great Numbers of new Buildings, Streets and Squares added to the Town, and in all the extreme Parts of it, indeed an innumerable Number, fuch as no City in the World can flow the like, as at St. Giles's, Tyburn-Road, Ormond-Street, Hockley, Finsbury, Spittle-Fields, Wapping, Rotherhith, &c. Nor is this all, but I allow that there is alfo a prodigious Encreafe in the Villages adjacent to London, which, as they fay, and in that indeed they fay true, are not only doubled, but fome of them encreafed to feveral Times as many People as formerly, fuch as at the new Docks near Deptford, and at the Town of Deptford ; alfo at Greenwich, Clapham, Camberwell, Chelfea, Kenfington, Hampstead, Newington, Tottenham, Ed-monton, Endfield, Bromley, Stratford, West Ham, Wanftead, Wanflead, Walthamflow, Low-Layton, and abundance more, all whofe Parifhes are out of the Bills of Mortality; and were their Numbers added to the laft yearly Bill, would make up the Mortalities at leaft to Five and thirty thoufand.

Now tho' all this were true, and more, yet it does not at all account for the Grievance in our Morals, which I have complained of; or for the Depredations made upon Nature, and upon Health, by our intemperate and luxurious Living, our immoderate and fcandalous Exceffes in otherwife lawful and allowed Pleafures. But let those that question it, look back into the Book of Nature; and let them tell me, whether the Numbers of the Sick too are not encreafed in proportion, and indeed more than in propertion, to the Number of the Dead ? And if they will not take my Opinion, let them know the late famous Dr. Radcliffe, and feveral other Phyficians, gave the fame Judgment. And I am very willing to appeal to the Learned, whether these Excesses I have now mentioned, have not contributed at leaft to making the Age lefs found in Life, if not fhorter liv'd than their Ancestors.

I will not attempt to abridge the Sovereignty of Providence in its Government of the Earth; or to fay, that Heaven has not appointed and limited the Time of Life to all his Creatures: Yet I am not fo much a Predeftinarian neither, as to pretend that Men cannot fhorten their Days by Luxury and Intemperance, Gluttony, Drunkennefs, and other worfe and more criminal Exceffes; why fhould we not think that fuch Crimes as thefe entail Heaven's Curfe upon us, and blaft our Breath, and fhorten our Time, as well as Difohedience to Parents? I will will not prefume to fay, in the Words of the Command, be Temperate, be Virtuous, be Moderate, that thy Days may be long in the Land; I acknowledge, that I have no direct Authority to add a Promife to the Exhortation; but I may take more freedom; I believe, in the alternative, and fay, be not Intemperate, be not Vicious, Luxurious, Immoderate and Brutal, and add, with the Wife Man, W by flould's thou dye before thy Time ? Ecclef. vii. 17.

WITHOUT queftion, Life may be fhortned by our Wickednefs. How many do we fee, in almoft every weekly Bill, dead of exceffive Drinking, others Duelling and Fighting; fome by one vile Excefs, fome by another? Shall any Man dare tofay, thefe did not fhorten their own Lives! Shall we fay, they lived out balf their Days! Pfal. lv. 22. I think it would be affronting the Juftice of Providence, to fay, they were not flain by their own Crime, cut off by untimely Vice, or that, with David's wicked Men, they do not live out half their Days.

But, not to enter into Difputes of Things remote to the Cafe; if Life is or is not, can or cannot be fhorten'd by our Intemperance and Vice, the Comfort of Life may be leffen'd. Life may be made a Burthen, loathfome and uncomfortable, by loading it with Difeafes and Sorrows, and by bringing complicated Miferies upon our felves in the Room of Health and Vigour, which would otherwife be the Lot.

A bright Countenance, a fprightly and brisk Eye, a conftant Smile, a nimble agile Body, a clear Head, a ftrong Memory, and clean Limbs, thefe are Nature's Furniture to a Man of an untainted Race. But how often are all thefe original original Beauties, the native Attendants upon Youth and a good Conftitution, made to droop and flag, while Palenefs and Leannefs come into the Face, Heavinefs into the Heart, and Dulnefs into the Head? How is the fhining fparkling of the Eye eclipfed, the Underftanding loft, the Memory decay'd, and the Genius partaking of the Contagion, entirely altered?

