HMV 'exposes' talent development with new program

HMV plans to help promote and develop new artists with their HMV exposed program, which was launched on March 1, 2000 across the country. The new program will showcase emerging domestic and international artists via HMV stores throughout Canada, as well as the HMV.com web site.

Tower Records opens second location in Toronto

Tower Records announced the opening of their new location in Toronto within the Empress Walk, a new shopping, residential and entertainment centre in North York on Yonge Street.

The new store is comprised of 17,000 square feet of retail space, offering a selection of CDs, DVDs, videos, books, magazines and Towers' first personal electronics department in Canada.

The first-floor video department contains a DVD viewing station, where customers can comfortably sit and enjoy the full DVD experience. The second floor is devoted entirely to music, with room for more than 100,000 CDs. Custom-designed listening stations enable the customer to sample more than 400 tracks, and experience the four distinct genre environments - jazz, classical, video and pop.

The personal electronics department, to be opened soon, will feature a wide array of personal portable CD and cassette players, book shelf systems, DVD players, CD recorders, mini-disc and MP3 players.

Stan Gorman, COO of Tower Records commented, "Our Empress Walk location is particularly important to expansion of our retail presence in Toronto and to our overall Canadian retail strategy. With its addition we intend to increase our market share in Toronto."

To celebrate the opening, Tower will offer a storewide sale, instores, remotes, give-aways, and more. The company is also embarking on a new marketing and advertising campaign with the slogan "Newly Erected! We built it, so come!"

"Emerging artists are the future of the music industry and HMV has always been proud to take a leadership role in bringing new credible music to Canadians," notes HMV North America president Peter Luckhurst. "HMV exposed allows us to effectively reach consumers wanting to discover new music better than ever before."

HMV will unveil a new group of 12 emerging artists every two months, via in-store merchandising, advertising and in-store performances. The program will feature artists releasing either their debut or sophomore albums. Eleven of the 12 titles will be determined by HMV's central office, while the 12th will be determined by each individual store, in order to promote regional artists.

The first group of artists to be featured in the

Select Distribution restructures national team

Rosaire Archambault, President of Groupe Archambault, has announced the completion of the reorganization of the Select Distribution national team which is based in Toronto.

David Preston, a 21-year veteran in the Canadian music industry, was appointed Director of Sales-National. Most recently, Preston was a member of the Universal Music National sales management team, following an 11-year association with PolyGram Records.

Preston then assembled the following national team: Jacki Evanshen, former assistant to the vice-president of Mercury Records and marketing assistant to the label managers of that group, as sales administration promotion coordinator; Chris Dobson, formerly with HMV Square One and prior to that with Sunrise Records, a former member of local band Capgun with a degree in Broadcast Journalism, as sales representative; Paul White, who gained much sales experience through seven years with Denon and most recently KOCH International, an accomplished musician with a degree in Classical Music Studies, as a sales representative; and Jennifer Yokota, former assistant manager of the Sunrise Yonge Street store, as customer service and promotion representative.

The above join B.C. sales representatives Trevor Derrick, Alberta sales representative Gary Rutland, Nicole Asaff in Atlantic Canada and Manitoba sales agent Don Bailey as the new Select HMV exposed campaign will be Blaque Ivory, Macy Gray, Filippa Giordano, Jet Set Satellite, Patria, McMaster & James, Lauren Taylor, Fu Manchu, Drop The Beat, Shelby Lynne and Shyne Factory.

Gina DeYoung, manager of Shyne Factory, says that such campaigns are "vital to the Canadian music industry. Thanks to HMV exposed, new artists will receive incredible exposure where music is purchased. Such visibility on a national level is critical to the success of emerging artists."

In addition to regular advertising and marketing routes, the HMV.com website will provide insight into these emerging artists on a more intimate level. One program already in development is McMaster & James Exposed On The Road, a webdiary written by the BMG artists describing their life on tour.

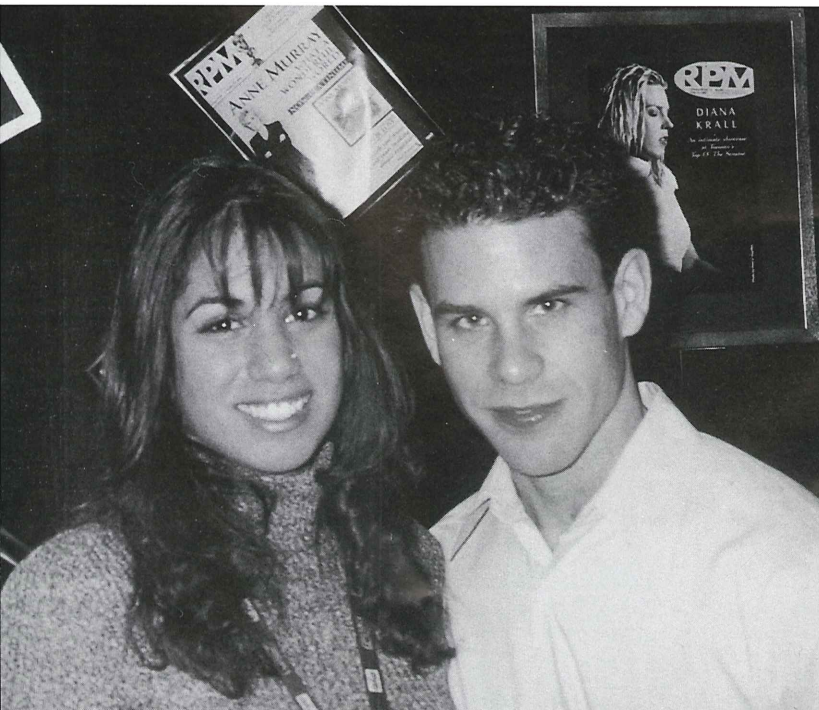

The HMV exposed campaign will also be featured in 14 US stores.

