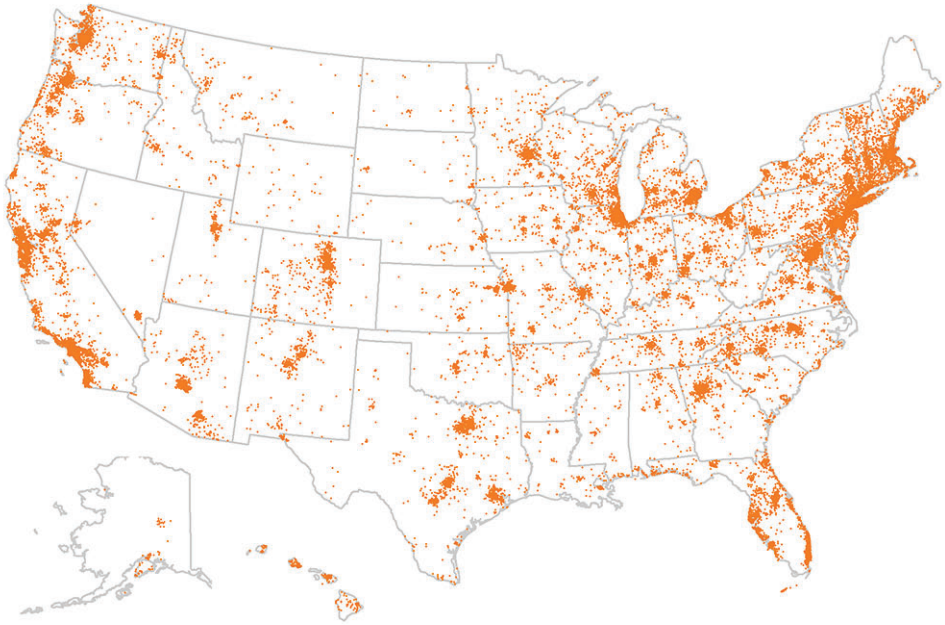
RE: Public Comments for CC Docket 96-128, Wright Petition

Dear Chairman Genachowski:

Please find enclosed 36,690 public comments supporting FCC imposition of price caps on correctional facility telephone rates. These comments were collected through an online public action campaign organized by the corporate accountability nonprofit SumOfUs and the criminal justice policy nonprofit Prison Policy Initiative. The campaign ran from 18 September 2012 through 9 November 2012 and was hosted at http://action.sumofus.org/a/prison-phones/.

The comments enclosed represent people from all 50 states. The diversity of petitioners varies not only in geography, but in employment background and degree of involvement with the criminal justice system. For example, one petitioner is a prison staff member hailing from Vermont. Just two minutes after this Vermont prison staff member signed the petition, a mother from Carson City, Nevada with a son incarcerated in San Quentin Prison in California signed the petition. Two days later a woman from Northwest Washington, D.C., who has a commonly misdialed telephone number, expressed her shock at learning the price of collect calls from jail after accepting one of the misdialed calls. Many petitioners are people previously unfamiliar with the prison telephone industry; the overwhelming majority express their shock at the exorbitant rates that can be charged and urge that rates be brought in line with ordinary long-distance rates. Nearly all of the petitioners underscore the same point: that the families of incarcerated persons should not be forced to endure telephone prices that exponentially exceed those charged for ordinary telephone service.

The 36,690 orange dots represent the homes of the SumOfUs members who submitted comments to the FCC.



Of the 36,690 comments, 2,647 contain unique comments written by the individual petitioners. We have enlarged and highlighted these unique comments to make it easy for the FCC to understand the diversity of support behind the Wright Petition. A diverse voice can be heard in these comments: Put an end to price-gouging in the prison telephone industry.

We understand that federal rulemaking is a deliberate, time-consuming process. And we appreciate that FCC regulators act with consideration and thoughtfulness so as to craft optimal regulations. But the time has come to move forward with regulating the correctional facility telephone industry so as to ensure that families of incarcerated people can afford to maintain connection to their loved ones, thereby increasing the likelihood that incarcerated persons will go on to lead crime-free lives after their release.

Thank you for your time and thoughtful consideration. Please feel free to contact us for further information should you have any additional questions.

Best regards,

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I'm sure that studies have shown, or would show if the studies were done, that family support helps criminals rehabilitate. So, access to family members should be at a reduced rate, not a higher one. In fact, I think each prison should have one phone available with unlimited local calls and reduced calling plans for surrounding communities.

I beg you to restrict the fees charged by private companies on inmates' phone calls. Contact with family has been proven to help keep convicts from relapsing. Yes, the folks in prison are there because they have been convicted of crimes. Punishment is part of the equation. But this type of punishment just heaps pain on those who are incredibly vulnerable, often missing the guilty party (at least when it comes to paying the bill) and hitting the innocent harder. It is just plain wrong to kick folks when they are down - regardless of how they got there.

Rather than taxing the wealthy with perhaps a raise in Federal Income Taxes or with a small tax on stock trades, or other means, it seems those in charge in our country prefer to tax those who can least afford it; like charging $1.00 a minute to families of incarcerated inmates. When will we learn to charge those who can most afford to pay - the already well-to-do who got wealthy by taking full advantage of all government services as well as assuring the public purchased their products before they off-shored their corporations to avoid taxes. Correction systems have become 'for-profit' big business and these phone companies are just greedily following suit. Please help these families stay in touch at a price they can afford.

As a counselor to several kids who ended up in jail or prison, I offered to stay in touch with them. The phone fees were outrageous, but I paid them, and watched as these young men came out of prison, and took charge of their lives. I hope my contact with them during these tough times helped them to find their way. I often thought, however, of the terrible cost to their families, and what it meant to all to keep in touch.
Keep the costs reasonable, and stop the price-gouging of those who can least afford contact, and most need it.

Prisoners have no choice over what phone company to use, they have to use what the prison administration provides. These vendors often provide kickbacks to the prison systems, and may even be selected on the basis of how high the kickback is. There is no competition to protect the consumer. And most prison phone services charge outrageous rates, as much as 50X or 100X what ordinary calls cost (1.2 cents per minute, for my own service). Prisoners who are able to maintain ties with their unincarcerated families are far more likely to reintegrate into society after they are released, less likely to go back to prison for further offenses. At the same time, families of prisoners are far less likely to have high disposable income to pay for repeated exorbitant phone calls.
Please implement regulations controlling the rates that phone companies can charge inmates for calls.