THE Glory of a young Man is his Strength, fays Solomon, Prov. xx. 29. and one of his first Advices after that Expression, is, give not thy Strength unto Women; it is true, Solomon there means to a strange Woman, that is to fay, a Whore. But with some abatement for the Person only, and for the Circumstances spoken to here, the Thing is (otherwise) the same, and the Excesses are in their Degree, tho' perhaps not every way as fatal.

IT was a late learned Phyfician who faid, that the Women wearing Hoops would make the next Age all Cripples; that drinking Tea would make them Rheumatick; that taking Snuff would make them Lunatick: To which it was faid, by way of Repartee, the Doctor being a little of a Libertine, that the Levity of the prefent Times will make the next Age Atheifts; the Cavilling at Scripture; (which is now the grand Mode) make them Hereticks; and the talking Nonfenfe make them all Fools: And now, I think, I may with equal Propriety add, that the Vice of this Age will make the next Age rotten.

CRIME has an unhappy propagating Quality; 'tis always in progretion. If one Age talks Herefy, the next Age talks Blafphemy: If one Age talks Faction, the next Age talks Treafon; [ 399 ]

Treafon: If one Age talks Foolifh, the next Age talks Mad. So, in the Cafe before me, if one Generation are Immoderate, the next are Extravagant. If one Age runs to excefs in Things lawful, the next purfues the like exceffes in Things unlawful, or make thofe lawful Things Crimes, by thofe exceffes : If one Age are Beafts, the next Age are Devils: Today Matrimonial Whoredom, To-morrow Unbounded Whoredom. As Vice leads, Fools follow; and where muft it end but in Deftruction?

It is the like in the Contamination of Blood; the fatal Progression shows it felf there, as well as in other Parts. Excesses weaken the Body, fink Nature, darken the Countenance, stupify the Brain; To-day they reach the Body, To-morrow the Soul, and, in the next Age, the Race.

THE lawful Things of this Age will make the next Age lawlefs; their Fathers conveyed Blood, and they convey Poyfon; our Parents handed on Health, and we Difeafes; our Children are born in Palaces, and are like to die in Hofpitals. Debauchery is the Parent of Diftemper; Fire in the Blood makes a Froft in the Brain; and be the Pleafures lawful or unlawful, the effect of Folly is to leave a Generation of Fools.

It would be happy, if after having faid thus much in general, and after having enter'd fo ferioufly into all the Particulars by which a lewd Generation defile and pollute the Marriage Bed, and ruin both themfelves and their Pofterity, I could propofe fome effectual Method for the fupprefing the wicked Practices, and and bring Mankind to live, at least like reasonable Creatures, if not as Christians.

400

THE Anfwer to this would be direct, if Laws and Government were concerned in it. But as we complain of an Evil which the fenfe of GoD's Laws, nor the force of human Laws, will not reach, nothing of Force, nothing of putting Statutes in execution, nothing of the Hand of the Magiftrate can be thought of ufe, or, if it be, will be equally laugh'd at. Indeed, how fhould they that can Argue themfelves out of all the Reftraints of Virtue and Religion, be expected to be under any Reftraints, except those of Power?

AND this makes me have recourfe to Satyr, and the Reproofs and Lafhes of the Pen. Thefe are the proper Weapons to combat this Adverfary: Where the Laws of GOD or Man have no Effect, the Satyr has been fometimes known to reach the Affections and Paflions of Men; as they run in feveral Channels, fo they are to be come at by feveral Methods; Ways and Means for one Thing will not be always Ways and Means for another; as Men are wrought upon, fome by one Thing, fome by another, according to the feveral Tempers and Difpofitions which govern them, and in which they act; fo, in general, they are mov'd, fome in one Way, fome in another.