team. Derrick, formerly of Astral Video and Spinner Records, has been with Select since January. Rutland, former manager of Sam's Chinook Centre in Calgary, has also been with Select since the first of the year. Asaff, the newest addition to the team joins Select from Sam's Dartmouth where she was store manager. She will be based in Halifax.

In announcing the above appointments, Preston pointed out that Select Distribution, "the largest independent distributor of recorded music in Canada, has made a huge commitment to expand our presence in the national arena. These additions to our staff complement our acquisition of distribution rights for the Beggars Banquet Group of labels and Analekta, Canada's premier classical label." He continues with "This new team is comprised of a blend of music industry experience and youthful enthusiasm, enabling Select to professionally present a street-oriented profile to our industry and manage a varied portfolio of labels."

Select Distribution represents Audiogram, Star Records, Tox Records, Tacca, Guy Cloutier, Sugarfoot, Coeur de Lion and Inca among others.

Surprise Hip highlights Music Industry Awards

It was Universal Music Canada's night at the annual Canadian Music Industry Awards, with the company picking up five awards, and favoured sons The Tragically Hip helping to induct Ross Reynolds into the Canadian Music Industry Hall of Fame.

The show, hosted by comedian Mike MacDonald, took place in front of an overly packed house. MacDonald did his usual comic bits, but clearly lacked the insider info of previous host Mike Bullard.

The highlight of the evening undoubtedly was the Reynolds tribute, which included a 25-minute video presentation featuring anecdotes from friends and family. This was followed by an impromptu performance by Reynolds' favourite Canadian band, The Hip, who performed a trio of hits - New Orleans Is Sinking, Ahead By A Century and At The Hundredth Meridian.

While the Reynolds tribute was the highlight, the lowlight may have been the appearance of wrestling stars Val Venis, Trish Stratus and a troupe of scantily clad women, who presented the final five awards. The wrestling faction was on-hand courtesy of KOCH International, who also won independent distributor honours. Many in the industry expressed shock and revulsion at this portion of the event.

In addition to Reynolds' honour, Universal also scored five other industry awards, including top major record company, with president Randy Lennox named top music executive.

Also scoring multiple honours was HMV, who were named top retail chain. President Peter Luckhurst was named top retail executive, while HMV.com was awarded top etailer.

Obituary

Vancouver record retailer left a legacy

Big K's Bob Gallo struck down by cancer

The industry was saddened by the death of Robert Romo "Bob" Gallo, who passed away on March 1 at age 69 after a valiant fight with cancer. Mr. Gallo was a highly-respected icon in the record retail business which he served with much dedication and devotion. He was a father figure to many in the industry who got their start through him.

Garry Newman, President and CEO of Warner Music Canada, has many great memories of Mr. Gallo. "I had a lot of respect for Bob because of the fact he started up his own company in western Canada and opened his stores around the major retailers, and survived. It was a one person operation and he was very successful. He was a very kind and hard working businessman."

Mr. Gallo's first Big K store was opened in Vancouver and before being purchased last year by CDplus.com he had 30 stores, 90 per cent of which were in B.C. He retired last year and was building a home on the ocean when he was stricken with cancer. Sadly, he was taken before the house was completed.

"Bob was a man of his word, who treated everyone fairly," continued Newman. "The Vancouver music industry, still to this day, is made up of former employees of Kareena (Mr. Gallo's Big K organization), which is quite surprising. I remember him not as a customer, but as a friend. On my frequent trips to Vancouver, I particularly enjoyed sitting down and talking to him about the state of the business. His views were refreshing because they were from a west coast point of view. He was a fair individual. He never put a lot of demands on anyone. He just expected to be treated the same way as everyone else."

Mr. Gallo is survived by his wife Lucia, daughter Rina, and sons Michael and Dino and Dino's two children Alicia and Dean. He is also survived by his sister, Frances, and brothers Joe, Mike and Tony.

Funeral services were held March 7 at St. Francis De Sales Church in Burnaby with interment at Burnaby's Ocean View Cemetery.

WALT SAYS . . . !

with Elvira Caprese

RPM exclusive!!! Here's exclusive news on this year's Big Country Awards. The annual luncheon which is held by Variety Club will be held on May 24th at the Colony Hotel in Toronto. This year the Big Country Awards nominees will be released at the luncheon. The ballots will go out that day and will be due for return by June 8. The Big Country Awards will be held at Toronto's Royal York Hotel on June 9 at which time the winners will be announced at the Awards Banquet. Ticket information will be in next week's RPM.