They don't call it the prison INDUSTRY for nothing—in this so called "freedom loving" country, more people get incarcerated in prison and jail for victimless so called "crimes" than in any other nation on earth very much including the former soviet union—any private corporation that profiteers off this sociopathic onslaught against our rights deserves to slowly burn in Hell–and you people on the FCC are either phenomenally stupid for allowing this to persist or you are just as foul-gutted and rank with evil as those who engage in this eye-gouging practice.

Three phone companies charge some of the nation's poorest upwards of $1 a minute to talk on the phone with their loved ones. These companies have gotten away with price gouging because their loved ones are in prison, and these three phone companies have exclusive deals with 45 states that allow them to charge obscenely high fees for incarcerated people to use the phone.
For a decade, the FCC has refused to force the prison phone companies to charge fair rates. I strongly support new regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry so that family members can speak to those incarcerated at affordable rates. Communication with loved ones is vital to lowering the rate of recidivism. The increasing privitization of our prison systems is turning them into corporate and governmental money makers, while ignoring the negative impacts on families and prisoners. It is time to regain control of at least this aspect of incarceration but ensuring maximum contact with families.

I have been using Securus for over a year now and their price is very reasonable: @2.10 for a 15 min. call. This is with a correctional facility in Florida. At a different facility, we had Inmate Telephone Inc who charged $10.70 for a 15 min. call. Perhaps this has more to do with the facility than the phone company? Or the billing company that these companies use to put the billing on a phone bill? The system needs a good review.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. As a social psychologist, I can tell you that incarcerated individuals who are able to maintain strong family connections while in prison are much less likely to re-offend after release than are prisoners who are isolated from family. As a business and personal customer of CenturyLink, I am outraged to learn that they are part of this monopolistic arrangement of gross exploitation of some of the most vulnerable people in our society. Whatever the decision made by the FCC, I will immediately be looking for an alternative telecommunications provider who doesn't specialize in profiting from the suffering of others.

It's one thing to limit the rights of convicted inmates, but their loved ones are not also guilty and should not be treated as if they are. A phone call is a phone call and should be treated as such, no matter where it originates. Rates should never be based on incarceration. Do the right thing...

Allowing families to stay in touch with their loved ones – and allowing people in jails or prisons to maintain contact with their families – contributes to general social benefit. People who are cut off from caring relationships have far less to lose than those who have strong connections, and they have far less motivation to make meaningful change.
The charges for collect calls from a prison or jail can be backbreaking for even middle-class families; for families living on anything less than a comfortable income, it is prohibitive.
Please, please make this change.

I have a neighbor who struggles with addictions and has two small kids. She has actually done a lot of good things in her parenting but was recently arrested and might be going to prison eventually. Although she might not have been as responsible as she should be, and her kids might be given to her sister to adopt, I know there is a lot of love in that family and that the kids do miss her. I would hate to think of her sister having to use more of their meager income than is necessary to help the little girls get to talk with their mother if the court case ends in prison time.
The caps don't need to be too low for the companies to make any money, they just need to ensure that the rate is reasonable as compared with other phone rates. I think it's outrageous that they are not – a classic example of "kicking somebody while their down."
Please help these families have contact without breaking the bank.

For inmates to be able to maintain contact with family I'm sure would go far to at least make prison life more tolerable. Not to mention maintaining close family ties is critical to the children of these inmates. Is that the right thing to do to these children who have no say in the matter?

Stop this nonsense now. Anything less is an admittance of guilt in a conspiracy to KEEP people in our plantation-style prison system. calls can be monitored the same way they are anywhere else without having to charge this much money so don't try to use that as an excuse. The monopolistic prison phone industry's exorbitant calling rates hurt families and undermine public safety. It's high time for the Federal Communications Commission to take action by capping long distance prison phone calling charges. How greedy and self-serving will we allow companies to become? How far from basic humanity are we willing to stray? Cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry, and implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Have a heart! Some things are more important than profit, and helping incarcerated persons stay connected to the outside world reduces prison violence. Think of it as a gift to prison guards and their loved ones, too!

The FCC is supposed to be representing the interests of The People, not private corporations whose only goal is to maximize profit through any means, no matter the consequences to everyone affected by this. Simply being incarcerated does not make you any less human, or make you any less worthy of protection from corporate greed and wrongdoing.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. It's hard enough knowing someone you love has messed up and is probably deserving of their sentence, but to hinder the prisoners from being able to talk to family, etc. due to the high cost does not help the reformation process. If all you can talk to is fellow inmates, a person may be swayed to commit other offenses when they're released due to constant bad influences.

This is absolutely unconscionable. It is also illogical. Bad social policy, bad economic policy, and without a doubt truly immoral. And this has been going on for years? Shame. Shame. Shame.
I am absolutely furious.
Every human who has it within their power to stop this and has not truly should be ashamed of themselves. Whether they are or not is really of no consequence. It only matters to the tax paying public that it be changed.
There is no doubt that recidivism is reduced with social contact from "outside;" there is no doubt that the tax payers are ultimately paying the cost for the outrageous profiteering in the – OUR – prison system. Perhaps the FCC can only do a small part in rectifying this grotesque situation, but at the very least, we expect you to do that part.

I am shocked to learn of the unrealistic and overpriced phone rates charged to prison inmates and family. Every American, in or out of prison, deserves the right to speak with family and loved ones. It should be illegal to take advantage of these people by charging them what they cannot afford. This is hitting way below the belt, denying comfort and hope to American citizens when they are already struggling. I am strongly in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

This has hurt my own family since my stepfather was a mentor to a gentleman in prison in my home state of Delaware. My stepfather a long time member of alcoholics anonymous and he was helping this gentleman stay sober. My parents are not rich and the bills they had from the phone company were terrible, and he is a volunteer. Please stop the phone company from rapeing these families.

I have personal experience with this sanctioned extortion. I was jailed for not following an officers' orders exactly. I tried to call home with that excuse for a phone inside my cell. I constantly got a busy signal because, as I learned later, it used a '900' number. Of course, my home phone (and I'll bet yours, too) blocks these calls. It wasn't until I demanded to use a real phone that I was able to talk to my family. The whole incident was a travesty of justice, and this just made the whole thing worse. This needs to be corrected immeadiately.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I have worked in the prison system for nearly 30 years. I know our own prison capitalizes from the 'kick backs' of prisoner phone use. Much of the funds go to inmate programs, recreation & such. I suppose that is how I have justified this practice for so long. The bottom line is this is wrong. Families of incarcerated offenders should not be charged anymore than any of us on the outside pay for long distance calls. It is blatant exploitation of a disenfranchised group. It needs to end.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. As a person with no contact with the penal system, I had no idea phone costs were so high. As many in prison come from economically-challenged environments, high phone rates must be a great burden to their families. Surely for most inmates, regular contact with their families would give them a "light at the end of the tunnel" and encourage better behavior while serving time in addition to ensuring they return to a more stable environment than those who have been isolated by no contact with the outside world during incarceration .

