Your job is to protect us from preditory practices...pure and simple. To charge anyone these outrageouse fees should be illegal. To charge them to people who can't fight back for themselves is obscene, immoral, and disgusting. You the FCC must put a complete and total stop to this practive. A person in prison should NOT PAY one penny more than the rest of us. One praacticle reason is that the person in prison DOES NOT PAY....his family and loved ones pay.

I have had to try and contact a friend in prison and believe me it is very difficult and expensive, upwards of $100.00 a month for a biweekly call, it was $ 12.00 per call and you had to prepay the company if they did not work with your carrier and then there were surcharges and the over a year where someone put my account in collections as a mistake and i had no recourse but to stay on hole hour after hour while they told me again that it was fixed but the calls would not go through. Finally after a call to the Attourny General office i found a woman to help and there was a little flag on my account someone checked by mystake at some clearing house in some dinky town in North Dakota. He is out now but the hardship on families can be enormous. Please keep the prisons from profiting from others misery and regulate the calls.

I am strongly in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. The exploitation by the phone companies of the families of prisoners, many of whom are poor, has gone on too long. Western Union should also be regulated. I recently sent money to a prisoner and was charged an 8.95% transaction fee which is exorbitant. Please implement regulations that will make it more affordable for families of prisoners to both speak to their imprisoned loved ones and send them money.

It is obscene that we allow these companies to take advantage of the difficult situation these families are in (even if the loved one in jail deserves to be there) to make unreasonable profits. Please cap these long-distance phone rates so these predatory phone companies cannot charge a prisoner's family more than people who are not trapped within the prison industry for the same service. It's the right thing to do!

Prisons are part of a system to benefit from as a society. When realizing that there are companies making money over the heads from both inmates as also their loved ones, I was shocked. Please do something about this, as it in my opinion harms MORE then breaking down prisons. Families are the base of a society, nurture them, especially when they are vulnerable.

As a follower of Christ, I have taken seriously his admonition to "visit those in prison", believing that in so doing, I am actually visiting and caring for Christ himself. I know many of these prisoners and their stories, and I find it appalling that their time with "corrections", rather than rehabilitating or correcting anything, is basically a way for greedy companies to make their bucks on the backs of "the least of these." I weep with Jesus over this injustice, and beg those in authority to be influenced by what is just rather than by $$$$ signs. Put an end to prison phone price gouging.

There's really no reason to charge such high rates other than the disgusting greed of the already rich. Bet it would change if you were ever in prison for the white collar crap you pull, but since you steal millions from people who aren't rich, you're treated as a role model instead. Something should be done to allow people to talk to their incarcerated loved ones. My son has been in and out jail over the last 18 months and keeping money on his Telmate account becomes extremely costly. It's 2.50 for one local 15 minute call. I don't know how those rates compare to regular long distance but I am pretty certain it's higher.
He has nobody else in his life to help him financially so between adding money to his account at the jail so he can buy basic supplies and his phone account, I am generally set back about $80 a month. It is money I can I'll afford and I'm gainfully employed with a decent income.
Please please do something to better regulate the phone companies to allow those who need the break even more than I do.
Thank you

Obscene phone rates on the incarcerated do injustice to families and loved ones. These people have broken no laws. Their only "crime" is caring for someone who has been imprisoned. Why should these people be punished? It's simply unjust and unjustifiable.

Can we step into the 21 st Century please. I am not in favor of coddling felons and other offenders, but this is punisihing families that are likely trying to hold it together. AND why should these companies be allowed to charge such unreasonable fees\\charges? Is there something uniquely special and expensive about the phone lines they are using? Are there dedicated lines running to each inmates' families? Please reasonably step in and regulate this. It should be the FCC's responsibility!!!

I am elated that FINALLY, someone is addressing this issue. More people than most would like to admit. know someone who has made the wrong chioces and ended up incarcerated. It has come to light that the Prison System is the same as a Ponzi Scheme. making money on everyone in there anyway they can. Denying them the chance to speak to loved ones is just inhumane and cruel punishment. Many cannot afford the astronomical costs of speaking to a loved one. We are asking you with all our heart and soul.. to please regulate this and allow families to have the peace of mind of speaking to loved ones. Regulation is essential here and we so much appreciate you addressing this and resolving this issue

Let us assume that, despite its obvious flaws, the American penal system has justly incarcerated the guilty. Why should the family of the incarcerated suffer needlessly to satisfy the lusty profiteering of phone companies? It's ghoulish and opportunistic.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. For justice we need prisons that rehabilitate prisoners to reenter society as responsible individuals, so that they can make a life for themselves and not return to crime. Extortionate phone rates do not serve to deter crime nor rehabilitate prisoners, but further the injustice by capitalizing on the prisoner's situation. Please prevent this exploitation and extend competitive phone rates to prisoners and their families.

we are supposedly a country that does not believe in cruel and unusual punishment. by not allowing families to talk to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates, you are acting in a cruel and inhumane way that affects not only the incarcerated person, but as well his or her family and children. please set an example ~ take the easily humane and compassionate way on this one.

People in prison and their families may not deserve less expensive phone use but they certainly do not deserve to be charged more than the rest of us. It's time to stop the communications companies from using their monopolies for profiteering. The F.C.C. needs to step in and regulate fair rates for those incarcerated and their families.

Our family is enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry.

We have had first hand experience with the negative impact of high cost prison/jail phone calls. More than a decade ago, we were acqainted with two young men who were incarcerated in Colorado State Prison system. At that time, collect calls were the only way for inmates to phone their families. As with many other inmates, these two men came from poverty backgrounds and their families rarely could arrange transporation to the cities where their sons were imprisoned. Additionally, their families often went through long periods when they were without phones or could not afford the cost of collect calls.

There's nothing like a true conversation with people you love to maintain a sense of family connection and responsibility and to make difficult circumstances bearable.

Fortunately our family was able to accept their calls and often we helped them talk through and resolve problems they encountered in prison. They later told us that being able to talk to someone outside prevented their getting hurt or in trouble while in prison.

It is shameful that our own state (and federal?) governments allow this mistreatment and exploitation of vulnerable families who already have tremendous difficulties in their lives. This callous greed is not only morally wrong but completely blind and wrongheaded. To enrich a few heartless corporations, this exploitation contributes to the break-up of families, to deliquency and depression among inmates' children, to overwhelming emotional burdens for wives and mothers, and to untold pressures among inmates that might have been prevented by regular loving contacts with their distant families.

It is way past time for the FCC to step in and end these unfair practices by phone companies and U.S. prison systems. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. The current situation is very very wrong.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. It is reprehensible that these corporations are cruelly ripping off these families. These families are already in jeopardy. It is in societies best interest to maintain and support families, especially families that are in crisis. These corporation disgust me. In my opinion these corporations are victimizing these families because they believe they can do so with impunity, as most are poor and have little support in society and politically. For most of these families, these harsh rates are especially egregious if you look at the families' income. Please stop this practice that weakens and harms families and as a result our society, our communities, our country.