Who's in ... who's out??? How about that JR getting a four-year package which must be worth a few million? The clause says he can't go to a similar company for a period of whatever, but watch him show up on RA's roster. So, he might have to drop a couple of million from the package deal, but he'll make that up, and more. And, JW is out, and MS is about to move on which will leave MF kind of lonely. (EC: Okay! Who's in smart ass???) Stay tuned!!!

Cancon coverage!!! The National Post's Brenda Bouw did extensive coverage of the Cancon phenomenon before the Junos. She questioned the programmers about Cancon ... got their comments on Cancon ... talked about the progress of Cancon and how hard it was to find Cancon in the beginning and how easy it is now. On the same page ... a story about the Cancon millionaires who have to give way to the new talent that is emerging ... never uses the term Cancon. Another article on how the females have taken over the industry doesn't refer to Cancon either. Are we building a star-system or what? (EC: A few years ago we wouldn't have gotten this much ink in three years of Junos!!!) Press on!

The worm turns!!! Or should I say ... they are turning on the worm. Canada's leading authority is starting to become persona non grata with a lot of people in the trade. The romance with this character is starting to fade ... even with some of his sycophant supporters. Seems that power has gone to his head and he's really tread on some toes. So that mafia of control freaks have to get him to conform ... before they are forced to turn the industry back over to ... (EC: Just a minute. This guy isn't worth the ink you've wasted on him!!!) Shut my mouth!

Toupee tape ... indeed! Correct me if I'm wrong, but I have used gaffer tape to hold my toupee in place ... and those were just boobs! (EC: What ever works!!!)

Love the Juno promos. The promo I saw only referred to awards at the end when it mentioned the name of the show. Other than that it looked like another CBC Super Special. Too bad the awards part will interfere with the performances! (EC: Only in Canada! Pity!!!) And the winner ... doesn't matter! (EC: This could be a whole new concept for award shows!!!)

Canadian Broadcasting Copycats!!! CBC will be doing a quiz show that may be a lot like the foreign shows that are the current trend! Cut the copycatting subsidies! (EC: I guess it's CBC's final answer!!!)

Cast of characters!!! Never mind the names upfront ... the names behind ... are the names you should know. This intrigue will probably surface in the near future ... in court records! (EC: The other record business!!!)

In the global village!!! Any capable and talented Cancon record company that emerges into the new www record industry will find itself competing on a www basis and either makes a fortune or gets bought and makes a fortune. The future looks brightest for the real captains of Cancon. (EC: Part of Cancon is "content"! It's the buzz word of the next decade!!!) I bet the disc is a clip! I bet the clip will produce a picture and sound on your cordless! (EC: You know these things ... oh bald and toothless one!!!)

Eddie and Barry join the club!!! EMI's in-house musicologist Eddie Colero is recovering from a quadruple by-pass and Barry "Box Car" Stafford is doing the same thing after a double by-pass ... joining that exclusive club that includes David Letterman. Even Stan Klees underwent open heart surgery, but his was to repair the valves. Working on the heart is such a simple and safe thing these days. (EC: If you get the right doctor!!!)

Rod Gudino: The horror king!!! It's always nice to see RPM alumnus go on to better things. Of course it helps if they are aggressive and have a nose for business. And that's Rod Gudino, who launched Rue Morgue Magazine, now regarded as "the fastest growing genre publication in North America." Rue Morgue has now joined forces with Troma Films, a cornerstone of everything in the horror field for the past 25 years. So, in April you'll be able to patch into the latest in scary things on www.rue-morgue.com or www.tromaville.com. That gives me an idea ... having just celebrated our 36th birthday, maybe we should put together a list of people who began their careers with RPM. (EC: That's a scary thought!!!)

A luncheon not to miss!!! The Variety Club tribute to outgoing Toronto police chief David Boothby and incoming chief Julian Fantino had to be the biggest event in some time. The Canadian Ballroom of the Royal York Hotel was packed with more than 1,000 supporters with another 900 not able to get tickets. Even one of the soft drink companies had a table, all looking like they were related to Fantino, as did most of the other luncheon guests. Among the head table guests were "Emperor" Mel Lastman, as emcee Ted Woloshyn called him, and Mayor Hazel McCallion "from the great state of Mississauga," ... Woloshyn was on a roll. He got a chuckle out of Premier Mike Harris, referring to his apology to Wiarton's new Willie on getting federal funding with "That's all we need is another holeless citizen," Great food! Wonderful entertainment from the George Kash Orchestra ... and six out of the past eight chiefs were there along with chiefs from across Ontario. The only question I had was how come they opened the show with the singing of the American national anthem? (EC: The soloist must have thought she was at a Blues Jays game!!!)

The Sky has fallen!!! Montreal-based Sky, who shook up the charts with their EMI singles and album, have decided to call it quits. It was actually James (Jay) Renauld, the real creative behind the duo, who pulled the plug. He's a little shy and prefers to be behind-the-scenes. There have been rumours of the break-up for several weeks, but it was hoped they would hold on until after the Junos where they were nominated in the New Group category and were scheduled to perform. (EC: Here today! Gone today???)