If we are serious about US prisons as places for rehabilitation and fair treatment, then it is inexcusable to charge exorbitant rates for prisoners to speak to their families - which aids in rehabilitation. It is the duty of the FCC to regulate rates in this context, and cap long distance charges to reasonable levels, comparable to those available to the general public. Please make our prisons, and the communications industry, as just as it can be by passing these regulations.

Children with a parent incarcerated are victims already of a parent wyho made a bad decision, peers who bully them for having a parent in prison and many of them can't even reach out and speak to the one they still need and love. Stop this unfairness. I'm not saying make it cheaper than others pay but I think they shouldn't have to pay more to speak to a loved one than I do to speak with my long distance relatives.

This is a very important cause and dear to my heart. The phone companies act as if they can profit from others' misfortune. If they humiliate in the process, then they appear to believe that it goes with the territory of having a loved one incarcerated . My understanding is that the phone companies have arrangements with the various states' prison governing bodies so that a significant portion of the "profits" actually pay part of the prisons' budgets. Exploitation in the extreme. Please end it as soon as possible.

I am saddened to find that there are phone companies who are taking advantage of the families of those who are in prison to create more profits. These families have more than everyone else's extra things to think about without having to worry about the phone bills when they're saying 'hello' and 'I love you' to their loved ones in prison!I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Despite the advances in phone service since the AT&T decision deregulating phone service, I would heartily favor re-regulating phone service if it would stop abusive practices like this. How dare they? This is the only means of communications these prisoners have with their families while they are in prison. As an attorney, I fully understand that prisoners have surrendered many rights when they entered prison. However, their families did not. Particularly their children. These states, and the Federal government by proxy through the FCC's inaction, are seeking to impose a breathtaking increase in the scope of criminal penalties through imposing punishment upon the families of the prisoners as well as on the prisoners convicted of actual wrongdoing.
In most cases, prisons are located in areas far from the areas where prisoner's families live. The families cannot afford to travel to visit them in person nor can they afford these outrageous toll calls. So the children and spouses, who were convicted of nothing, are left to suffer without the presence of one member of the household at all. This increase in the penalty of wrongdoing to include the family of the wrongdoer harkens back to old England and the US where the children of a debtor could be compelled to work off the debts owed by a bankrupt in favor of the creditors. Inasmuch as these are criminal penalties we are talking about, they clearly speed past the constitutional lines of bills of attainder and ex post facto. Of a de facto nature, if noting else.
For these reasons, I heartily urge the FCC to regulate these companies and the prices they can charge, as they have clearly demonstrated that they cannot regulate themselves. Respectfully submitted, 20 years ago, there was a problem with inmates having unlimited free phone calls. Inmates would sometimes make unwanted and harassing phone calls from jail. We don't want to go back to that. But inmates shouldn't be charged obscenely high prices to speak with their families either. It is not fair to the inmates or their families. It is just another way the already rich are profiteering at the expense of the disadvantaged . It needs to stop.

I spent a year in prison in 1997, and the company AMERITEL, whom I had to make all my LOCAL calls through, charged over a dollar a minute for local calls at the time. My wife, my parents, and my friends all were hit with hundreds of dollars in phone charges, since all the calls had to be made collect. These companies are HORRENDOUS and evil, and they exist solely to prey upon those that have no other recourse. Remember, there are over 3 million incarcerated Americans. Imagine what sort of profits these obnoxious pirates are earning off those who can LEAST afford it.
STOP THIS BEHAVIOR.

I am very strongly support regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. It should be your duty to implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. They have all ready lost such an important part of their lives, with the separation of family as well as, for the children, the stigma of having a family member in prison, that imposing large fees for phone calls is imposing even more punishment on those who are innocent victims in the whole process.

The families of people in prison already suffer enough. Please regulate the costs of long distance phone calls out of prisons. When prisoners are able to keep in touch with their support networks and communities outside, they are more likely to stay on the straight and narrow when they get out. This is also punishing the children and families of criminals, who did nothing wrong. The lack of regulation on these phone companies is harmful for society, and lines the pockets of extremely wealthy corporations at the cost of the people who can afford it least. Please reconsider.

Long ago, I worked for a company that resold phone service to hotels and resorts, and their business was essentially squeezing as much extra cash as possible from their guests. I thought it was fairly greedy and uncalled-for back then. The idea that the state should be able to squeeze extra cash out of prisoners' families is ridiculously greedy. Please put a stop to this.

The exploitation of prisoners is one of the greatest injustices our society tolerates. By dehumanizing and isolating incarcerated citizens, we not only deny people fundamental rights, but we also create a permanent criminal class by cutting ex-offenders off from civil society. Regulating prison phones is a small step towards excising this national shame, but it's an important one, and I hope you do the right thing.

I am in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Prisoners are paying their debt to society by serving their sentences. No one should be allowed to exploit them for a profit while they do so. People are in prison for all different reasons. Some made a mistake they have come to regret. Others are there unjustly. And others still are there because they are not fit to be among the rest of us. Whatever the reason, whatever the circumstance, no one should be allowed to exploit them for a profit. I am sure that reforms can be enacted to allow private phone companies make a reasonable profit for the services they provide.

Sorry, but I have no sympathy for inmates at this time. I have family that work as correctional officers and I do not approve of all the "rights" afforded to inmates currently. The children of victims may not have an opportunity to talk to their parents at all. Solve this by just taking away the phones all together.

Regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry are long overdue. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I am a criminal defense lawyer and often do work for indigent clients. They seldom have the resources to make phone calls. Ultimately the state (taxpayer) often pays the bills. The charges for these calls are obscene; no one in a fair, competitive market would get away with charging the sums involved in these calls. However, each correctional institution awards a contract to a single service provider, resulting in an effective monopoly. The inability of these inmates to connect with their families causes extreme emotional hardship for everyone involved, and those contacts are extremely important to rehabilitation of these individuals. Inability of these inmates to connect with their counsel amounts to a denial of their right to effective assistance of counsel.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I'm an advocate for my young foster son who is currently in prison. I'm the only one who's supporting him and I can't afford the high cost of phone calls. It would be wonderful to hear his voice and I know it would be uplifting for him to receive phone calls. Please alleviate the burden on families in tough times by passing regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Thank you.

