I want to address this personally as I was arrested mistakenly, (it was later dismissed), but this more than just being considerate. I wasn't able to contact anyone easily for hours due to the difficulty of the phone system along with the cost. I had to spend the night in jail and no one knew where I was. This is a civil rights issue as well.

I am involved in a prison ministry & I would like to inform you & the world; ALL PRISONERS ARE NOT BAD PEOPLE! The only difference between some of "them" & many of"us', is they were caught & we were not. A phone call to loved ones is important to all. Please, make tellephone companies be fair. thank you & God Bless the USA.

It's terribly wrong that phone companies have been allowed to profit from prison calls as much as they have. Children need to be in touch with incarcerated parents and siblings, and prisoners need to maintain contacts with families in order to re-enter their communities successfully when their sentence is over. It's vital that we cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that allow family members to speak to incarcerated loved ones without paying exorbitant rates.

I've had personal experience with this, having had two close friends who did prison time. In my case, I could afford to be charged $5 for a 5 minute phone call, but plenty of people can't.
The companies that provide phone service for prisoners are effectively monopolies. They need to be required to charge reasonable rates.

I am not sure why prison phone companies should charge any more than the rates outside of prison. The whole private prison scene is going to implode on us pretty soon, and this phone overcharging is just another symptom of what business will do when it can find a helpless population. I suppose the lobbies get the ear of politicians and that's why the FCC doesn't act. I think you should act and establish some fairness in the system.

I believe that these phone charges are doing nothing but punishing family members and further punishing the inmates. It is essentially putting a price on the support they need from people who care about them. Everyone deserves to be able to communicate with their loved ones and not have to worry about paying more than the rest of the populus.

Phone rates are only one way in which the prisons gouge their captive market, namely the families of the incarcerated. Often the families are already suffering financial hardships because the incarcerated person was contributing the largest portion of support for the family before being incarcerated.

This is contemptible! The connection with family can make a huge difference in how a person returns to the outside world. It can make an equally important difference in the lives of children. Those who have been allowed to maintain close ties with their parent will do much better during the separation and after their parent returns home.

As an attorney, I have long thought that the fees charged to make calls into and out of prisons were OUTRAGEOUS. It's like a contract of adhesion – something that people are forced to put up with because of the overwhelming power of the entity that controls something they need.
Phone service these days has become a public utility. We don't let public utilities gouge people. I cannot encourage the FCC strongly enough to force the phone companies to stop charging more for calls to inmates. It's cruel, wrong, and BAD for our society as a whole. We want to encourage families, parents and children to maintain strong bonds whenever possible. We also want to rehabilitate prisoners. And we want to promote mental health. These efforts benefit from fair and reasonable phone charges, and are hurt by unreasonable, excess charges.
There should not be a "prison phone industry." There should be phone service that is competitive, and not one that is allowed to profit from a captive audience. This has gone on far too long!
Pass regulations that do not allow profits from a captive audience!

The folks who are incarcerated are serving the sentences for their crimes; adding this additional burden that robs them of time with loved ones is unkind. How will we encourage others to live justly and to love mercy if we are not just and merciful in even the little things like phone charges? Please change this as soon as possible.

People in prison and jails should not have to pay to comunicate with the family and loved ones while incarcerated, and is a right akin to food and health care. The state should subsidize this right, and not charge the prisoners themselves.

Staying in touch with loved ones is important for people who are incarcerated. These are their support base that they will need when released in order to integrate themselves successfully in society. Making such communication expensive precludes such interactions for many inmates. Since inmates are a captive consumer, these prices need to be regulated. Thus, I think it better for society as a whole that regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry be implemented so that important communication between inmates and family members is encouraged. Please implement regulations so that communication costs are affordable. Inmates NEED to communicate with their family members and loved ones.

It is both criminal and opportunistic to have this practice. I once spent more than 60 dollars for 2 calls of less than one minute. It's ironic that it was to call a jail, as this crime should be a felony.

$1 a minute for prison phone calls is obscene. The FCC should be regulating this; that is what it is here for. The profiteering that goes on around the prison industry is making me sick. It's not surprising that so many Americans are in prison and that so much normal behavior gets criminalized - at $1/minute, someone is making a tidy profit from it.
The FCC should be doing its job and regulating this behavior.