Support the Junos!!! There's only awards show that showcases the entire Canadian music industry ... and that's the Junos. Stan Kulin and Daisy Falle, along with hundreds of volunteers from within the industry have given unselfishly of their time, sitting on committees and more. It's a thankless job. We should all give that little extra to promote the Junos. This is history in the making. That was sheer genius to hold this year's event over two nights which will allow undivided attention to those receiving their awards that aren't part of the Juno telecast. And look, Rogers will be there with their camera. It's not great, but it's a start. (EC: What's up your ass ... you don't even have cable???)

Neill has done it again!!! Talk about genius. That Canadian Music Week was so radio-oriented, who would want to miss it? Radio has been kind of downplayed over the last few years, so it was nice to see the radio guys get some recognition. We'll always need radio, 'cause that's where the hits are still made. (EC: Now I guess we have to listen to that old Walt Says chestnut, "take a broadcaster to lunch"!!!) Take a programmer to lunch!

RC is on a roll!!!! If you dropped by RPM's booth at Canadian Music Week you would have seen the latest marketing genius of RC, and I just might tell you who the initials belong to. The company is called Digital Imaging and the clever displays showed just what's in store for CD graphics in the future. (EC: I hope you don't reveal your source!!!)

Emile Berliner honoured with Walt Grealis Award

by Ron Rogers

Born in Hanover, Germany, in 1851, Emile Berliner first came to North America in 1870, nineteen years old and essentially penniless. Over the next few years, young Berliner worked at various odd jobs - glue salesman, painter, wholesaler - before settling in Washington in 1877.

Friends of his family found Berliner a clerkship with a Washington dry goods store, and during his off-time, he spent numerous hours in the local library, studying electricity and acoustics.

After building his own tiny laboratory in his home, Berliner began experimenting with improvements to Alexander Graham Bell's recently-patented telephone. He came up with the idea of a loose-contact microphone that would improve the telephone's commercial viability. Berliner sold the discovery to Bell for $100,000, and used the money to start the Telephon-Fabrik Berliner company in his native Hanover, where he manufactured phone equipment for the German market.

Berliner returned to America in 1881, settling in a large house in Washington, marrying Cora Adler, and starting a family. He and his wife eventually had seven children - Herbert, Edgar, Henry, Louise, Hannah and Alice. Another son, Oliver, died in childhood. Both Herbert and Edgar would eventually carry on their father's work.

Experimenting with talking machines, Berliner veered away from the cylinder recordings being developed by Edison and Bell, and focused on talking machines that could use disc records. Berliner's gramophone was patented in 1887, with the instrument making its world-premiere in Germany two years later.

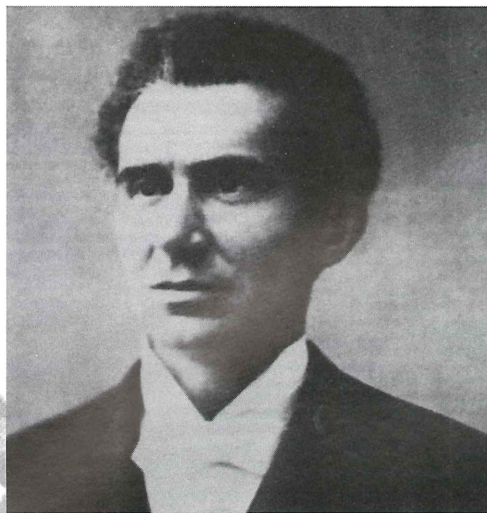

The first 'records' were five-inch diameter rubber discs, with the recordings mostly in his native German. Discs were recorded at varying speeds - anywhere from 72 to 96 R.P.M. All early gramophones could be adjusted for speed.

By 1893, Berliner was ready to establish his invention in North America. He set up the United States Gramophone Company in Washington, hiring Fred Gaisberg as pianist, talent scout and catalogue editor - thus making him the world's first A&R man.

Four years later, Berliner sent associate William Owen to England, where he negotiated the sale of his patent rights to a newly-formed company called Gramophone Company Limited (later to evolve into EMI). His brother Joseph formed the German-based Deutsche Grammophon A.G. a year later (1898), still the most recognized classical label in the world.

Back in North America, Berliner sold the US

rights for his patent to Elridge Johnson, who later founded the Victor Talking Machine Company. This would set the stage for Berliner's move to Canada, where he was granted patent No. 55079 in 1897.

In an interview with the Canadian Music Trades Journal in September 1918, Emile Berliner was asked why he established his business in Canada.

"It was a matter of protecting patents. I thought it wise even then to be protected in this country, and the subsequent manufacture of records was actually to protect these patents, rather than the definite purpose of establishing an industry here, but you never can tell what is going to become of a baby."

Berliner settled in Montreal, setting up shop in Bell's Aqueduct Street offices, installing four record presses. Emanuel Blout was named general manager, and hired a woodworking firm to build the cabinets which would hold the motors and turntables for Berliner's gramophones.

The first records from the Berliner company were seven-inch discs pressed from matrices belonging to Berliner affiliates in Britain, Germany, France and the US. Early recordings included ballads by Harry Tally, the original cast of Florodora, music by the Garde Republicaine Band, piano solos by Landon Ronald, and bagpipe solos by a 'Mr. McCall.