I became aware of the exorbitant costs charged to prisoners who wish to talk with family and other loved ones when I was a volunteer at Montana State Prison. This must end. These individuals are paying for their crimes by serving prison terms. The point is, or should be, protect society and to rehabilitate these individuals so they can return to society and become productive citizens. Making contact with loved ones prohibitively expensive does not serve these ends. It makes money for the "service" providers.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I used to visit even the county jail in Johnson County Indiana and the inmates there were charged $7 per call and so was the recipient and it had to be a local call! That is outrageous and should be outlawed. I wrote the appropriate authorities in the county and state and never got so much as a reply. And my letters to the editor of the local newspaper were also ignored.

The system as it stands is criminal. Prisoners should be allowed contact with the outside world- especially their families. Considering the huge number of people in prison for minor drug offenses, it is appalling that in addition to their sentence, these prisoners are serving time AWAY from their families, AWAY from their children, AWAY from their community. We need to keep them integrated as much as possible with society to keep from contributing to a system that produces career criminals. Logically and emotionally, regulating phone companies when it comes to prisoner's rights is the right thing to do.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. If (I can call clean across the country ofr 5 cents a minute or less, these phone companies monoplizing phone service for prisons shoulld not be able to charge people 20 timee as much to talk to someone within a few hundred miles just because they are inside prison walls. That is adding unfair punishment outside the legal court jurisdiction.

Prison inmates should not have telephones, magazines or televisions for that matter. Inmates should have access to books that will help them continue their education.
Inmates should work to earn privileges and/or continue their education so they can be productive members of society. They should do such things as make license plates and grow their own food
Prison should be prison, 4 to a cell. Prison should be a a place that no one wants to go. As it is now, many gang members want to go to prison. It's not a bad life if you're already in a gang. You can be with your fellow gang members, learn to be a better criminal, and when you return to the general population, commit more crimes.
I'd say we should go back to the 3 strikes and your out. The third time a person is convicted of a crime, he or she should be sent to in prison for life with no chance of parole!

I have spent the last twenty-two years accepting calls from my stepson who has been in prison, first in Utah, and now in Nevada. I know how costly these calls can be, but thanks to my job as a community college instructor, I have been able to afford these calls. I can imagine how difficult and heartbreaking it must be for families of young children who cannot afford to accept a call from their loved ones who are incarcerated! The calls my son and I have shared over the years have sustained him to survive his sentence, and have comforted me during the holidays when my sons and I miss him the most. Therefore,I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

I support regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. It is discriminatory and abusive to charge massively higher fees on such calls for no other reason than that the prison industry rewards this practice. Please implement regulations that will set rates for calls to and from prisons at the same rates as any other calls.

I work in the mental health field where it is evidence based practice that a natural support system is the strongest, surest road to recovery. Inmates frequently struggle with long term mental, social, emotional health issues. Keeping them connected to supportive, positive influences on the outside is in society's best interest as well as the best interest of the inmates and families. I am in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Under the status quo, friends and family members are also being punished, arbitrarily, and this has to stop. I know this from first-hand experience. AT&T once tried collecting $60 from me, for a series of unanswered calls my message machine picked up, after I'd already told my incarcerated friend to stop calling me from prison. I refused to pay the bill and stood my ground until AT&T finally backed down. This is an abusive business practice; it is obscene, and we don't have to tolerate it. - Doro Reeves -

For most of my life my phone calls with my mother ended with an abrupt "I should go. This is costing an arm and a leg." Now, with easily available and affordable long distance plans, we talk for hours. But those are only available because I am not in prison. Charging $15 for a 15 minute phone call is insane. It limits the ability of children to have the necessary contact with their parents. Yes, the parents screwed up, but letting the kids get screwed over by the profiteering by the phone companies is wrong!

These families have done nothing wrong and should not be charged for the reverse calls of their loved ones at rates higher than any other citizen! I have seen rediculous charges billed in my work also with mental patients in a hospital being treated the same as prisoners in the correctional system. A phone call should cost the same for everyone!

Stop the insanity!
Prison phone calls should cost no more than any other local call. Prisons were not intended to be profit centers for vampire corporations.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. –When my husband was in jail, it was impossible for us to talk via the phone, simply because it cost too much. In fact, before I realized just how much it was costing me, the bill was SO high that I couldn't afford to pay it, and lost my phone service, until I could pay the bill off. In the end, I had to take a bus to visit, but would have to walk the 17 miles home, because the buses quit running, during visiting hours! A phone would of helped immensly!!!

Inmates must initiate the calls since family members cannot call them. I've had two friends call me regularly from prison. I could not have afforded it if California hadn't regulated the fees.
Since such calls are a huge boost to morale of both free and imprisoned citizens, I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please use California as a model (assuming they have not made negative changes in the last year), and implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

I feel that people in prison should have access to long distance service at the same prices the rest of us pay. Staying connected to their families and those they love must be a very important factor in reducing recidivism, and if we allow inmates to associate only with other inmates, it seems more likely that they will lose contact with the non-criminal world – a tragedy on so many levels for the convicts, their families, and society.

Cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. It surely cannot cost the company more to supply service to the prisons than other places. This is clearly taking advantage where there is an opportunity to take advantage. This is a perfect example of one of the reasons why "We the People" do not trust corporations. Perfect example.

Prisons should not be run with profit in mind, and charging onerous long-distance rates on calls to prisons is simply another way to isolate prisoners, economically and emotionally, to further separate them from the rest of society and to make their eventual reintroduction even more difficult. Regulate calls to prisons the same way that calls for the rest of us are regulated.

Indeed, at the Baltimore City Detention Center, the entire telephoning system, not just long distance, is a travesty. I paid $25 to talk with an inmate. We had one 15 minute local phone call, after which, I was told that my $25 was used up. I did not renew the contract. Since then, I have been receiving harassing phone calls from the company telling me I "must" pay. This is criminal, and I think, a violation of the inmate's civil rights, as well as an aggravation to me.