Having in prison as a therapist, I know the value of the connection a child can keep with an incarcerated parent when the child can hear that parent's voice. I understand profits but at the expense of the most vulnerable - not the inmates, for they must pay for their crimes - but their families left behind who are often far away, of low income, and deprived of any income that family member may bring we're they not incarcerated, end up bearing the cost of the call. Thank you for considering a way to make these costs more in line with everyone else who is not incarcerated.

It is shameful that these companies are granted not only a monopolistic license to serve these markets, but they are allowed to charge such extortionate rates from people who mostly can not really afford it. You are penalizing the families of the incarcerated as much as the criminals". I put that in quotes because many of the people in jail have not been tried yet

There is absolutely NO justification for charging these citizens one penny more than anyone else. And, given that maintaining family bonds has been shown to REDUCE RECIDIVISM, we should probably be encouraging more phone calls by offering a better rate than the general population gets. It's just common sense.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. People in prison are already paying a price for their crimes. Why should they be punished in additional ways? We should think of the innocent family members who are cruelly punished. Imagine a child not understanding why he/she can't speak to Mommy or Daddy for a long period of time due to the unnecessarily high rates charged in prisons. Human rights should be held as more important than the profits of corporations.

It is amazing that the prisons and phone companies have been getting away with charging these outrageous fees. This has precluded many children from speaking to parents, siblings from connecting with one another as well as spouses being denied time to communicate. Change the policy PLEASE so that families can communicate. Like Mr. Walton said, 1% of a 100 = 100%. For this reason the more folks who are able to call the more money the prison/ phone companies will make.
Let's put a program into effect that works for everyone.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Even without a family member in prison I do have other friends and I could perhaps try to help them but not at the existing exhorbitant rates. I have been charged $25.00 for 5 minutes of talk time with a young friend in jail who I am trying to help. That is outrageous, especially with VOIP capabilities now. At home I only pay about $10.00 per month for unlimited calls - local and long distance.

After having worked in a State prison, I was appalled at the exhorbitant cost and carrier restrictions placed upon the inmate to make a call to family, lawyer, housing agency. High cost does not prevent" contact for the purpose of criminal activity. They have other ways of making those arrangements. What exists is a profit making venture that is abusive to an inmate's human right. I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. It is an upsurdity that this practice is not already illegal. It is discriminatory, and makes a bad situation for the families of inmates worse. There is a word for this practice: EXTORTION. Make the correct moral decision and make this practice illegal and bring the rates down to market price plus a maximum of 10% for equipment involved.
Thank you for your attention and compassion in this matter.

These phone rates are a travesty. They work directly against the kind of social connections that help prevent recidivism. We should be making calls from family free, or at least at the same rates as regular long-distance calls.

Individuals make bad choices. Both men and women are in prison for many different reasons and they have loved ones that still love them and are innocent victims. Stop the greed, and give them access to phone calls at reasonable rates.

The fact that certain companies are given a monopoly on phone services between incarcerated persons and there loved ones is appalling. The fact that they are allowed to charge rates far above the going rate is also appalling. At the present time it is possible to call China from the U.S.A. at a rate of $ 0.01 per minute yet the incarcerated and there families are being charged $1.00 per minute and more, this is shameful, dishonest and criminal! The people who allowed and continue to support this monopoly on phone conversations between the incarcerated and there loved ones should be placed in jail as there actions are criminal and anti american. These companies obviously lobbied and spent millions to gain these lucrative monopolies that rob, cheat and steal billions from the poor and disadvantaged.
These practices must change and soon! Reasonable competitive rate structures must be available for all Americans, even the incarcerated. The predatory greed that is being allowed on a captive" population must stop.

Please regulate the rates of call costs for families phoning inmates of prisons, to bring them into line with regular call costs. Not to do so is inhumane in view of the fact that such families are often people in poverty, and socially imprudent in view of the fact that keeping in touch with their families while in prison reduces the likelihood of inmates re-offending once released.