Eventually, many of these recordings were replaced by similar Canadian versions. A rendition of La Marseillaise by Italian opera star Ferruccio Giannini was replaced in Canada by a similar recording from Canadian singer Joseph Saucier.

A January 1901 issue of the magazine Delineator contained an advertisement promoting the Berliner Gram-o-phone as an "ideal Christmas present." Prices ranged from $5-40, with Berliner offering a financing plan: "For one dollar cash and eight monthly payments of two dollars each we will send to any responsible person a standard Gram-o-phone, Type 'A', complete with 16-inch concert horn and choice of any three records."

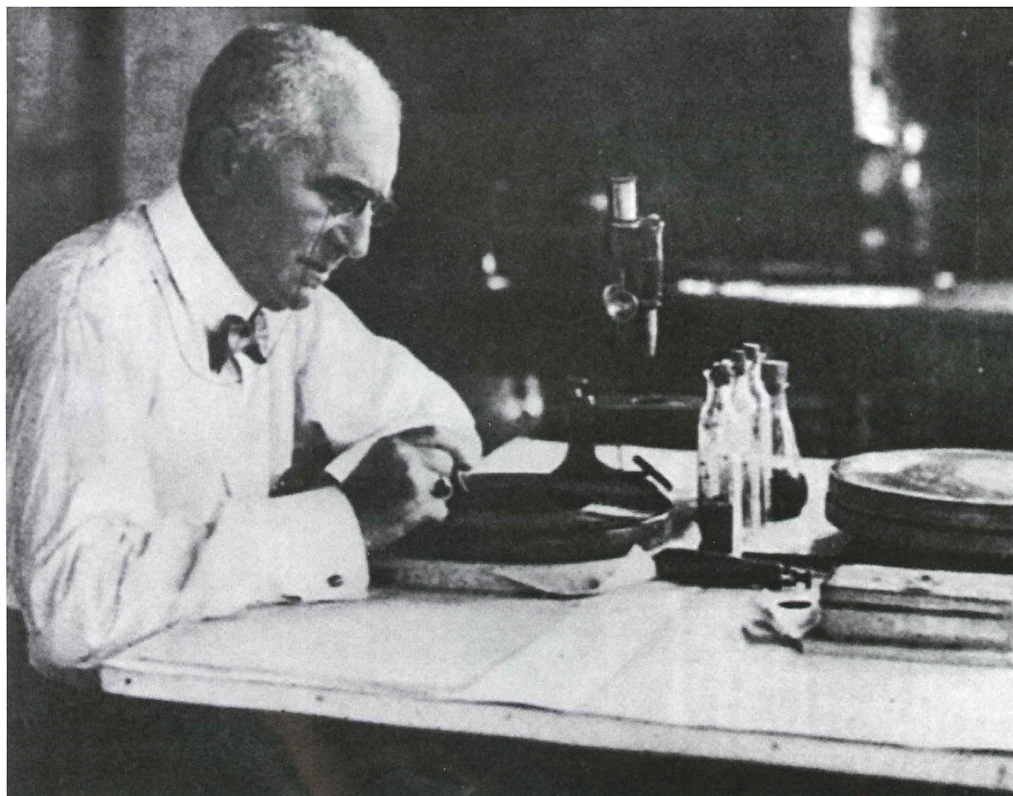

Emile and Herbert Berliner

Longer-playing 10-inch discs were introduced in 1901, dubbed Concert Grands, divided into the modestly-priced Black and higher-priced Red Seal labels. Two years later came the 12-inch DeLuxe label. By 1909, only the 10 and 12 inch labels were being issued, which was to last throughout the balance of the 78 RPM era.

By 1903, the 'E. Berliner, Montreal' company had a staff of 12, and was drawing attention from the city's business community. A year later, the company was incorporated, and a charter was requested from the Canadian government, essentially taking the business public. The new corporation, established on April 8, 1904, also became the presser and distributor in Canada of recordings from the Victor Talking Machine Company (eventually RCA) and other affiliates throughout the world. The Berliner Gramophone Company of Canada Limited was becoming the world's first multinational record company.

Among the original corporate stockholders was Emile's son Herbert, who was soon named vice-president and general manager, effectively running the company's day-to-day operations. Herbert, along with his brother Edgar (who would join the company as secretary-treasurer) would eventually become Canadian citizens.

Early in 1904, Berliner began issuing a free, 80-page catalogue to anyone who wrote in. Berliner advertised heavily in newspapers and magazines throughout the country. In his first two years of operation in Canada, his company produced more than 2,000 titles.

Emile Berliner examining a record, ca 1915

In 1906, the company built a factory at the corner of St. Antoine and Lenoir streets, one of the first reinforced concrete buildings in Montreal.

By 1910, the exterior-horn gramophone was being replaced by those with built-in horns, and the sales of phonographs and gramophones were reaching new heights. Berliner was still the undisputed leader in the field, followed by the US-based Columbia (eventually Sony). Edison's cylinder sales were dropping, marking the overall decline in the great inventor's fortunes that would eventually result in him dying penniless.