The rates charged for incarcerated persons are outrageous, and most unfairly high for a part of the population which tends not to have any money to begin with. If we want tose incarcerated to rehabilitate, doesn't it make sense for them to be able to stay in touch with their support system? If we want those who are incarcerated to feel connceted to society, to buy into society's norms, doesn't in make sense to fulfill their basic need of communicating with their loved ones, the people who can give them a sense of belonging? Further isolation those in prison does not make sense. And this is not to mention the affect on children who lose touch with their parents, parents who lose touch with their children. Please, stop letting the phone companies gouge those who have no one to speak up for them.

If you have to receive a call from a person incarcerated you must have a credit card and prepay for minutes that ypu may never use and these companies get the money. What the heck is wrong with having a cel phone? You cannot get these calls on them unless you do as explained above. I could not receive a call because I dont have a land line. Let's STOP the unregulated for PROFIT Prison Industry. Specifically the telecommunications services. Research data by the reams will show the importance of maintaining family connection during incarceration. Allowing unchecked profit taking in communications does result in higher recidivism rates, as families that are already economically stressed by the incarceration experience must choose to give up therapeutic communication.
Washington State has reasonable caps and limitations on communication providers - let's see this applied nationwide. For once - do the right thing.

If prisons still have any pretense of being about rehabilitation, it is crucial to allow inmates affordable access to phonecalls that support their family connections. Communications in prison almost certainly need rules by correction authorities, but they shouldn't be exploited by commercial interests.

What these companies are doing is some of the most disgusting cases of exploiting the vulnerable I have ever seen. Throw those phone company executives in prison for a while and charge them 100,000$/min to talk to their families. Suddenly, the fuckers might have a change of heart.

You need to stop the greedy bastards from pulling this devious slap in the face. MOST folks in jail are there for victim-less crimes anyway. The highest costs are always on the backs of the poor, always. It's bullshit!

The phone rates that apply for incarcerated citizens are criminal. It is a blatant and immoral form of financial extortion on American citizen who yes have broken our societies rules but are paying the cost by losing their freedom. The phone rates aren't the only thing that is over priced either cost of food and goods on the institutions commissary are also unfairly priced. If we truly wanted to reintegrate these citizen into society maybe we should start by not legally ripping them off at every turn

It seems to me that people who are incarserated need regular communication from the outside world. Communication from people important to them to keep prison from becoming an isolated, inward looking experience. Regulating these outragious phone rates is part of your mandate.
If we want to reduce recindivism we need to remind prisoners that there is a world out there and that there are people important to them.

I have firsthand experience with these predatory phone companies. My significant other was put in jail (for a crime he was never convicted of), but because of his immigration status he was forced to stay in jail for 4 months, after which he was deported.
I spent more than $1,000 having less than 1, 15 minute conversation with him per day for approx. the first 2 months. I was a graduate student at the time with no income, but luckily I had savings and a supportive family.
I simply CANNOT IMAGINE what hardship this would have caused for a person without savings, without a strong income, and without financial support from their family. How can we expect those in jail to be rehabilitated when they can't afford to speak to their loved ones? It's a system that penalizes poverty. It's disgusting, and it must stop.
Family members of incarcerated people have not committed a crime - they should not be financially penalized for the crimes of their family members (and in my case, there was no crime committed by the jailed party except for being in the country illegally).
Our country can and must do better for its people.

My brother-in-law was incarcerated a few years ago, and we were astounded and outraged at the high fees we had to pay to talk to him. Please regulate what the phone companies can charge so that families can stay in touch.

I have a long distance phone line with unlimited long distance calls at one low rate. Why can't they? It is time to collectively stop the profiteering on all fronts from those who can least afford it. this includes grocery chains who charge higher prices in lower income neighborhoods and gas stations - owned by the same oil companies we subsidize who also charge higher prices in lower socio-economic neighborhoods.

Many years ago I had an easily misdialed phone number and kept getting collect call requests from a local prison. Somehow I found out just how expensive it would be to accept the charges, and realized then and there how isolating the system was. That collect calls are expensive wasn't a surprise just now. That it's specifically even worse for prisoners is disgusting.

It is plain what a lack of competition can do, $1/minute is outrageous. In most cases these are poor people that really cannot afford it.

Exorbitant phone rates have nothing to do with the punishments legally incarcerated prisoners are serving. Please implement regulations that prevent phone companies from gouging prisoners–as well as their families, friends, and acquaintances–for simple phone calls, particularly via monopolistic arrangements that involve kickbacks to contracting agencies. This is yet another example of granting priority to economic interests to the detriment of individual citizens. Humans trump business.

Experts know that having regular calls and visits from family while incarcerated can make people far less likely to go back to prison. Considering the billions of dollars our states spend annually on incarceration, it is in the state's interest to ensure maximum contact with families.

First off, let's fine the prisons and/or publicly condemn the local or state officials who have condoned the practice of $1/min calls. This is an outrage. You canlimit the time for calls, but making extreme profits from it is literally criminal.
Second, establish caps on long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

The practice of excessive phone charges for incarcerated individuals is outrageous policy and inconsistent with strategies for successful reintegration of prisoners to their communities following incarceration, as ongoing contact with family is a positive incentive for rehabilitation and important for children and other family members. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Additionally, I recommend an investigation into the current contract arrangement to determine potential violations of trade laws and/or other criminal behavior in addition to what appears to be unethical and monopolistic practices.

I would suggest looking at what Missouri has done for the inmate phone system. As of about five years ago, when I left the systmm, the collect rates were down to about ten cents a minute, with, I believe, a twenty five cent connect fee. If the inmate placed the call and paid for it through the canteen system, it cost him ten cents a minute, and no connect fee.
That is a big change from what they were charging a few years earlier, with connect fees being between two and five dollars, and a dollar a minute after the first minute or two.

Pleas enact regulations to keep long-distance rates for incarcerated people in line with normal rates. A very large percentage of children and families of incarcerated people are living in poverty. Excessive corporate profit-taking and State commissions on monopoly prison phone calls are an unwarranted form of taxation on prisoners and their families, who can ill afford to pay. Experts know that having regular calls and visits from family while incarcerated can make people far less likely to go back to prison. Considering the billions of dollars our states spend annually on incarceration, the states would more than make up the difference on its commissions in reducing that prison return rate.

Speaking as the mother of a man who was incarated for several months, I must protest the unfair cost to speak with him. It fell to me to care for his business with his lawyer, with his landlord and with his medical carers as he is disabled with a serious heart condition. To pay the outrageous phone rates to talk to him was a difficult financial problem that seems totally Unfair for family members to pay since I was not in jail, but in order to support him I had to pay this unconscionable charge. Please do what you can to change this matter!