I think it is inhuman and beyond cruel to charge some small child (or whatever) adult has to pay for it a dollar a minute to talk to their Mommy, Daddy, or loved one in jail. Regardless of the crime is it that innocent child's fault that the person they love is incarcerated . The phone companies should be ashamed! Are you not making enough money as it is without subjecting innocent children to this. You haven't heard the last of this. Make if affordable for these precious children to say a few words to the one they love, they are confused about it all enough!!!! Stop it and show some common decency for a child. You are a monster and an uncaring person to do such a thing to a child!!!!!

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. As a former correctional chaplain I know first hand how important these phone calls are in keeping families together. When prisoners are released they have the best chance of making it back in society if they keep family connections. Keeping those connections can mean saving millions of dollars in costs to the tax payers, by having the prisoners not returning to prison. Often times it is the bread winner for the family who is behind bars, yet families who have done nothing wrong are the ones who suffer from these high costs of keeping in touch. It is wrong for phone companies to be making large profits off the suffering of others.

We have had to pay unconscionably high rates to speak to our mentally impaired son when he has been in jail. The rates should be no higher than for a regular phone service - no phone surcharge for being locked up!

I oppose local monopoly contracts that force people to deal with a single business to communicate with their loved ones behind bars. This is the frequent outcome of 'privatization:' the transfer of state monopolies into private hands. It always leads to gouging by unaccountable profiteers. It is pernicious and always to be avoided.
Pro-competitive regulation that gives families multiple options would lead to fairer and more just outcomes. Why punish a family for the misdeeds of one? Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

Rates charged to families of inmates are extremely unfair. I know; I worked in the prison telecom business years ago. If the rates were reined in, then the commissions to the facilities that are the cause of the exorbitant rates would come down in parallel. Jailers were using inmate collect call commissions to pay for things that should have been funded through the regular governmental appropriations process. Government regulation is needed becuase the players in the industry have no sense of shame or remorse.

A mother I know had a son with serious medical problems and mental health issues. He wasn't a bad person, but had a hard time coping especially when he went to jail. His mother had very little money, but she tried to take his calls whenever she could. These were LOCAL calls but she was being charged the kind of prices that people paid for overseas phone calls twenty years ago. No mother should have to give up buying groceries in order to help a vulnerable child.

I have had personal experience when communicating with one of my grandson's acquaintance....first, AT&T gave me wrong information when I inquired whether changing to them from Cox would affect those calls. It turned out that it did and that's when those awful high-priced calls started.....from a company unknown in the everyday world. This is corruption at it's worse and it's happening because those profit-greedy CEOs of such companies think those "people" will have no-one who will know the difference. Let me inform you as I did them, we are not all sheep out here waiting to be fleeced by a REAL CRIMINAL RUNNING A REAL CRIMINAL PROGRAM. Let it be known that our young man got all the support calls he needed and was pardoned within a year....after teaching the other prisoners until they passed their GED tests...after recommendations from two Wardens within 6 months of his incarceration that he be pardoned. Phone calls, letters and money orders saved a good fellow and he is now a contributing citizen to his community and in his community!!! Those who changed his phone systems were educated, independent folks and knew how those phone companies needed to hear from authorities!

How can we expect incarcerated individuals reform and return to society without having contact with their families. My husband was jailed for three years 1,500 miles away from where I lived. No way could I make trips to visit more than once a year. Why should I have been punished by having to may the high costs of long distance?

Experts know that having regular calls and visits from family while incarcerated can make people far less likely to go back to prison. Considering the billions of dollars our states spend annually on incarceration, it is in the state's interest to ensure maximum contact with families.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. This actually has constitutional implications because persons held in lieu of bail and convicted persons are both effected by these prices. This is "punishing" people merely held in lieu of bail, interfering with their right to an attorney and possibly amounting to a violation of their rights.
As you might already know, what is allowed for convicted persons and persons merely being held in lieu of bail is different. There certainly amounts to a violation of the rights of the later.
Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates... and regular rates. These days even 5 cents a minute would be unreasonably high as that isn't seen in the market place any more, at least not for landline communication.

My mother was imprisoned when I was 13. I had 4 other siblings and often would go over a month without talking to my mother. The decision to support this cause is not based upon any feeling that the inmates themselves need more call time, it is strictly for the children and family members whom will benefit.

I favor FREE phone calls of family to or from prisoners. By reinforcing the family connection, I think recidivism rates will decrease. I strongly favor regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. It's really outrageous that phone companies would seek greater profits by imperiling communication with prisoners.

While I agree that people that have broken the law do not deserve any special considerations, they should not have to pay a premium to use standard phone lines. Normal charges are profitable for the telecommunications companies.
Additionally, keeping in contact with family gives the prisoner a reason to look to the future and a life outside prison. This can help put them back on the right track towards being a good citizen.

As a mother of a prisoner in San Quentin,I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Recidivism in the Prison system remains high, but I do not want my son to be another statistic in the penal system. I understand fully that we are all responsible for out actions, and my son must pay his debt to society. As his mother I want to be able to encourage and support him in choosing the right path upon his release. I live in Nevada, and I am therefore a half a day away for any visit. Consequently, we are more reliant on phone calls. The calls are exorbitantly high for a retiree, such as myself. Consequently, I am imploring that the agency implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

As a minister, I find it appalling that some phone service providers are allowed to charge a dollar a minute to families seeking to speak with an incarcerated family member. This has the effect of penalizing innocent wives, chldren and grandparents for the misbehavior of a family member. I is the ore outgrageous because the majority of these families are live at or below the poverty line to begin with. Does it not seem to you that this in fact constitutes an increase in the severity of sentences without the authorization of a court of law? In the name of decency, put an end to it!