Although the coming of the First World War saw the influx of a number of competitors, the Berliner Gramophone Company continued to do a roaring business. Companies such as Sonora (Toronto), Best-Phone (Toronto), Musicphone (London, ON), Prattephone (Montreal), Melodia (Montreal), Brant-Ola (Brantford), and the Canadian Phonograph Supply Company (London) began popping up as competitors, many of them disappearing just as quickly.

By 1916, in order to cut down on US imports, Herbert Berliner began making Canadian recordings himself on the His Master's Voice (HMV) label. Those recordings included cellists J.B. Dubois and Raoul Duquette, basso Ruthven McDonald, songwriter/entertainer Geoffrey O'Hara, pianist Willie Eckstein, Harry Thomas & His Trio, among others. On one occasion, The Fred Van Eps Trio were missing their usual pianist, Frank Banta, and enlisted a young pianist to fill in - a pianist named George Gershwin.

By 1918, with many of the original patents running out, Herbert Berliner realized the need to set up his own record pressing company, apart from his father's original corporation. The Compo Company was established in 1919, picking up the Phonola and Gennett labels.

In April of 1921, Herbert Berliner resigned as vice-president and general manager of the Berliner Gramophone Company, also resigning as director and VP with His Master's Voice Ltd. (HMV). His younger brother Edgar succeeded him as vice-president, effectively taking over the management of the company.

By 1924, the Berliner Gramophone Company occupied seven acres of land, with buildings occupying 150,000 square feet of space. The subsidiary, His Master's Voice Ltd., maintained locations in Toronto, Halifax, Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver and Montreal. The Berliner company had 1,800 affiliated dealers throughout the country.

With Herbert Berliner gone, the Victor Talking Machine Company seized the opportunity to acquire controlling interest in the Berliner Gramophone Company and its affiliate, His Master's Voice Ltd. The new company was known as the Victor Talking Machine Company of Canada Ltd. Edgar Berliner was retained as president, with four US executives brought in as board members.

Of course, the Victor Company would eventually adopt His Master's Voice as their trademark. By 1929, the company's name was changed to the RCA Victor Company, when it was purchased by the Radio Corporation of America. Edgar Berliner was reelected president of the Canadian division of RCA Victor that same year.

RCA was purchased by the German-based Bertelsmann Group in 1987. Today, RCA remains a part of the BMG Music Group.

On August 3, 1929, Emile Berliner died in Montreal at the age of 78. Just a year later, succumbing to pressures from the company's new radio-minded owners, Edgar resigned from the presidency of RCA Victor's Canadian operation. Thus, the last connection between Emile Berliner and the company he founded was gone.

Herbert Berliner's Compo Company eventually began pressing and distributing the highly-popular Decca Records line. But soon after Herbert's death (1948), Compo was sold to Decca, which itself was eventually taken over by MCA (now Universal).

In addition to his work with recorded sound and the gramophone, Emile Berliner is also remembered today for his work with telephones. As mentioned previously, he invented the loose contact telephone transmitter, which became an integral development in the instrument's evolution.

At the same time, he developed the use of the induction coil in telephones, paving the way for long-distance telephoning. He later went on to research and development in the aeronautics and arms industries. He eventually helped develop and fly the first helicopter.

In his interview with the Canadian Music Trades Journal in 1918, Berliner talked about the development of sound recording, and asked his own question to the interviewer.

"What is the most wonderful thing about sound reproduction?" Berliner asked.

"That the human voice could be recorded at all," replied the interviewer.

"No, not that only," said Berliner, "but that all the tones of all the instruments in an entire orchestra can run off from a single finely pointed needle."

Settlement agreement shuts down iCraveTV site

Representatives of Canadian and American television, and the motion picture and professional sports industries, announced that a settlement agreement has been reached with TVRadioNow Corp and William Craig, resulting in the permanent shutdown of internet TV site iCraveTV.

According to Canadian Association of Broadcasters president Michael McCabe, the decision sends a clear message on the issue of copyright theft.

"Today's settlement makes it clear that any iCraveTV wannabes are going to be dealt with swiftly and soundly. Whether or not we're dealing with a $5 or a $5 billion operation is irrelevant. We will move immediately to assert our rights as copyright owners and creators."

The shut down comes after a plethora of legal roadblocks were erected on both sides of the border against William Craig and iCraveTV. On Feb. 8, a district court judge in Pittsburgh imposed a preliminary injunction, barring the site from re-broadcasting television signals on its site for 90 days.

This court decision, coupled with a significant lawsuit filed by a coalition of private and public broadcasters, pushed Craig into seeking a legal settlement. The coalition included CTV, CBC/Radio Canada, WIC, Rogers and CHUM. Additional complaints were filed by the National Football League, the National Basketball Association, representatives of the US motion picture industry, and Canadian producers.

"Canadian broadcasters strongly believe in the Internet's potential, but any development must occur lawfully," added McCabe. The quick resolution of this case means we can focus our energies on doing exactly that."

Liona Boyd was #1 on MP3.com charts

Liona Boyd's single, Lullaby For My Love, enjoyed eight weeks as the #1 single on the MP3.com charts. More than 280,000 Boyd fans from all over the world downloaded and listened to the song, which Boyd wrote for her husband. The track is included on her Juno Award winning CD, Classically Yours.