PLEASE CHANGE THIS! My family has had to pay the insane price of talking a loved one while he was in jail. Fortunately, we were able to do so and he is now doing amazing things with his life since getting out. But so many people can't afford to make that difference in the lives of their loved ones.

This is wrong. We need to make communications between prisoners and their families/friends easy because they will someday be out of prison and need that connection to a community. It is obscene to run up the calling charges.

I urge the FCC to establish regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. When my own brother was in prison, it was not possible for me to call him at my lower rates. I had to wait until he called me at exorbitant rates. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I think it is unfair and even immoral because families are at the mercy of these phone companies. It is time that it was stopped.

Do the children of incarcerated men and women have to be even further cut off from their parents? By phone companies charging ridiculously high amounts per minute for phone calls, that's essentially what's happening.
These kids don't need to suffer any more than they already do. What this does is punish the kids for the deeds of the parents.
I strongly recommend the FCC regulate this unethical practice by capping long distance charges for prison phone calls.

It is inhumane and despicable for companies to gouge people who have no alternative. That is not capitalism in action, it is ugly, indecent greed. The effects of this policy are felt by the incarcerated persons, clearly, but it is the families, especially the children, who bear the brunt of it. The families have to buy overpriced commissary cards (also high fees) to put minutes on a special phone card or account, at outrageous per minute rates, just so a child can hear his parent's voice and not forget who Mom or Dad is. There is a word for profiteering like that: Obscene. Damaging the rleationships of these parents and children also drives recidivism rates up, as study after study have cited a strong relationship with family prevents reoffending.
Do the right thing - rein in these abuses.

Calls made from prisons to families should be free!! For profit anything is ethically wrong in a jail or prison. Inmates should at the very least be able to speak to their children without limitation. For that matter VoIP video calls should be enabled for all inmates to help mitigate stress to families caused by incarceration. If rehabilitation is even a minor goal free video conferencing is a no-brainer.

It's hard enough on children to have a parent in prison, but to have to pay exorbitant phone rates could make it difficult for families who are trying to stay together. Telephone companies certainly can reduce the fees they charge.

The phone companies shouldn't be allowed to gouge inmates. If they have family that can and will talk to them in prison, then they should be able to make at least a phone call to family. They need all the support available and the phone companies are just taking advantage of a bad situation and making it worse. Where does conscience end and greed start?

I think it is counterproductive, putting it mildly, to have policies like this, which increase recidivism - prisoners with social and family support are less like to reoffend. It's time to actually support attempts to lessen recidivism like this. I realize inmates - and their families - are a "captive audience" literally and figuratively, but allowing phone companies to charge inmates exorbitant prices is counterproductive to the point of the judicial system.

If you do nothing else right away, please make it inexpensive for children and grandchildren of inmates to call and for anyone economically challenged, with the mere fact that they receive Food Stamps as evidence enough so that they can show up at any probation office to be added to an "inexpensive list" and a special number to call to get an inexpensive rate.

Can also be local calls from local jail and still get charged ridiculous rates.
This is nothing more than companies taking advantage of a human being misfortune. It's plan and simply not right and should be stopped.

Regulations are needed to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. The FCC's implementing regulations to allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates would do much to heal the wounds of innocent families injured by the incarceration of one of their members, and would also do much for the rehabilitation of those incarcerated. But for the FCC not to act in this matter would be to wink at predatory behavior on the part of telecommunications companies that is criminal in all but name. It must be stopped.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. The excessive costs for telephone contact with anyone arrested, let alone convicted, is nothing short of criminal. My son was arrested in Tennessee and a short three minute phone call from him to his mother cost $16.00 and could only be charged to a credit card. It took several calls before we could arrange a lawyer and gain bail. The charges are outrageous and discriminate against poor people.

I support regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry and strongly suggest that they be adopted.
As a former prosecutor, I know how important it is for prisoners to be able to keep in touch with their families and other loved ones.
A friend of mine, an older woman living on social security, was forced to pay an exorbitant amount to keeping in touch with her grandson, who has no other family, and was in jail on a probation violation.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I feel the privatization of the prison system has moved the focus away from rehabilitating criminals into productive members of society and twords were housing inmates and making as much money off them as they can. Ultimately it is tax payers like me who have to pay to subsidize these programs without an end result to show for it. Please start trimming the fat and push for programs that show real rehabilitation.

The rates should be no different than a pay phone out on the street, same as everyone else would pay to use a publicly available pay phone. The prison system administrators should ensure it and demand nothing less.
In fact, why is there a charge in the first place today with unlimited minutes? The prisons could use VOIP and a software timer or the like to limit per inmate usage and ensure that all have access.

I suppose you could make an argument that prisoners are prisoners for a reason, and they should not be "coddled" and should be punished, and talking to their families is a privilege....maybe, maybe not. But you can NOT make an argument that the FAMILIES of incarcerated people should be economically punished for wanting to hear the voices of their incarcerated family members. Get real and make these phone calls reasonable. A prisoner in touch with their families is an investment in society's future.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. There is no need for the possible rates that will be charged without regulation. The cost of this service is no more than providing residential service. Reformed states have shown that is its possible for these state prisons to continue operating without accepting commissions from prison phone companies. States should no longer continue to place short-term profits over the long-term harms of burdening families with high costs. The time to end the exploitation of families is now. A child with a parent behind bars deserves to hear their voice. I urge you to resolve this issue immediately.

I am extremely in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Sometimes a phone call is the only way a person can keep in touch with an incarcerated loved one and if the cost is too expensive it can cause phone calls to be few and far between.

Incarceration should not result in financial abuse of prisoners and their families.
Please regulate the long distance services and rates in the prison phone industry.
It's incredibly sad that we have basically given these people over as victims to unchecked monopolies, who then abuse them financially, which is very likely to contribute to recidivism.

I find it appalling for phone companies to be allowed to financially exploit members of society coming to the aid of family members or friends that are incarcerated. I work directly with many men and women who suffer severely from the failure by the FCC to regulate the prison phone industry up to now. I welcome this step, and am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

To me, this is no laughing matter. My mother was incarcerated for 2 yrs., and I spent hundreds of extra dollars just to try and keep up her spirits, which was necessary, as she was self-destructive, mentally damaged and at times suicidal. I could not even speak to her for almost ONE MONTH because of the archaic, prepay setup system, with the only phone company that handled all calls coming into the institution. Simply put, I should not be punished for my mother's crimes, and she may have been found guilty, but the system should punish within regulated guidelines. Please regulate this industry immediately, and stop the horrible situations from continuously occurring.