I have wanted this change for 15 years. The current arrangement for phone companies to profit ridiculously by preying upon the desperation of already poor and suffering families is a travesty.
A study released just last week demonstrated that prisoners who receive visits have lower recidivism rates than those who don't. Imagine what the impact would be for those who can at least remain connected to family by phone, especially if they're located far from their hometowns, vs those who languish without the relationships, nurturing & support, connection to the outside world, or the purpose of heart to work from, that are possible with meaningful, affordable or FREE phone service. Why are these phone companies getting rich off some of the poorest among us?
It would be well worth the limited investment to have phone service in the prisons as in any other commercial building, that is, free to those who use it. Use phone privileges as a reward for good behavior by prisoners. Stop punishing families who are already suffering and likely struggling financially, and stop this practice that is a factor in terrible recidivism rates–which take an enormous toll on society in tax dollars to increasing incarceration, and in the loss of stability and human potential in our people.
I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

Greetings,
Would you please consider the possibility of providing some assurances that prison inmates and their families may be provided the same competitive telephone service that the outside USA population is afforded?
It is very disconcerting that, while I am in favor of Bid Process awarding of contracts, the end result is substantially higher rate structure for inmates.
Please do NOT introduce more meaningless regulations, but rather please open up the prison system telecommunications services to the regular telecom providers – and doing away with preferential contract structures that effectively provide kickbacks to the administrations from the victorious bid proposal.
Thank you for your consideration.
Respectfully,
james C sharp III

As a pastor now retired, I recall visiting many sons and daughters in prisons throughout Kansas. Receiving calls from loved ones and family was a powerful inspiration to these persons incarcerated for various periods of time. Staying connected does in fact lower the recidivist rate. These fees can make a simple phone call cost anywhere from $15-$60 a pop for 15-60 minutes of catching up with your family outside. Without that support from family a lot of these offenders will repeat offend. This communication is extremely important. With the gas prices as they are now, some families may have no way to visit. So these weekly phone calls are the only way they have to know that their son or daughter, grandson or just a close friend is just safe and is in a good frame of mind please, put yourself in their shoes, if only for a few minutes and consider what these calls mean to them. Then please regulate these companies and stop them from price gouging these phone calls.
Thank you for your time and your consideration.

Just because one member of a family has been found guilty of a crime and is incarcerated, that doesn't give big corporations the right to punish the whole family. Children need to talk to their parents, even if they are incarcerated. Communications with family and friends are vital to the rehabilitation of the prison residents too. Community and family support is a huge factor in the prevention of recidivism. The high cost of phone calls for the incarcerated punishes those who love them and need to talk with them and isolated the inmates from the very support that may be their saving grace. Many families of incarcerated people are already suffering financially, and there is no justice in gauging them with higher phone prices than the rest of the community pays. In addition, justice is ill served if incarcerated people cannot telephone their lawyers. High phone fees are not the way to monitor prison communications. I urge you to consider this issue and adapt regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

Please create regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Family members need to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at reasonable rates. The separations are difficult enough and are often too distant to allow travel. The calls may be the only means for children to stay in touch with their parents, parents and siblings to stay in touch with their incarcerated family member. I know families dealing with the restrictions imposed by prison and the costs for communication. Costs should actually reflect the cost not create great profit margins for the phone companies with the monopoly on phone service.

It seems like so for parents and children both when they are charged usury rates for a telephone call. That's carrying free enterprise into the realm of cruel and unusual punishment. Please put a stop to this crime.

It's shameful! It's truly shameful! "Whatever you do to the least of my bothers and sisters you do unto me." I visit prisoners. The prices cut them off from the loved ones that are most likely to allow them to heal. The USA has 6% of the world's population and 25% of the world's prisoners. Land of the free and home of the brave? Not any more.

My church participates in a program called "Get on the Bus" which reunites prison inmates and their children once a year. No matter what the parent has done to earn his incarceration, the children crave the voice and touch of their parent. Allowing this kind of profiteering is its own kind of criminal activity. The FCC should be facilitating family communication not punishing people for it.

There is no reason why these three companies have to charge so much. I'm sure that they can still make a profit with reasonable rates. In my opinion, $1 per minute for a phone call is a crime. Do the right thing and cap the rates.

Dear FCC,
I am very thankful that at last you are taking up the debate on the issue of prison phone profiteering. Along with my own thoughts on our society's obligation to a moral set of standards, please consider the effects on those who least are able to submit their comments to you, namely prisoners who are attempting to stay in touch with their families.
I urge you to quickly implement regulations to cap the charges of this industry.
Yours,
Adam Broner, music critic

Minorities make up 75% of the prison population, while whites make up 25%. Stop feeding yourselves off of minorites and lower to middle class working families. In this economy people cannot afford to be cheated by multi-million dollar corporations. These companies already have huge quanties of money, why squeeze every last penny out of the people? Whether you are dealing with prisoners or normal everyday citizens, everybody has rights and cannot be charged astronomical amounts of money just to speak with their loved ones. This is a democracy and the people's voice must be heard. Stop the taxation without representation!

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. That is to say, rates that are comparable to the rates charged for free-world long distance calls. Companies contracted with the prison systems falsely claim that their rates must be high because it pays for the security modifications that are made to prison phones so that calls can be monitored and/or recorded by prison officials. But their rates are vastly beyond the cost of these modifications. All one needs to do to check how exhorbitant their rates are is to examine the millions of dollars in "kick-backs" that are given to the state prison systems. If one considers the kick-backs AND a fair profit for these companies, plus actual operating expenses, then one has grasp of the enormity of this problem.

My 18 year old friend is in the Albuquerque Metropolitan Detention Center. I want her to be able to call her family and friends especially since our ability to visit her is so limited. The cost for her to call is outrageous. This is exploitation and its wrong.

Prison phone companies are awarded these monopolies through bidding processes in which they submit proposals to the state prison systems; in all but eight states, these contracts include promises to pay "commissions" – in effect, kickbacks – to states, in either the form of a percentage of revenue, a fixed upfront payment, or a combination of the two.
THIS MUST STOP.

Please regulate long distance charges in the prison phone industry. It's more compassionate and probably also reduces recidivism–which in the long run saves more money than whatever cut states get from exorbitant rates. The status quo hurts not only prisoners but their families–who have committed no crime, who might be children, and are already struggling with an incarcerated family member.

I am NOT in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. However, as an employee in a juvenile detention center, I see no reason why inamtes can't be granted access to prepaid local/long distance calling cards, and get charged the same rates as the rest of us. I used to work for Comcast, during the time when they rolled out their Comcast Digital Voice phone service. The service didn't accept 3rd party billing, so we got a lot of calls from people with family members in prison, asking how to allow their son/daughter to make collect calls. Often I was the one to inform these people of the high fees prison phone services charge. I was glad they couldn't bill those calls to our service, so I wouldn't have to talk to someone who'd received a surprise $400 phone bill (or higher), as happened to a friend of mine with a cousin in prison. Prison phone companies have a captive audience (as it were) who cannot take advantage of competition. It is the government's job and obligation to step in and regulate the prices charged, so inmates and their families are not taken advantage of.

The monopoly phone companies use to overcharge for talking to loved ones in prison or jail is usury, and should never be allowed. Until such monopolies are broken up, the unfair, negative effects on people, like those who have to pay exorbitant rates to talk to receive phone calls from loved ones in jail or prison, should be banned!
I believe regulations should be put in place to prevent this exploitation.
Thank you!