I found out first hand how outrageous these charges are–and I'm just talking about local calls, not even long distance when my brother was incarcerated for a few months. I had had no idea that these calls were controlled by private prison phone companies". It's not the prisoners that pay for these calls and are being punished–it's their families and the children. The jail where my brother was only allowed a 2-hr window per week on an assigned day for visits

This is wrong and needs to be addressed. People in prison are already being punished by being incarcerated. Charging their families higher phone rates could mean that they don't receive that bit of positive reinforcement that they need and the chance to stay connected to loved ones on the outside; that little ray of cheerfulness, goodness and hope in an otherwise dreary day. This is just another example of predatory corporate greed. Please lower the prison phone rates...have a heart!

It is high time that the ttelephone charges made for folks within prisons to talk with friends and relatives and loved ones outside of the prison, be made comparable with those long distance or regular service area charges that we pay as average citizens of this nation. I strongly support efforts to have the FCC properly regulate the telephone companies who service prisons.

Let us have the courage and decency to put people before profits and allow caps on long distance charges in the prison phone industry. The current lack of regulation is preventing family members from speaking to their incarcerated loved ones who need their love and support. It is time we start treating prisoners with dignity and stop treating their family and friends as if they were also convicted. Please act on limiting the phone companies ability to charge unreasonable rates to those who can least afford it. Thank you.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. My concern would be that inmates would keep in touch more cheaply with friends/gang members who are also lawbreakers but these people should certainly be able to talk to their children and families at affordable rates. Maybe they could get better rates when they call one of two phone numbers or something like that. This really does need to be changed though. These kids may be able to avoid some of the same mistakes with more parental involvement.

As a law student, I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Through studying the law it has become clear to me that when people are incarcerated the sentence is handed down by the judge alone. Additional burdens and regulations - such as forcing their families to pay these costs and forcing the individual to be far from their family - undermines our justice system. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. The impact of these costs on people's children and loves ones affects us all.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. I have seen first hand how difficult and cut off an inmate can feel and how family members struggle to afford the high cost of communicating with their loved ones. Experts say that regular calls and visits from family while incarcerated can make people far less likely to go back to prison. It seems obvious that when inmates are able to stay in touch with loved ones, they won't feel so out of touch when they get out. This should lead to them being a better parent and spouse. Please consider our request as it affects so many people. It is truly more important to try to help people to be better people and to keep them out of prison than to punish them with high prices or to try to gain a profit off of them.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Connecting the incarcerated with loved ones may be a link that brings the marginalized to acceptance and ability in society, where depriving these souls from the opportunity to connect with loved ones will undoubtedly feed their misunderstanding hunger for acceptance and seek means that are feared by the very companies that deprive them. Once again, please regulate the calling rates to restore humanity to all peoples.

As a public defender in New York City and a believer in restorative justice and the pervasive ability of human change and rehabilitation, I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. It is a wide known fact that having one parent incarcerated renders a child 90% more likely to be incarcerated in the future. The logical conclusion is that a parent's absence due to incarceration is felt in long-lasting and detrimental ways. Regulating the monopolized prison phone company sector is an important step in allowing families to remain united. And familial support and contact is instrumental in rehabilitative change. If the goals of our penal system remain two-fold, to punish and rehabilitate; we must regulate companies that block the rehabilitative aspect of the system. Please regulate the phone companies that operate in our nation's prisons and jails. Force these companies to charge reasonable rates and to cease preying upon incarcerated individuals and their families.

Several years ago, one of these telephone companies tried to charge me $11 when an inmate in another state mistakenly dialed my number; I as not home; I was supposed to press a number to reject or accept the call, and I was not home to do that. Nevertheless, I was charged $11. I had to complain to the FCC before the company reimbursed me.

As we work to rehabilitate individuals who have broken our laws supporting, limited involvement with their family seems important. Inmates are incarcerated most commonly for doing things that are either harmful to their selves, or others. In most cases their family members are completely uninvolved in the actions that led up to their punishment. Encouraging family to remain involved with the inmate through limited visits and calls is the morally correct thing to do. It also ensures that the inmate has a family support system once he is released. I'm sure that when the prison system was designing protocol for visits and calls both these concepts played an important role in determining rather or not they would be allowed access to family. So if there is a benefit or a moral obligation why on earth would we turn a blind eye to any organization price gouging the family members? Limit calls, Limit call times, Limit access, Limit who they may call and do the right thing and limit any company's ability to charge an innocent person or family member an inappropriate price. Is simply not right!