Schools and businesses do not get dinged with enormous rates for sophisticated systems. There is no reason that prisons should be different. There has to be some political involvement that has allowed something like this. Kick backs and political favors need to be looked for in something as unfair and grossly overpriced as this.
I assume that this has come from those who believe in the "kick a man when he is down" philosophy.

I was shocked to hear these rates. I thought Massachusetts was bad with 20 minutes for $3.00! It is so important for those on the inside to keep in touch with those on the outside. It helps to ease the transition back to the outside and keeps those on the outside from the constant worry about terrible things happening to their loved ones. Please stop people from making obscene amounts of money off the misery of families who are supportive of their incarcerated loved ones so that they can be successful once they are back out.

It's disgusting that these companies are allowed to gouge their 'customers' because they have no alternative if they want to contact loved ones.
If you count the amounts that are being stolen by ridiculously overcharging you might consider that these companies are more guilty than their incarcerated victims.

I am in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. It is not the loved ones who have committed the crime. Additionally, speaking to family members may give an incarcerated person a greater motivation for personal change, and reason to strive for early leave due to good behavior.

It seems that prison phone companies provide a terrible advertisement for the free market - taking advantage of the monopoly position granted them to charge prisoners and their families super high instead of specially discounted rates to speak to and thus maintain links with their loved ones while in prison.I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

I read this petition and strongly disagree with the intention of the petition. Companies need to make money and being incarcerated is no ones fault but your own. Everyone is responsible for their actions do if someone ends up in jail and want to hear from their loved ones, then they should pay whatever means to do so or write a letter. This should also serve as a lesson for children who are affected by parents being in jail. Lesson is "don't go to jail". It's sad but it's reality. People should be grateful that such services even exist and if they want to use them, they have to pay for them. I've had family who have been in jail and prison and have also paid these outrageous fees so no sympathy from me. Pay the fees or don't go to jail.

Just because people are prisoners and are poor is NOT an excuse for gouging them. Moreover, a very high percentage are black thus continuing bondage by another name – other than slavery, of course.

ALSO I ACCEPTED A COLLECT CALL FROM A DEAR FRIEND FROM THE YAVAPAI REGIONAL HOSPITAL, IN PRESCOTT ARIZONA. SHE WANTED TO TELL ME SHE WAS IN THE HOSPITAL ! LOCATED 35 MILES FROM WHERE I LIVE. I TALKED TO CENTURY LINK MY PHONE SERVICE, THEY SAID IT WAS A "PRIVATE COMPANY" THEY CHARGED ME 30 DOLLARS FOR 5 MINUTES.FROM THE HOSPITAL? I BELIEVE BOTH RATES ARE OUTRAGEOUS AND ARE HURTING PEOPLE WHO ARE JUST TRYING TO HELP OTHERS.

As an advocate for inmates in PA state prisons during the early 90's, I was always appalled to learn that there were HIGHER rates charged to inmates for collect phone calls they made to their families. So who is also getting this burden? Family members and friends willing to accept the collect calls. This is an obscene policy of the phoen companies. As for the incarcerated individuals–if they are fortunate to get a job behind bars–they make only $.33/an hour. Inmates must pay for everything in prison beginning with visiting a prison infirmary for treatment.

I strongly favor regulation of fees charged to prisoners for phone calls. Phone companies are not policing themselves. I work with people whose family members are in prison. I know that one of the best prevention of recidivism is keeping prisoners connected with their families. A big barrier to that is the exorbitant extortion phone companies make from high prison phone rates. I could give you names of low-income people who give up food so they can pay phone bills of their imprisoned loved ones. Taking so much money away from people who have little to begin with is as morally wrong as some of the behaviors people are imprisoned for.

The fact that someone is incarcerated should not prohibit them from being able to stay in touch with their friends and family. The prison system in general is failing in this country, as we incarcerate more people than any other first-world nation. The FCC has a chance to make sure that our prison system becomes a little more humane in this one regard, and I think that they should take advantage of this opportunity. It affects the bigger question of what our justice system is about: rehabilitation or mere punishment?

When you are making these regulations remember that being imprisoned is the punishment for a crime. Families and loved ones of an incarcerated person should not have to choose between keeping in touch (which reduces recidivism) and paying their bills. This has gone on long enough. It is time to end the unfair practice of forcing these families to pay an extra "tax" to fund the prisons.

The way some get around this is to get a cell phone with a number that isn't long distance. This however doesn't charge a large fee but it does still charge a local call fee and the monthly charge for the cell phone. The money spent should be on helping the inmates!

I have taught in local prisons for the last 20 years and know how important it is for inmates to remain in touch with their children and other family members. This increases their ability to function outside the prison once they are released (as the majority will be). It is all of our interest to ensure their chances of doing well after serving their time.

I have always been shocked by the outrageous sums that the prison phone industry charges inmates for the use of the telephone. Ready, inexpensive access to the phone should be available to all prisoners and their families. Why should they pay more than the general public?!
There should be strict regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. I urge you to take action and allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

Children should be able to talk with their parents, even if the parents are incarcerated. These high rates are a punishment for those who have done nothing wrong, not for those in the prisons. The fact that private companies are profiting from it makes this that much worse.
Please enact regulations to put a stop to these ridiculous rates.

Please require phone companies that serve prisons to charge the same rates that other citizens pay for phone service. I have known several families that needed a fundraiser organized by friends, so they could afford to stay in contact with their family member who was in jail. It put an enormous financial hardship on these families & added another level of stress & anxiety for them! It cruelly penalizes & punishes the family of these incarerated family members.

And on a very personal note, we (family members) are not the ones incarcerated and should not be treated as though we are. When phone companies charge outrageous and astronomical fees they are treating us like inmates and treating the love we have for our incarcerated loved ones as a pawn in their bid to make profit. I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I have been aware of telephone profiteering in CA and now in LA while doing outreach and find the profiteering reaching new heights with phone cards, basic necessities etc. having to be purchased through a "company store" with a captive audience. It is shameful and destructive to society and rehabilitation of prisoners. You have the power to take a small step against predatory practices. Please do.

We shouldn't penalize the family members of prisoners. Also, experts know that having regular calls and visits from family while incarcerated can make people far less likely to go back to prison so it makes sense to keep rates affordable.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I am in disbelief that I had family members pay these rates to talk to a loved one while incarcerated. These are middle class families who work hard and shouldn't be punished because their father, son or spouse did something selfish or idiotic.