I've seen the effects, on innocent children and other family members, of this heinous practice. The absence of the imprisoned person already creates deprivation for his/her family. Profiting outrageously from the suffering of others is disgusting, and should be illegal. I VERY STRONGLY favor regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. It's bad enough that prisons have become a profit-making industry. What kind of a nation allows this? Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I know from personal experience how important it is for relatives, especially young children, to speak to their incarcerated loved ones, frequently, to hear for themselves that they are OK. It is equally as important, if not more so, for the incarcerated loved one to know his/her family is OK and is still there for him/her. Exhorbitant phone rates make it difficult, if not impossible, for many to afford this simple human contact.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. The current system creates profits from human suffering; the inmate may deserve punishment, but the inmate's family does not. They are in most cases already poor, may have lost a primary breadwinner to prison, and these companies extort BLOOD MONEY from poor, innocent family members. These phone calls should be available for a REASONABLE rate, comparable to the cost to provide them with a modest profit. Inmates should be allowed to designate their (very low) prison work wages, sacrificing canteen purchases, if they wish to do so, to provide for both inbound and outbound phone calls. Since prisoners are usually in prison for a long time, families should be able to purchase long term bundles at a discount (this would actually IMPROVE profits by making the cash flow faster), under reasonable conditions. And billing should start ONLY when the inmate actually starts to talk to the relative.

I am absolutely in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. To charge some of our country's poorest, vulnerable people the highest phone rates is called profiteering, it's long-term price gouging, and it's unconscionable. Separating families puts great stress on the incarcerated and their relatives outside prison. The companies who overcharge vulnerable poor people are contributing to the prolonged delinquency of the prisoners that the states are supposedly trying to rehabilitate.
In that sense, these telecom companies are actually costing the states money because if more prisoners were rehailbitated correctly, the prisons would not be so overcrowded and the financial burden that is the prison system would be a little lighter.
I strongly urge you to cap the rate charges in the prison telephone industry. Thank you.

My brother and I don't have anyone but each other, now. I'm the only thing that keeps him going, from one day to the next. He's finishing a 10-yr sentence at Eastern Kentucky Corrections Complex, and we're using phone calls to make plans for his future (people released from prison are disadvantaged by having nothing in place for them to reintegrate w/ the community and labor force, unless they have the help a family member). I have no choice but to pay these exorbitant phone call rates, to Securus, to prepare for my brother's future welfare. Why am I being penalized by these highway-robbery phone rates, when all I'm trying to do is help my brother? Securus knows they have a captive clientele, in my brother and I, and Securus is price gouging our need to communicate w/ each other. This is extortion, which I thought was supposed to be against the law. Please may the FCC do whatever it can to help lower these phone call rates to the fair cost we all pay in the free world. Thank you.

It is ridiculous how much a call from a correctional institution can be. Though in Georgia, it is relatively cheap ($2.70 locally or $5.40 long distance for 15 minutes), it is as much as $15.00 from Alabama. This would make people not want to take any of these calls, which is at the detriment of the person making them, who has no choice.

I have worked in corrections for 20 plus years and think the rates inmates (i.e. their families) are charges for telephone calls are nearly criminal. Many of these people will only get worse without communication with those they love and who love them. Over the past ten years or so the costs have become attrocious. Please do something to improve this situation.

The greater good of the country will benefit from prisoners increased ability to maintain contact with their loved ones, and increase the possibility of an intact family to return to after their release. Regular contact can be a reminder of their humanity, sustain them during incarceration and help them more easily transition when they return home as a familiar part of the family and not as a stranger.

I have a dear friend who's husband is awaiting trial far away. She is partially disabled, retired on a very small monthly fixed income, housebound for the most part, and cannot call her husband as often, or speak as long, as she would like because of the enormous expense. He is over 3,000 miles away, innocent of the crime he has been charged with, and it's been over a year with no trial yet. Although she has friends to talk with, she needs to talk with her husband. She misses him very much and when they do talk, she has to limit their conversation to just a couple of minutes. And he needs to hear her voice. They are both in their 60's. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. It is truly awful to charge $ 1.00 per minute! Outrageously high! How can you continue to charge these rates in good conscience? Please lower your rates to be in line with the phone calls made by all the rest of us. Thank you.

I would also like to see the constant increase of 'fees' AT&T tacks on to my bill each month regulated. Getting through to the phone company individually takes hours. Probably other people trying to complain!

What's going on here? Prison inmates are surely in the low-income category, aren't they? I know I am and I use Cloncom, purchased the internet. I think I pay about four cents a minute. Where's the budget sense within our prison system?

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cancel, or at least cap, long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones free, or at affordable rates. THESE connections are the incentive and support for people in prison to survive, correct themselves, and to improve. Severing, obstructing, or prohibiting the important family bonds through bad policies and commercial preferences is counter-productive, inhumane, and sleazy, unconscionable behavior.
If our very institutions are no more than pirates, why should imprison others who behave as such? Why pay for abuse and neglect when we could put that money towards ending the poverty and abuse which creates much of the anti-social behaviors to begin with?

I personally know a young man who is imprisoned and will call me every couple of months because he always regarded me as a Father figure. His own Father was abusive. I was amazed that a 20 minute phone call from him costs $12 ! I have a phone card that charges 3 cents a minute which would be the eqivalent of 60 cents for a 20 minute conversation ! Such gouging by the phone company in unconsionable. Please investigate this obscene practice.

Those frigging bastards at the Phone companies need to be reined in. Look at the crap state of phone and internet service this country has. We are 30th in the world behind countries like Lithuania and Moldavia where speeds are many times faster than here, in the country that invented the internet. France pays something like 35 bucks for 3 in 1 service that is many times faster and offers more selection. I am tired of the stranglehold the these companies have over us.

Those frigging bastards at the Phone companies need to be reined in. Look at the crap state of phone and internet service this country has. We are 30th in the world behind countries like Lithuania and Moldavia where speeds are many times faster than here, in the country that invented the internet. France pays something like 35 bucks for 3 in 1 service that is many times faster and offers more selection. I am tired of the stranglehold the these companies have over us.

Have known parents that have used their last dime to take those calls because of the love they have for their kids in prison. And these were people on fixed incomes, disabled unable to work. And the costs were unbelievably exorbitant. Something should be done to not only help these family and friends of those incarcerated, but also those who are in jail so that they can maintain important contacts outside. This is beneficial to the inmate in reducing recidivism and maintaining contacts with loved ones outside the institution.

This is insanely wrong to allow companies to take advantage of these people in this way. How are these companies taking "risks" to justify their high charges? This is not behavior anyone would want to tell their mother about. We regulate everything else in these convicts' lives, maybe we should regulate the companies that provide them contact with the outside world.