While phone companies deserve a reasonable profit aligned with costs of providing service, neither the companies nor their shareholders and executives deserve exorbitant returns from single-source contracts that exploit the most vulnerable.

When I practiced law and defended those who were incarcerated, one of the most shameful practices of our legal systems is to allow the families of inmates to be charged exorbitant prices for the opportunity to talk to their loved ones behind bars. This is a huge financial imposition on families that have already raised money for bonds and attorneys, and often are below the poverty line in any event. This practice must be stopped.

I support regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Family members of the incarcerated should not also be punished by being forced to pay upwards of $1/minute to speak with their loved ones. Don't let the prison phone companies exploit the often low-income family members of the incarcerated.
Thank you.

Most of our prisons are filled with low-income people and it's really unconscionable that they would be charged so much for long distance phone service. I pay $0.05/minute. I see no reason someone in prison ought to pay $1.00 for the same minute. The only ones profiting are the ones providing the service and they're taking advantage of people who have no option. That's called a monopoly and in the greater world, we have legislation that limits monopolies. Please do the right thing and implement and enforce regulations.

My husband was incarcerated for 3 months in NC and what a SHOCK it was to find out how ridiculously expensive it was to talk to him for 10 minutes. This is similar to usery and should be against the law. The cost of a phone call per minute should be NO different than standard rates as they are being paid by people who are not in the penal system but are being penalized by it. It is outragageous that this monopoly has been allowed for as long as it has. I am one of the thousands perhaps millions who has been subjected to this and have had to give up necessities just to be able to talk to my son who is a non violent. Though alcoholism is recognized as a disease, and though NO inflicted injury, is now being branded as a felonious criminal. The inmate population in this country has risen 279% in the last five years housing a full 25 % of the WORLD's population due to several states changing laws to harsher penalties that have no similar comparisons in other countries. Prisons have become a business with privateers where regular people who should be in a rehab are now in a prison, they could be your friend, your family, or you, if you are unfortunate to have an addiction that is now being treated as a crime. But real crime is letting the true innocents, the families if the inmate pay the price. Take action!!!.. and perhaps change an inmates life by providing them with the family support they need to believe they can and will use this lesson to grow from it towards a better self worth and truly realizing the actions of consequence and the power of choice.

Having recently assisted a friend who was stuck in jail awaiting trial, I can attest to the outragous phone rates imposed by the phone companies given exclusive rights in local jails. They have a deleterious effect on a prisoner's ability to prepare an adequate defense and maintain the contacts needed to survive while incarcerated and after release.

Children have no responsibility regarding the incarceration of their parents. These children should not have to pay an emotional price to communicate with a mom or dad who is already probably impoverished. And, the parents should be able to afford to speak with their offspring without being exploited. The goodness of a person cannot be be defined by only one deviant action or trait which is frequently the result of an unjust society in the first place.

Please take action to stop the usurious practice of price gouging via a literal captive customer base. The poorest families are punished by greedy phone company executives for the crime of wanting to communicate with their loved ones. If rates are capped at a reasonable and affordable level, children and other loved ones will not be prevented from receiving the comfort of a simple phone call.

Many people in prison are transferred to locations far from their families. Phone calls are the only link they have to keep in contact. Immigrants in ICE detention are especially hard hit, as they are moved from facility to facility and need to make arrangements for their children in case of deportation, without right of access to counsel.

Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. This is for the children's sake. It is hard enough that they have to live with the outcomes of their parent's incarceration , which is being shown to amount to wrongful imprisonment in many cases. Please allow them to talk over the phone at a reasonable rate that doesn't bankrupt their already strapped remaining parent or caregiver .

High phone call rates mean less time talking to family. Prisoners should serve their time but they should be able to talk to their families.
We want these men to keep connection with their kids and be fathers when the leave prison. If they can only talk a short time how can they keep being a dad?
Regulate prison call rates to make sure the rates are reasonable. No more than 20cents a minute for calls in the USA.

Prisoners and their family members should be able to communicate by phone at reasonable rates. Such families should be encouraged to love, include and help those who are in prison, not reject or penalize them even further. Please support reasonable charges for telephone calls for those in prison.