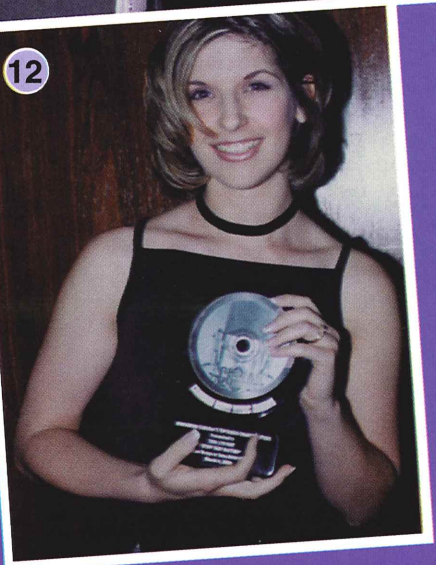

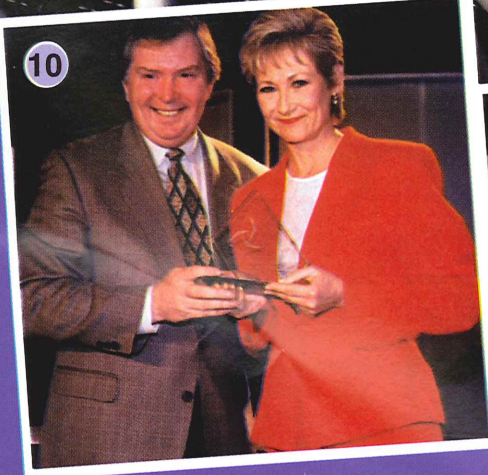

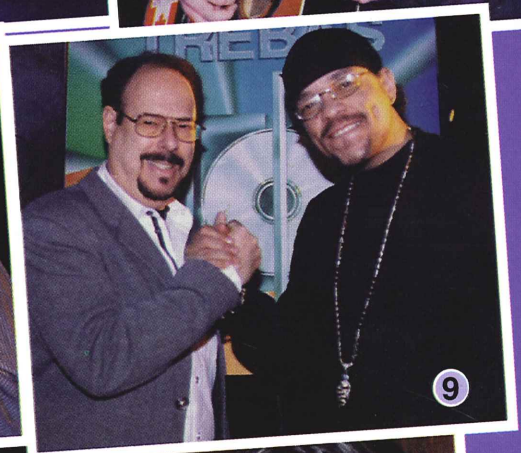

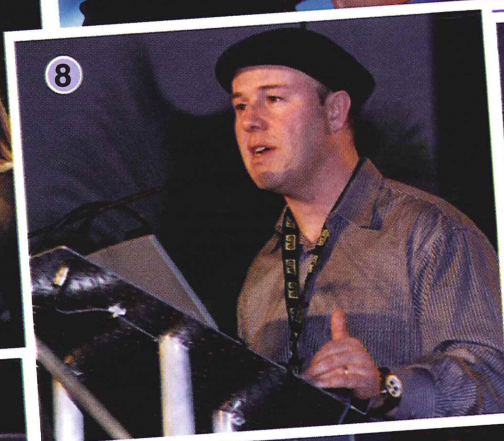

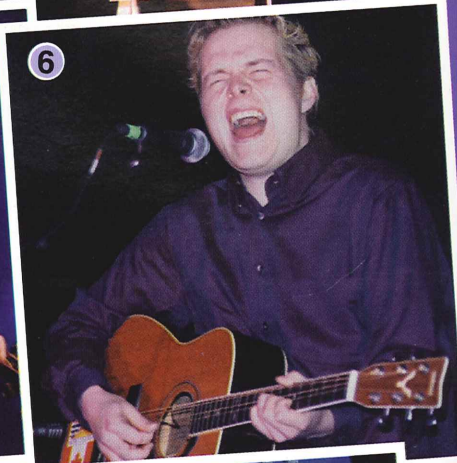

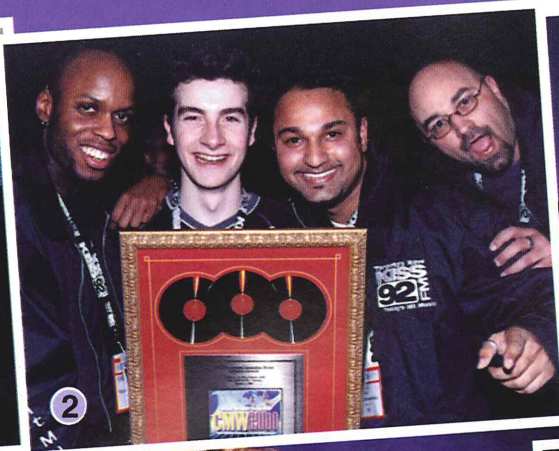

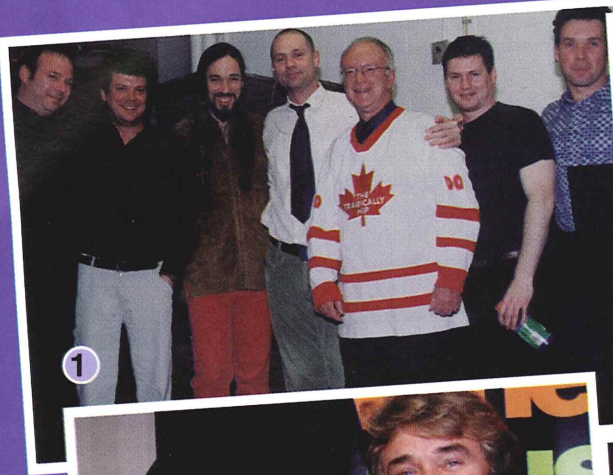

The song reportedly beat out almost 50,000 artists and more than a quarter million other pieces offered by MP3 for the eight consecutive days. The song was also used in conjunction with Sephora.com's Valentine's Day card which was available exclusively through MP3.com and can be heard at <http://www.mp3.com/lionaboyd>.

Affectionately known as Canada's "First lady of the guitar," Boyd, who now lives in Los Angeles, heard the good news on her return home from a three week tour of India. Included was a concert in New Delhi for the World Presidents Organization conference. "This is a great way to share my classical guitar music with fans around the globe," said Boyd who has been a strong supporter of MP3.com for the past year. "I was thrilled by the success of Lullaby For My Love."

Boyd recently acquired a new website (www.classicalguitar.com) which presently features her music and which over time, she hopes to build into a major classical guitar site on the internet.

"The Super Cool: Surprise three-song set by the Tragically Hip - even the jaded industry folks were impressed and enjoyed it!

The Good: Ross Reynolds being inducted into the Hall of Fame - very cool video presentation for a very well-deserving recipient! Sold-out show with Headstones at Lee's Palace...new deal with Management Trust Ltd. had some major hype around that show...not to mention Hugh Dillon jumping into the raging crowd of fans! Jake Gold moderating the 'State Of The Industry Live' - very entertaining!

The Bad: Cell phones going off in seminars...c'mon now! Presenters shamelessly plugging their own bands and companies...

The Ugly: WWF and their 1/2 naked Pamela Lee wannabe's on stage as presenters. Denise Donlon framed it best when she said, 'We seem to take two steps forward, and now and again we take one step back...'

"Best: RPM's booth. Ross' induction. The Hip. The Headstones' show. Danko Jones at the Shoe. Radio friends at the lounge. DD's 'one step back...' comment.

Worst: Was that fish I ate? All things inflated on the same stage as Ross' presentation."

"Best: Ross's Hall of Fame induction...class. The Tragically Hip surprise!!! Flow of the awards best it has ever been. Seminars of note - BDSRadio.com, Ten Most Amazing Promotions, Partners In Progress, and the most inspiring, Finding & Training Radio Talent (I immediately bought the book!).