Prisons usually distance people from their homes too much as is - please do not increase that distance by allowing phone companies to shorten the amount of time a loved one can afford. Where the choice is between spending your family's budget on food for a week or not speaking to a father, brother, son - there is no choice at all. Restrict what phone companies can charge. It's the humane thing to do.

When you recieve that short phone call from a loved one or a friend that has to get a hold of a loved one and you only get to talk for a minute or two and the call costs over $20, you KNOW that not only are you getting ripped off but the person calling is too. Captive pricing is what it is. They have exclusive deals that are punitive. I am sure the prison gets a kickback (or percentage). It is WRONG in every way!!!!!

Even a local call to my local jail is charged at $1 a minute. That should be criminal. If we want prisoners to WANT TO REFORM we need to let them stay conected to loved ones while they are incarcerated. These phone calls are a lifeline which should not be taken advantage of in this userous way. Please regulate prison and jail phone rates.

We have more people in prison than most if not all of the nations. Our prisons are privatized, giving them incentives to keep the census up. They are crowded, dirty, and the food served is awful.
The prisoners need contact with the outside world, their families, to maintain sanity. They and their families do not need to be victimized by phone companies who do so because they can. Please, end the outrageous charges because YOU CAN.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. My family was recently victimized by one of these companies during the pre-trial incarceration of a family member in the Denver, Colorado City/County jail. The repeated set-up fees, minimum charges and then per-minute charges were horrendous.
These kick-back telephone deals are an un-judged, excessive penalty imposed on family members above and beyond any judgement and penalty that has been imposed by a court.

I am outraged that the FCC is allowing these 'nameless' phone companies to charge usurious rates for phone calls to people in prison. The majority of these people are poor as we know. It is disgusting that they are having to choose between feeding themselves and their children and making phone calls to their loved ones. How can the FCC justify this. The fact is that it is a racket, and cannot be justified. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at the same rates that the rest of us pay. What these companies are being allowed to do is absolutely scandalous.

It is immoral and counterproductive to allow telephone companies to gouge people making long-distance calls to prisoners. It is immoral to punish innocent people who just happen to be connected to a prisoner. And since contact with family and friends reduces recidivism, it is counterproductive to reduce telephone contact by making it outrageously expensive. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at competitive rates.

A 15 minute call from my son from VA (I'm in NC) is $18; previous calls from him when he was in NC, 30 minutes from my house, were $ 7.00. I cannot really believe that the FCC is allowing this, but apparently you are. I demand that the FCC protect all consumers and not discriminate against the incarcerated and their families.

My son had to serve three years in the California prisons. Global Tel*Link charged exorbitant tariffs and I was unemployed at the time, so the $50 - $75 a month that I spent just to talk for 15 minutes once a week, took a significant bite of my budget. However, being there for my son was vital both for me and for him, so I made sure I could make those phone calls. Please regulate these phone companies.

I believe we should cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. This would not only be simply fair to already hurting families (from loss of a loved one to the prison system) but increases the chances of prisoners reforming and getting back on their feet once released. It also lessens the unnecessary monetary burden on a family with an incarcerated loved one. Forcing prisoners to be cut off from their loved ones and the rest of society is inhumane and detrimental to us all in the long run.

There are already laws against price gouging in other circumstances where the free market cannot operate, such as after natural disasters. Regulations to correct this instance of price gouging would be consistent with the spirit of fairness expressed in those laws.

To heal our society, we must heal the family. A family torn apart by incarceration is a tragedy for all concerned. Isolating the prisoner, and the family due to unconcionable telephone charges is basically the wrong thing to do. It violates the "golden rule" and enables the sin of greed. The marginal costs of servicing this unfortunate clientele are low, so don't allow telephone companies to prosper at the expense of a suffering family. Cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Don't forget: to heal our society, we must heal the family.

I was married to a man in prison for 4 years. I payed hundreds of dollars to talk to him. I did not have children but we know recisivism is not as high when prisoners stay connected to their families. Why let phone companies rip off this captive audience? The families not the prisoners pay the bills so it is really penalizing the people who did not commit the crimes. I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. This gouging of the families of prisoners in order to call their loved ones is unconscionable. What a regressive method of collecting revenue for a state when a portion of these costs are passed back to the general fund. OK, incarcerate those who committed a crime but don't punish the innocent, their family members.

Dear FCC,
I am enthusiastically AGAINST any caps on phone rates for criminals' phone calls. As part of the punishment of going to prison, it is only fair that inmates PAY, in every sense of the word, for their crimes. They shouldn't even have phone calls in the first place, truth be told. Want to stay in touch with your "loved ones"? Well, don't do something that gets you sent to prison in the first place. They should raise the cost to $5/min. if you ask me. No sympathy from me on this one, AT ALL! Prison should be a miserable place with as few liberties and conveniences as possible. That way, people might think twice or three times before victimizing someone and being sentenced to prison. DO NOT REGULATE PHONE COMPANY RATES FOR INMATES PHONE CALLS!

The corporate control of our counry's prisons that seeks to maximize corporate profits, at the expense of corrupting the cost effectiveness of prison operations. I just learned about the harm caused by collusion of the phone corporations that contract with the corporate-owned prisons so they both can profit by extorting high costs for phone calls between prisoners and their families. I hope the FCC does not go along with this extortion schemre and the harm is brings upon our nation and will support regulations preventiing such extortion. Preventing monopolists from abusing their position is a cornerstone of good governance. When you consider the source of telecom monopolies like these (direct government subsidy), and the public interest served by rehabilitation, the FCC's mandate could not be more clear. I fully support rules to bring the prison phone "market" back into line with the broader industry.

I'm horrified to find out about these abusive telephone charges. My mother is in assisted living and highly values daily calls from friends and family. The facility management knows how important this is for a resident's well-being, and all such calls - even long distance - are free of charge. As a profit making company they could charge for this but they don't. Knowing how important such family and friend calls are to the somewhat isolated assisted living residents, I can only imagine the great importance to more isolated residents of a prison. I'm beginning to get a bad feeling about all corporations, considering the country's recent history, and yet here's another example of the crassest venal greed. I urge the FCC to charge these obscene high rates. It's a truly disgusting situation.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. It is most important for this form of communication to be available for all concerned, and extremely sad when it can't take place because of unreasonable and unjustifyable rates and fees. As a former federal prosecutor, I strongly favor treating prisoners as the human beings they are and helping to keep recidivism rates low.
Such measures definitely include keeping prisoners in touch with their families.
So it is unconscionable that long distance phone companies with exclusive prison contracts are charging $1.00 PER MINUTE and even more for family - to - prisoner calls.
There is no adequate reason that prisoners' families should pay more for calls to an incarcerated family member than for any other long-distance call.
This is an interstate matter. The federal government may certainly regulate it. The FCC is to be commended for tackling this.
So I strongly favor regulations limiting long distance charges by phone companies that provide phone service to prisoners. These rates should be comparable to those for non-prison long-distance service.
In fact, I favor a mandatory amount, say, at least 15 minutes per month, that a prisoner's family may talk at no charge to him or her. Prison phone companies clearly can afford this, and should, as part of their highly remunerative service. It would help to keep families together, and recidivism rates down.
Please, therefore, institute as promptly as possible regulations allowing family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at reasonable rates – and even, to a stated extent, at no charge.