NATIONAL Mistakes, vulgar Errors, and even a general Practice, have been reform'd by a just Satyr. None of our Countrymen have been known to boast of being True-Born English-Men, or fo much as to use the Word as a Title or Appellation ever fince a late Satyr Satyr upon that National Folly was publish'd, tho' almost Forty Years ago. Nothing was more frequent in our Mouths before that, nothing so universally Blush'd for and laugh'd at fince. The Time, I believe, is yet to come, that any Author printed it, or that any Man of Sense spoke it in earness; whereas, before you had it in the best Writers, and in the most florid Speeches, before the most august Affemblies, upon the most folemn Occasions.

COULD the Practice complain'd of in this Work, ten thoufand times more fcandalous, grown up to be odious and fhamelefs; to wife Men hateful, and to good Men horrid, I mean that of talking lewdly, be hifs'd out of the World by a juft Satyr; could it be lafh'd off the Stage of Life by the Pen, happy would the Author be that could boaft of fuch Succefs.

COULD all the Third Chapter, and the Fourth Chapter, and the Fifth, and Seventh, and Ninth, and Eleventh Chapter-Crimes, be met with in the fame Manner, and with the fame Succefs, I fhould think this, however difficult, the beft and happieft Undertaking that ever came into, or went out of my Hands.

I cannot defire a greater Scope in any Subject, that calls for Cenfure among Men; I think I may fay, I muft have all the Wife, the Religious, the modeft Part of Mankind with me, in the Reproof. The Crimes I attack are not only Offences againft Heaven, but againft all good Men, againft Society, againft Humanity, againft Virtue, againft Reafon, and, in fome Things, againft Nature; Crimes that modeft Words cannot (without) great difficulty) explain, modeft Tongues that D d [ 402 ] express, nor modest Ears, without blushing, hear mentioned.

As no fober Mind can receive the Ideas of them, without entertaining the utmost Averfion to the Facts; fo none that ever I met with, that had any common share of Breeding and Manners, could bear the mention of them, especially in the common Dialect of those I call the Criminals.

NONE but a Set of People with Faces of Steel, who can triumph in their Victory over Religion, Conficience, and the Thoughts of Eternity, that have got the Better both of Education, and of all Manner of Principles. Thefe may Glory indeed in their Shame; and thefe are the People our Satyr defires to expose.

As to their Perfons, nothing but univerfal Contempt of them can have any Effect; nothing can affift them to Blufh but a general Hifs from Mankind, and being thruft off the Stage by the very worft of Men. I have heard it was the Foundation of a very fcandalous vicious Perfon's Reformation, when another more notorious Fellow than himfelf, reprov'd him in this Manner : Fie, Jack, why thou art worfe than I am.

THERE are fo many Lives of Crime, which yet come fhort of thefe lawful Sinners, that a Thief, a Drunkard, a Swearer, a Profligate, may come to a Man talking ______, as I have mentioned, and fay, Fie, Mr. G_____, as I have mentioned, and fay, Fie, Mr. G_____, wby, Fie, Mr. H_____, Fie, Mr. L____, Wby, you are worfe than I am.

WHY may we not hope to fee the Time, when the worft of common Offenders shall stop their their Ears at the Wickednefs of thefe, and when the very Scandals of the Times fhall Blufh for, and reprove them. This univerfal Contempt of them; this general Averfion, if any Thing on Earth can work upon them, will have fome Effect; there are few guilty Men harden'd againft the Battery of general Clamour; it feems to be an Affault to be refifted only by Innocence; Crime must certainly fall under it; Innocence may hold up the Head in fuch a Storm; but Guilt will certainly and foon founder, and fuffer Shipwreck.

INDEED, there feems to be fome affinity in Crime, between the People who We are now Cenfuring, and another horrid modern Generatiou too vile to name, and yet who feems to be feeking Protection under thefe. There may be indeed an effential Difference; but in what fmall and minute Articles does it exift ? But as the Particulars will not admit a nearer Enquiry, I think the better Way is to reject both with Contempt, with an Abhorrence fuitable to the vilenefs of the Facts, and caft them out together.