Inmates are already paying their price. They should not be gouged for trying to maintain some human contact with loved ones while they are incarcerated. Helping them keep those connections is not only humane towards them; it helps us all to ensure that when they come out, they will have families and a support network to go to. I am, therefore, in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

I support regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Experts know that having regular calls and visits from family while incarcerated can make people far less likely to go back to prison. Considering the billions of dollars our states spend annually on incarceration, it is in the state's interest to ensure maximum contact with families.

I was horrified to learn of the extreme rates imposed on prison inmates and their families for phone calls. In this day and age when most of us can talk for free by internet, or at least very cheaply by phone, to be sending these people back to a situation where speaking at long distance is a luxury as it was when I was a child seem needlessly cruel.
Therefore, I am in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates.

Please regulate the charges that phone companies can impose on the incarcerated and their families. I know from experience how deeply important it is to keep in touch with jailed people by voice, especially long-distance. Families that can't afford to make costly visiting trips can't afford costly phone calls, either. Overcharging the prison community is unethical; overcharging a population that skews to the impoverished and has little or no recourse is really dastardly and should be stopped. Thank you very much for listening.

Statistics show that people who remain in contact with a loved one while incarcerated have lower recidivism rates. Unfortunatly for many inmates their love ones cannot afford to visit on a regular bases. Letters and telephone calls are the main method used for remaining in contact with each other. While letter are nice, hearing that loves ones voice is uplifting. Children do not get the "thrill" that an adult gets from reading a letter from a loved one. Children need to talk with their parent. Please enacted regulations that will limit how much telephone companies can charge for correctional calls. These families are already hurting finically because of the loss of income provided by the incarcerated person. To have to pay telephone companies over-charged rates to talk to a love one increases the financial burden on these families.
Also please forbid telephone companies contracts that including any type of commission or refund, rebate etc.

Helping these people stay in touch with family and friends is one of the important ways they return to society connected with a support group rather than isolated.
I bet the taxpayer gets a far better return from socialized inmates in prison and after they leave prison, than the kickbacks" from overcharging for phone service. The more humanized the better. Profiteering here is just that privatized love of the quick dollar. The slow dollar may well be better for all. Charge reasonable rates for the phone service."

Please do something to lower the charges related to phone calls from jails and prison.
_The family members are charged for these calls, and just one call of less than five minutes can result in a $9 charge. That can be prohibitive for an impoverished family who wants to check on the well-being of their incarcerated loved one, or for a child who longs to hear a parent's voice.

I would like to add that I am deeply disgusted by the fact that the American justice system is not currently considering the children of people in prison. Undoubtedly innocent lives are being affected by this punishment". True rehabilitation gives prisoners a reason to succeed by helping facilitate their connection to the world outside. At some point we need to put actually decreasing the chance of recidivism above the votes of politicians. "

Overcharging prisoners for calling their loved ones is a crime, too. Phone companies should provide reasonable rates to incarcerated people. If they do not do so voluntarily, the FCC should compel the phone companies to deal fairly. Prosecute profiteering off the prison population.

The current system exploits prisoners in ways that create serious long-term damage to their families and children, exacerbating the already severe consequences of imprisonment for the children of those convicted of crimes.
By helping perpetuate poverty, this system of phone gouging costs American society far more than the phone tariffs themselves. This is stupid and profoundly shortsighted. The FCC should ban this practice.

I am enthusiastically in favor of regulations to cap long distance charges in the prison phone industry. Please implement regulations that will allow family members to speak to their incarcerated loved ones at affordable rates. Many inmates are from indigent families and the current excessive rates create a tremendous hardship for the family. The result is that some inmates are totally isolated from contact with their families and this is especially difficult when children are involved.
Thank you for your assistance.

As the Executive Director of a nonprofit serving children and families with incarcerated family members; mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters and aunts, uncles cousins and grandparents I request a serious review by the FCC to equalize access to phone communication with their loved ones, regardless of income. This is another example within our system of the impact of income and the quality and stability of family relations. This is a very stressful time for children and the burden of paying for phone access should not be weighted on their shoulders. Thank you for your attention to this serious injustice.