I believe our prison system is mainly profiteering off poor people who self-medicate with controlled substances, and should not be incarcerated for these non-violent offenses. This includes the phone companies. As someone who befriended an incarcerated person, I find the policies concerning telephone contact between inmates and family and friends to be barbaric.I certainly favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

Children who have a parent in prison lead lonely, fearful lives. Please: do not impose additional hardships upon such children by cutting off telephone contact with imprisoned parents - simply for children's lack of funds to pay for phone calls.
Ordinary citizens are given to understand that corporations, including telephone companies, are legal 'persons.' If that is truly the case, then how about such 'persons' begin dealing with issues such as this one with heart and conscience? A little more consideration to the wellbeing of our children, and a bit less for share holder profits, would go a long way in convincing us mere mortals that corporations are 'people'.

I am absolutely, enthusiastically, passionately, in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement potent regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Studies show that one of the biggest factors in prison rehabilitation and recidivism is whether or not a person stays in contact with their families. In essence, we, as a nation, are refusing to address the problem of crime, and instead rewarding corporations which take advantage of troubled people. Please help to remedy this situation - starting with limiting what phone companies can charge for inmate calls.

Please consider regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. I have a U.S. telephone number in Norway but have never heard my son's voice because we live on a pension and the cost is prohibitive. I have written to my son every day for ten years, but the joy of actually hearing his voice would be very special. At 70 years of age and nine time zones away from our son, I don't expect to see him again.

To Whom It May Concern;
I know this situation all too well - my son's dad is in federal prison and has been for a number of years, since our son was 3 years old.
While his dad tries to write letters & cards, talking on the phone is a much more accessible way to connect with and develop a semblance of a relationship with a small child. My son rarely gets to talk to his dad anymore, as my cell (the only phone we have) doesn't accept collect calls. His dad used to spend most of his money on phone cards just to talk to our son twice a month, but it just kept getting more and more expensive for less and less time. For special holidays, his dad will call my grandmother's house - she accepts his collect calls but I often feel guilty knowing that each minute is racking up her phone bill enormously and completely unfairly. If this were just any other collect call, these practices would have been outlawed long ago.
It's already quite hard to maintain any sort of a relationship while someone is in prison - and it's proven that these relationships are vital when helping former inmates get back out into the world. So why would we make these relationships even harder to manage??
I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow my son to speak to his incarcerated father at affordable rates and without bankrupting my grandmother with obscene collect call charges.
Thank you for your time.
Sincerely,
Chandra Welter

Even though a child's parent is incarcerated they still need to know them on a personal level. Every child needs their parents. A child of an incarcerated adult will be able to learn first hand from their mistakes instead of feeling unloved and not wanted. It's imperative that we begin to put an end to the cycle. It's also imperative for law enforcement staff and other correctional facility members for prisoners to have contact with their loved ones on a regular basis. The only way to make that happen is to make it more affordable. It's a known statistic that prisoners become irritable, anxious, unruly and/or violent when they don't speak with their parents, children, spouses, fiance', etc. Violence against police and jail officials needs to come to an end. It will also reduce violence towards other inmates and prisoners will spend their time in an efficient way working towards a future in society.
You can do all of this by drastically reducing long distance calling. You'll be able to take the honor for the improvements or the blame for the lack of improvement.

This is a case of corporate greed overriding common sense.
Persons in prison who remain in contact with family and friends have a markedly lower chance of winding back in prison.
And they and their families pay for it!

Even when in prison, a father/son/brother/mother/daughter/sister has the right to communicate to family. Such communication can only help both the family outside (esp children!) as well as the inmate, to improve all their lives. It has been an outrage, for years, that phone companies have been charging prisoners unreasonably high amounts. So I am really glad someone is finally doing something about this! I am enthusiastically and absolutely in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. I used to watch my poor neighbor who was on welfare, going to school trying to make something of herself to raise her three children, pay $1 a minute in collect calls from her husband in prison. Those charges were criminal. I strongly support regulation. No woman should go without food so her children could say, "Hi Daddy" like this woman did. He eventualy got out of prison and became a productive citizen.

If regular phone calls to their family makes it less likely for an inmate to reoffend, it is extremely important that they be given the same opportunity that those of us on the outside have available: a phone call charged at a rate that is in line with rates charged in the public markets.

Also == unless this situation is revised, it will probably contribute to more situations where prisoners are involved in taking over the phone lines of innocent citizens, such as my 95 year old dad. I don't know how they do that, but they did it, and I'm sure the FCC knows about this. Horrifying.

We am personally affected, as my wife's brother is in prison and the rates are onerous. If he calls weekly, our phone bill ends up being $50 more than it would be if he were not in prison. He is being punished by losing his freedom, but WE are being punished because we love him and want to talk with him. Stop this USURY, please!

I support regulations, intended to put a cap, on long distance charges, in the prison phone industry. Please implement changes that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones, at affordable rates.
Rather than being ripped off (themselves), by other thieves and greedy criminals (the phone company executives), who charge such outrageously high rates.
Set the proper example, by promoting good family relations, in the hope that (when released from prison), their families will give them a reason to change their lives, for the better and not end up back in trouble with the law, a second time.
Don't let the greed of corporate phone company executives encourage prison inmates to also continue to be criminals, after they are finally released.
Let's try to encourage all prisoners to become good citizens, in our communities.

"Our contemporary laws and justice system practices exacerbate the crime problem, unnecessarily damage the lives of millions of people (and) waste tens of billions of dollars each year," it said.
The report was produced by the JFA Institute, a Washington criminal-justice research group, and its authors included eight criminologists from major U.S. public universities. It was funded by the Rosenbaum Foundation and by financier and political activist George Soros' Open Society Institute.
The corporate prison system in this country is wrong. And to charge some of the poorest people in this country extra for phone usage is a crime in itself. You should be ashamed.

I don't often rush to the defense of prisoners, but the practice of applying abnormally high phone rates to prisoners in jail who just want to talk to their families is pretty wrong, and probably adversely effects many innocent children and teens as well. It's sad and they shouldn't be victimized, not to mention many in prison are among the nation's poorest citizens and thus can least afford it.