They let the person call collect, but then the online method requires a payment of almost $10 to even get service. Then if the prisoner is released before the money is used up, it's not refundable. The charges are just outrageous.

American society gains NOTHING through the privatization of our prisons. When jails are money making ventures what inventive do the jailers have to rehab the inmates???
Voice contact with the outside can help motivate inmates to get and stay on the path to being a better person.
Why can't people "donate" unused cell phone minutes to inmates to cover the expense of the calls?

These people may have broken the law and are now serving their sentences. However, the criminal acts of these phone companies is presently going unpunished. It's time THEY be charged and held accountable for their "criminal" deeds.

There has, for decades, been a so-called tax the phone companies charged to pay for making normal fee phones available to remote areas. We are all still paying that. Why does it not cover this, or is this simple GREED on the part of government and vendors?

I spend so much money on phone calls to keep in touch with my husband who is only awaiting trial (not even convicted). I cannot travel to see him due to disability and I'm on a fixed income. It would help a lot to have new regulations so the cost is in line with the normal telephone rates.

I am dedicated to the idea of teh FCC enacting regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.
As someone who regularly works in San Quentin Prison with the mainline prisoners, I am extremely aware that contact with family is one of the key things that make an incarcerated person think about an alternative lifestyle, should they get out. I am convinced easy communication with family allows prisoners to help establish conditions and situations for their release that results in less recidivism, because of their closeness to their family and the understanding of the stakes of re-violation.
Please help our correctional facilities do their jobs and help get prisoners ready for successful re-entry to society in a loving and supportive atmosphere by making communication during their time of incarceration less of a burden.
Thank you.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. They're incarsirated loved ones are paying their debt to society & the only way to get the circle to become broken is to stop the high charges from accruing so that they can speak with their loved ones at affordable rates.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I personally have had to deal with this problem as my adult son was in prison. I mistakenly chose Jail Call Services,eventhough I heard the usual prison phone systems were unfair this company I dealt with was just a scam. I got no service at all. When icancelled igot no refund. this has just happened recently.
Again please stop yhis exploitation of the loved ones of prisoners.

Privatization of a market which completely controls someone's everyday life is combining the worst of capitalism and communism. Not only does the United States imprison many more of its citizens than any other country in the world for non-violent crimes, but we also imprison these individuals for longer sentences. Companies who take advantage of this for their financial gain need to be highly regulated; the affected have no say or vote in what becomes of them. Most of the convicted deserve their sentence - but they should not be denied phone calls based on their inability to pay when the only source of income for many tops out at 75 cents a day.
This is putting an even larger divide between the imprisoned and everyday society, and considering many current prisoners will be released at one point or another, rehabilitation should be top priority. Please, regulate these phone companies for the betterment of families with convicted loved ones serving time.

i spent $450 over several months trying to get my brother-in-law an attorney, social worker and other legal assistance. he still spent 8 years in prison and was moved around like a pawn-when he finally got out, it was determined that he should not have ever been incarcerated in the first place...he's out 8 years of his life, i'm out 450 dollars and the private system is just fatter and more uncaring,bestial even in it's profiteering on the misery and devastation of people's lives. there is a day of rekoning coming for these scabs, and soon...

Regular calls and visits from family while incarcerated can make people far less likely to go back to prison. Considering the billions of dollars our states spend annually on incarceration, it is in the state's interest to ensure maximum contact with families.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I would think to cut down on the violence in prisons phone calls from loved ones would help the prisoners be more calm and they would cause less problems. Children need to talk to their fathers and uncles or mothers to know that they are loved even though that person is not living with them. Hopefully that will kept the children on the straight and narrow and direct their lives on the side of good instead of illegal activities. Thank You for helping to correct this problem.

PLEASE pass regulations that cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. I have volunteered in prisons doing nonviolence workshops. Contact with family is a crucial part of rehabilitation...and with massive funding cuts, there is precious little devoted to rehabilitation of any kind. We volunteers are the only program in many prisons; restricting phone time reduces rehabilitation chances even further. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

i have worked as a psychiatrist for the california department of corrections and rehabilitation for eight years. my work has taken me to some of the prisons and the section of the prison that have been shown on tv. the corcoran shu [hole to inmates] was my last assignment.
the less difficult prisoner's have occasional access to a telephone. the more privileged of this group might have a job paying 19 cents an hour when work is available.
their life stories are unbelievable. there isn't money to pay for a telephone call. what about birthdays, mother's day, father's etc, assuming they have children, a living mother and a known father who is not is prison.
the fcc needs to reexamine these rates. a reasonable profit is ok. theft is not ok.
of course these families are part of the 47% who have no value to the big bucks companies. these families need contact with one another in the hopes this will discourage the next generation from entering prison. these prison beds cost the state between $ 40,000 to $200,000/yr depending upon the level of security required. the next generation in prison is usually there earlier and for a much worse crime. the family value is 'you're going to be a murderer just like your father.' access to the telephone might save the taxpayers a lot of money and probably save you some too. jody

How is it in a world where national long distance calling doesn't even exist anymore that these rates apply to those who are incarcerated? I get it, they're in prison, BUT they still need to speak to their attorneys regarding appeals and ongoing motions and updates with their cases - THIS IS PIRACY and it is filthy. Imagine if YOU were imprisoned wrongfully and couldn't get in touch with an attorney or your loved ones to rally to your defense; disgusting! Imprisonment without recourse? Of course, many convicted criminals are indeed guilty, but what about the percentage of innocent people who wind up behind bars? This type of gouging must be brought to an end, if for no other reason than to ensure that those in pursuit of justice will be able to find it.

The idea that just because a man or a woman has been imprisoned means that they should be forced into isolation from their family because of the high cost of making these phone calls is riduclous. make it reasonable. more expensive than a regular phone call? sure, a little– the cost of maintaining those phones is undoubtably higher than a regular pay phone. but a dollar a minute? that is ridiculous.

With prison populations exploding due to increasingly-non-violent crimes earning federal prison sentences, it is ever more imperative to find better ways to truly rehabilitate prisoners into becoming law-abiding citizens. Preventing them from speaking with family members does the opposite because it strengthens the disconnect between prison life and the outside world.

I support the effort to bring long distance rates for people incarcerated in line with normal consumer rates. I taught in an urban school for 20 years: many of my students had a parent in prison; almost always for a drug crime. For the sake of rehabilitating the offender; for the sake of the families: I support this effort.
