RATIONALIZATION OF THE WORK OF THE FIRST COMMITTEE

AGENDA OF THE FIRST COMMITTEE: A NEW LOOK

INTRODUCTION

This paper aims at promoting a discussion on a more consistent and coherent agenda for the First Committee of the General Assembly. A "new look" for the agenda of the First Committee could facilitate other aspects of rationalizing the work of the Committee, such as a better structured debate on specific agenda items, voting in clusters and merging of draft resolutions.

While a "new look" agenda for the First Committee should take the existing agenda as a point of departure, one could at a later stage also think of reallocating items from other Main Committees as well as from the plenary of the General Assembly.

This paper is divided into two parts. The first part will deal with the existing agenda of the First Committee and explore whether it can be moulded into something more logical. Basically, this is done by taking all First Committee items of the upcoming forty-eighth session (A/48/50 for easy reference), as well as those due to re-emerge at future sessions, and rearrange them according to subject.

The second part of the paper is much shorter and will explore some possibilities for reallocating agenda items from other committees and the plenary, which might eventually result in the merger of some of the Main Committees (notably the Special Political Committee and the First Committee). The suggestions and considerations put forward in the second part of the paper are of a preliminary nature and are meant to give some food for thought on a wider exercise that transcends the responsibility of the First Committee.

I. THE EXISTING AGENDA REARRANGED: A NEW LOOK

The present agenda of the First Committee has no logical structure. Items dealing with the same subject-matter are not clustered. There is much overlap. Some "umbrella items" group together subjects that have nothing in common with each other. A more thematic approach would be to cluster items around a limited number of "head items", such as:

- Nuclear weapons;
- Other weapons of mass destruction;
- Conventional weapons;
- Transparency/confidence-building;
- Regional disarmament and security;

- Outer space;
  - Disarmament machinery;
  - International security;
- Related matters of disarmament and international security.

To illustrate this approach, all First Committee items for the forty-eighth session, as well as items likely to re-emerge at subsequent sessions, are reproduced below under the suggested "head items". This is, of course, without prejudice to the possible merger or elimination of specific items.

- Item 71d: Prohibition of the dumping of radioactive wastes (47/52 D)

An agenda along the above lines would have several advantages. First, a more coherent and better structured agenda is in itself to be welcomed. Secondly, a "new look" agenda would be an expression of the integrated approach to disarmament and international security, as for example advocated by the Secretary-General of the United Nations in his report entitled "New dimensions of arms regulation and disarmament in the post-cold-war era" (A/C.1/47/7). Thirdly, a new-style agenda would provide a good basis for rationalizing other aspects of the work of the First Committee. For instance, the debate on specific items during the First Committee could benefit from an agenda where related issues are neatly grouped together. The voting phase would also be more systematic. Furthermore, a "new look" agenda might actually encourage the merger of draft resolutions pertaining to the same item. A simple look at the agenda would reveal possible areas where drafts could be merged. Archaic and obsolete draft resolutions would be exposed more so than in the old agenda, thus increasing the pressure for their removal.

II. BROADENING THE NEW LOOK: POSSIBLE REALLOCATION OF ITEMS FROM OTHER COMMITTEES AND THE PLENARY TO THE FIRST COMMITTEE

The integrated approach to disarmament and international security could be taken one step further by reallocating relevant items from other Main Committees and the plenary of the General Assembly to the First Committee. As noted in the introduction, this would entail an exercise that goes beyond the sole responsibility of the First Committee and might eventually lead to the merger of some Main Committees. With this in mind, a number of tentative suggestions are put forward below, with the aim of giving some food for thought.

Certain items on the agenda of the Special Political Committee and the plenary of the General Assembly would be particularly suited for transferral to the First Committee. Items on the agenda of the other committees, such as the Fourth Committee, are not covered by this paper, but might in due course also be considered for reallocation.

Special Political Committee

The following items on the agenda of the Special Political Committee for the forty-eighth session could possibly be moved to the First Committee:

Item 83: Effects of atomic radiation (47/66)

Reallocate to First Committee item I (d), "Other nuclear issues"

Item 84: International cooperation in the peaceful uses of outer space (47/67)

Reallocate to First Committee item VI, "Outer space"

Item 90: Science and peace (47/423) (d)

Reallocate to First Committee item IX (d), "Education and information for disarmament and peace"

Plenary of the General Assembly

The following items on the plenary's agenda for the forty-eighth session could be moved to the First Committee:

- Item 14: Report of the International Atomic Energy Agency (47/8)
Reallocate to First Committee item I (d), "Other nuclear issues"
- Item 22: University for Peace (46/11)
Reallocate to First Committee item IX (d), "Education and information for disarmament and peace"
- Item 23: Programmes and activities to promote peace in the world (46/14)
Reallocate to First Committee item IX (d), "Education and information for disarmament and peace"
- Item 37: Zone of peace and cooperation of the South Atlantic (47/74)
Reallocate to First Committee item V (b), "Regional disarmament and security specific regions"

Transferring items to the agenda of the First Committee could in the first instance lead to an increase in the number of draft resolutions in the Committee. However, this effect would be negated by merging clearly overlapping drafts and eliminating irrelevant ones. A "new look" agenda could work as a catalyst in this regard.

The revitalized and streamlined agenda of the First Committee should, of course, be subject to periodic review.