It's not just unfair LONG DISTANCE rates, i.e., even if you call LOCALLY, the operator wants a charge card number, to charge exhorbitant fees for making a local call. I just experienced this first hand in Camp Verde, AZ. THIS IS OUTRAGEOUS AND THIS PRACTICE NEEDS TO STOP NOW!

There has to be a line in the sand regarding the obscene profits privatized prison corporations make. You need to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. These prisoners may have done dumb things (I'm talking low-level crime, not murder, rape, etc.)but can rehabilitate themselves if they have contact with their families to see them through. These corporations instead seem to want to guarantee their failure, so they can profit some more when prisoners relapse and return to the privatized prison system.

About the 16 and 19 year old: One of them turned into a driveway to wait, the homeowner accused him of trespassing, the police were called and accused them of stealing.
nothing was found on them, when they protested, they were accused of resisting arrest, and disturbing the peace. One was walking, and the other who was riding a bike. The one turned into the driveway to wait for his younger sister.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. It's difficult enough for families to deal with an imprisoned loved one without you having to make it worse. It's shameful that you would take advantage of people in this way. Try thinking of the people you are exploiting–think of how they must feel–imagine yourself in their situation. What if it was your mother in jail?

Don't allow the phone companies to be more greedy! Have them be fair! Direct them to do what's right and not overcharge for this service! They should put themselves in their customers' shoes!

I'm amazed that this is still going on...I worked for Ameritech/SBC/ATT for several years in the 90's and I remember people losing their phone service trying to maintain their support for their family members in prison (these charges are assigned to the person being called as collect calls)I'm appalled that this hasn't been corrected - it inexcusable in these times when the technology allows most of us to call anywhere in the contiguous states for no more than it costs to call across the street. The term "prison industry" is repugnant. The fact that Americans are allowed to profit from the incarceration of other Americans has made us the country with the largest per capita population behind bars. This is disgusting!

This is a travesty. Huge corporations are draining the pockets of average Americans, charging unreasonable fees for everything from bank accounts, credit cards, and insurance to health care - while our friends and neighbors go homeless and hungry. This is one more instance of these wealthy companies robbing vulnerable Americans. There should be no 'prison phone industry' and phone service to prisons should be charged at the same rate as other locations. I insist on dismantliing this industry and, at a minimum, instituting regulations to cap long distance charges for inmates. These unfair practices must stop. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

In addition, the FCC regulates video relay for the deaf; however, prison and detention facilities still allow only antiquated and limited access to TTY for the deaf and hard of hearing. Not only does this make it impossible for some prisoners to even have access to their family members, but under the unregulated system the exorbitant cost is often four times more for the deaf and hard of hearing who take longer to communicate with the TTY system. Why is there such discrimination and taxing (where states receive commissions) for families of prisoners and the deaf and hard of hearing?

Every incarceration holds the promise of eventual release and strong community ties are a vital factor in a successful return to society. It is an outrage that ANY company, public or private, would seek short-term profit over long-range success.

Sometimes the only thing to cling to us the voice of a loved one. The kids need to hear their parents, wives need to comfort their husbands, and moms need to know their sons are ok. Why should someone, who is already being punished, who is struggling to put their lives back together, who needs to be guided back to society, be gouged by these phone companies? Why should families, who need the hope they cling to, be raped by these profiteers? Would you allow this if it were your daughter off at college? Or your mom in the hospital? Or your son calling from boot camp? I do realize that inmates are there because they have committed crimes. I do realize that some are beyond rehabilitation. But, the one who, when hearing his little girls voice, avows anew to right his life, deserves that chance. The woman who struggles with addiction, hearing her parents love, promises to get clean, doesn't she deserve that hope for a future? The odds are, anyone with an incarcerated loved one, can ill afford this legal robbery, PLEASE FIX IT! Thank you, and may you never know the pain these families endure.

People make bad choices all the time, bad parenting isn't necessarily linked to those choices. A long distant parent that is paying his or her debt to society can still make a positive impact on a child's life. Example: "Don't do what I have done, make better Choices"

If we are interested in lowering the rates of recidivism, and frequent contact with family outside prison can help to lessen the chances that a convict will end up back in the prison system after his/her initial release, then allowing prison inmates the same access to reasonable phone rates that the rest of America enjoys makes complete sense. Let's start doing the sensible thing.

This boggles the mind. How could we let private companies profit on the misery of our innocent citizens. Surely the children and families of those who committed crimes should not be punished. Please regulate these companies so that they charge reasonable - even discounted rates. Those families with members in prison are the least likely to be able to pay higher rates.

Please regulate the long-distance charges for imprisoned people. It's wildly unfair to allow companies to charge obscenely high rates to these people who then are handicapped in their communications with their families and friends. Obviously, prisons should continue to confiscate cell phones for those prisoners managing their illicit affairs from jail.

I don't know anyone in the prison system, but that doesn't keep me from knowing when something is wrong. And recieving kickbacks from the gouging of the families of the incarcerated is criminal. Maybe not in a "well there's no law against it" sense, but in a moral right and wrong, good and evil sense it is wrong. The prison system does incarcerate some who deserve their fate, but it is also a corrupt, money making institution, incarcerating many people for the sake of profits. This is evidence of that corruption.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Having regular calls and visits from family while incarcerated can make people far less likely to go back to prison. Considering the billions of dollars our states spend annually on incarceration, it is in the state's interest to ensure maximum contact with families.

Everyone that has a loved one that is incarcerated should have the right to be able to talk to them without having to choose. It just isn't right to take away a child's right to talk to them or any other person for that matter. There are some that can't go see them for many different reasons and that is the only communication they would have, and if you make some new regulations, that would be taken away from them as well.

So we've created another "vending machine" to gather what few dollars the poor have left?
I think this is deplorable.
There are people with access to communicate with the whole dang world for only $29.95 a month.
Is this what privatization gives us? Well, yes it is.
And, the majority of us don't like it!

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. If we have any expectation that people in prison will turn their lives around and become more productive members of society, it behooves us not to deny them the connections to the community and to the individuals that will help support them in their transformation. Erecting barriers to family members staying in touch with their members in prison is counter-productive and frankly, odiously exploitative.

How sad that these phone companies are allowed to profit on the miserty of others. The mothers, children and other family members didn't do anything to deserve being charged aproximately 90 times, if not more, of what it takes a regular long distance phone call to be made today. Please, please, stop this excessive phone goughing by the phone companies whom I will never do bussisness with again, now that I know who they are and how much they are putting profit over people.

People in prison may be paying a debt to society, but if we do not make it practical for these children to contact the important people in their life, they will not have the support they need. Our systems is not merely about punishment; it is also about making the future better. How can we do this without taking care of the next generation?