THIS will aid the modeft Part of the World in their juft Opposition to all Indecency; and if we did nothing elfe, our Work would recommend itfelf to that Part of Mankind which are really most valuable; and as for the reft, let them act as they please, their Approbation will add no Credit to the Caufe.

I have now done. I have faid not all I had to fay, but all I have Room to fay here; and having brought the very Conclusion to a Clofe, I would only add one Thing by D d 2 way way of Challenge to that Part of Mankind, who I may have touch'd in this Satyr, and who, for ought I know, may be angry; for, indeed, they have nothing elfe left for it, but to be angry, and rail at the Reproof; according to a known Diftich ufed upon a like Occasion:

That Disputants, when Reasons fail, Have one sure Refuge left, and that's to Rail.

Now in this Cafe, I fay, I have a fair Offer to make to those Gentlemen in a few Words, viz.

1. LET them prove that the Fact here reprehended is not in being; that 'tis all a Fiction or Shadow, a Man of Straw; that there's nothing in it, and that I am in the wrong. Or,

2. THAT if it is in being, that they the Fact is true, and they fuch Things are done, they merit no Satyr, that they ought not to be reproved or exposed; I fay, let them do this, and then they fhall Rail their fill, and treat Me, and the Work which I have just now finished, in as fcandalous a manner as they please. Or,

3. Which I had much rather they fhould do, let them REFORM; take the hint, fall under the Reproof, and at once fink the Crime.

I confefs, it feems rational that one or other of thefe fhould be done: The two first, which are in some respect the fame, I am out of fear of; the last feems a Debt; 'tis just I should demand it; let them repel the Charge, or reform the Practice.

IF

IF they cannot do the firft, and yet contemn the laft, I declare War against them; and if I live to appear again in the Field, let them expect no Quarter; for the Satyr has not spent all its Artillery, or shot all its Shafts. My next Attack shall be perfonal, and I may come to Black Lists, Histories of Facts, Registers of Time, with Name and Sirname; for no Man fure, in a Christian Government, as this is, need be afraid of laying Hell open, or drawing the Pictures of Men when they are turn'd Devils.

I might fay a Word or two more with refpect to Style. I think I can have given no Offence in Decency of Expression: If any Thing has, notwithstanding the utmost Care, flipt my Pen, let it be a Defence, that I profess it is undefign'd; the whole Tenour of the Work is calculated to bear down Vice, vitious Practifes and vitious Language; and, I think, I may claim a favourable Conftruction where there feems a Fault, if it were really a flip of the Pen: I may claim it as a Debt due to a modeft Intention; declaring again, there is not one Word willingly pafs'd over that can be Cenfured, as evidently leading to or encouraging Indecency, no not in Thought. An evil Mind may corrupt the chafteft Defign; as in reading the explanation of the Words I WILL, in the Marriage Covenant, which, I fay, is a folemn Oath, and that as plain as if it had been exprefs'd, as fwearing by the Name of God. Sure none can be offended as if I put the facred Name of God into the Mouths of the Readers upon a light Occafion, making them take the Name of Gon in vain, or making them repeat an Oath in the moft vulgar and courfeft way. But if any Man fhould fhould be fo weak, not to fay malicious, let them know, that I think the Expression carries with it a due reverence of the Name of GOD; and that the Occasion is awful and folemn; and if I had faid, So belp me, GOD, it had been the fame thing: The meaning is, to convince Men that how slight however they pass over the Marriage Covenant, it is a folemn Appeal to GOD for the Truth of the Intention; and a folemn binding themsfelves in his Name and Prefence, to a strict Performance of the Conditions; and that he that breaks them breaks a most facred Oath, and is as much Perjured as if he had been fo in the ordinary Form.

FINIS.

ERRATA

PAg. 353. line 13. for or at read and at. line 17. for the read that. line 22. for is needful read is not needful. P. 354. lin. 15. for as I read I. P. 355. lin. 29. for and fome read and perhaps in fome. P. 366. lin. 7. for Criminal read Crime. P. 368. lin. 25. for righteous read unrighteous.

.