Charging such ridiculous amounts for phone calls helps no one except the phone companies. Inmates are receiving enough of a punishment by being in prison and doing work projects. Many inmates are already in poverty so these phone calls only add to their debt (as does the fact that they're not at their jobs). After enduring court costs, their families do not have much money to spare either.
Studies show that children who have endured the stress of their parent(s) being arrested, and their parents' lack of involvement while in jail are more likely to have psychological disorders and more likely to be delinquents as adults. Some of this stress can be reduced by being able to stay in contact over the phone with their incarcerated parent. We should not make children pay for their parent's illegal actions.
Thank you for your consideration of this issue.

I strongly support regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Keeping in touch with family members helps prisoners reintegrate in to their communities upon release. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at rates that match what non-incarcerated people pay for regular service.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. I am totally in favor of companies making a profit, however, the profit margin that is being made in this situation seems excessive to me. It also exploits a vulnerable population of people. I work with vulnerable populations of people and am truly astounded at the ways in which companies have no problem with their exploitation, then complain that they "mooch" off the system. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

While I understand that the argument for higher rates is that when someone is in prison, they shouldn't get special treatment. However, when someone is in prison, the person they call is the one who has to pay for the call, NOT the prisoner. It's not fair to put an extra burden on the children, spouse, parents, etc. involved in this particular situation. I think that skyrocketing rates on this type of phone call is sleazy & underhanded, and it doesn't punish the prisoner more-it simply adds more financial stress to the families of those who are in prison.
I think the fairest thing to do is to have the phone companies charge the same as what their other customers pay for the same type of service. Research shows that prisoners who stay in touch with their families are more likely not to return to prison, so I am in favor of regulations that prevent higher rates on phone calls made from prisoners to their families.

Prison rates are already high, with rates or recitivism especially alarming. By supporting these individuals through their sentace, by allowing them to have contact with their loved ones and the outside world, we cannot only make lives more bearable, but we can also decrease the amount of taxpayer dollars that go towards prison.

I am definitely in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Contact with family members builds a stronger home unit to return to when the prisoners have paid their debts to society. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. It could yield decreased recidivism as well as simply being the most humane thing to do. Also, why punish the innocent outside the prisons. These rates are disgraceful.

It is not just prisons, it is detention facilities (county jails). As a practicing lawyer I receive telephone calls from county inmates seeking legal assistance and from clients detained in the facility pending trial or serving misdemeanor sentences. Those calls originating within the jail are "long distance" to my office less than 200 feet away at rediculously high rates.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I have a neice in custody in Superior, WI, and I consider it an outrage that the city, county and state governments are victimizing those who are incarcerated for their financial gain. My neice is in a position of relying on family and friends to pay for these gross over charges in order to have a lifeline to the outside world. Do your job and ensure that all American citizens have access to reasonably priced telecommunication services. Do the right thing!

My girlfriends son suffers mental illness and often ends up in a jail rather then a hospital where he would be better cared for. These calls to his mom help keep him emotionally stable and reduce the cost to the public for increased care. These rates are a severe financial strain on her as she lives on Social Security alone and often can not afford these high rate.

kickbacks beg dishonesty and should be illegal. they never cause lower rates...merely open bribery .
in this case it is extortion . make the kickback illegal ...reduce the rates to rational much lower rates . time limit the calls so more of the prisoners and participate . prisoner contact is good for the prisoners and their callers . monitor the calls to assure proper use...gerry berry

It is outrageous and unjust to allow private companies to gouge the relatives of prison inmates with rates that are 10-20x the normal rates for in-country long distance. Please implement new regulations that would limit what phone companies could charge inmates for calls. This burden, of course, falls disproportionately on the poor and minorities.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. When you allow the loved ones of prisoners to be charged the outrageous fees you are not punishing the guilty. If you are going to punish the innocent justice is not being served. I know from experience these phone companies have to be makeing big profits when the prisoner calls home, talks for a few minutes and is cut off by the phone company requireing the prisoner call again to complete his/her call. The first couple of minutes are charged a high rate thus enabeling the phone company to reap higher profites when the prisoner has to call a second time. Do not allow the, in my opinion, theives to keep ripping off the public. It is not the prisoner, who, by the way are serving their sentences but the families, friends etc. that are being punished. That, to me, is not justice.

Our son is severely bi-polar and his father and I are on medicare which makes it difficult to help support him while he comes in and out of the Denver Detention Center for petty incidents due to his illness. He called from a phone booth a couple of days ago and left a message for his father and in order for his father to hear the message, he had to pay $16 to hear it. This is outrageous overcharging and I think the government ultimately must step in and change this money making policy. These human beings are suffering enough just to stay sane and the only thing they have to support them emotionally and financially to stay in touch are their family and friends. We have had to spend so much money and cut our conversations very short in order to call. Please do the right thing for the children, the person in prison or an institution and their families. Sincerely,

Phone calls should be charged at the same rate as local residential rates or local business rates for a local business of similar size. At the MOST, a $.25 "connection" fee for a call from the prison could be charged above and beyond the normal rates with local calls being "free" of course. The "connection" fee could be charged as a maintenance fee on the phone, provided the prison doesn't already pay for the phone. If so, then the phone company can only charge comparable local rates with no addition fees etc.

As a former inmate I'm aware of how inmates are ripped-off by the telephone companies. I'm also familiar with the prisons refusal to allow _anyone_ to call, ever, and that they often times require all contacts be made by way of COLLECT CALLS.
In essense, if you ain't got money, no contacting your relatives!

Aren't the families paying a high enough price already in terms of emotional and economic hardships? Why add this unreasonable charge to break them down even further.
In addition, it seems that regulations need to be put in place to prevent "commissions" or upfront payments from being paid to states based on percentages of revenue from prison inmate calls which merely encourages these unreasonable rates.

America has an insatiable appetite for incarcerating its citizens and all the profiteering that goes along with it. Gouging families who want to remain connected to their families is shameful. I impress upon FCC and other government officials to exercise moral courage and end this sinful practice. Stop robbing the poorest people in this country to benefit huge corporations. establish fair calling rates for those already enduring the impact of having a loved one behind bars. we should not be in the business of "kicking one while they are down and defenselss". I have walked that walk and I can tell you it is painful to have to make the decison between providing basic needs and staying connected to one's loved one far, far away from home.

It is not justice to financially penalize family members for crimes they did not commit. Nor do I see how making it more difficult to communicate with loved ones would motivate an inmate to rehabilitate. Phone companies should not be allowed to charge any more for these calls than normal.

I am writing in passionate support of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Contact with family members can help reduce the likelihood that released prisoners will be incarcerated again. These regulations will protect innocent families and ultimately save money for tax payers. Thank you for your consideration.

I have a sister in Prison, yes she's being righted for the wrongs she's done however staying in touch with loved ones inside prisons (especially ones that are far away, due to prison placement), can help keeping people from going back.