Other Bests: Cocktails in the lobby. Blockbuster Stage. Best show of the weekend...The Headstones at Lee's Palace. Hugh Dillon is back and sober and nobody can touch him now! Hugh ended the show by body-surfing to the front door of the club and walking out...best club I've seen in years!

Worst: WWF wrestler guy...who the hell was that? WWF boobies...nice to know women are respected in this industry. If I had a rack...I could have accepted my award on stage!"

"It was certainly the most informative CMW event in recent memory. The industry is growing up, however, we could do without a WWF rally during our awards evening."

"This was the best CMW I have been to in five years. Starting with the AD Wizard on Wednesday. On to some great Internet panels Thursday and Friday. The downloading of Natalie MacMaster was a brilliant session. The radio panels were hohum. Thomas Dolby is the beatnik of beatniks, but his one-hour session was great. Thomas passed on his vision of the future which was enlightening. Smart guy. The Ross Reynolds tribute was magic. The tribute was total class and having the Hip perform for the legends of weasels was bone-chilling good. For me, this tribute was the reason I love this business. Class people who love music. In the past year the tribute and awards were classless. What is the WWF doing sponsoring a music dinner?"

"I didn't realize they changed the name of the event to CMWFF...that embarrassing display Thursday night at the awards...what the hell was that all about? I thought the 70's were over."

"It was interesting to hear new ideas on how we might all effectively work with web sites. It was great to see such a large turn-out of programmers. Some of the panels were a little too general while others were just too short. The Consultant's roundtable was a terrific opportunity to discuss issues one-on-one with programmers."

Attic sign marketing/distribution deal with Raze

Forthcoming Canadian urban label Raze Records has signed an exclusive marketing and distribution agreement with Attic Records.

Raze Records is the brainchild of veteran Canadian urban promoters and producers Jonathan Ramos and Lee Fredericks. The pair see Raze as the future home for well-known independent Canadian urban artists.

Jonathan Ramos is one of the leading urban music concert promoters in Canada, via his company, R.E.M.G. He also manages the career of Ivana Santilli, recently nominated for a pair of 2000 Juno Awards. Most recently, he was vice-president of marketing with Beat Factory Music.

Fredericks, who goes by the name Day, began his career producing some of Choclair's earliest sessions. As the co-founder of Kneedeep Records, he has been instrumental in the development of urban artists like Choclair, Kardinal Offishall and Saukrates. He currently manages Choclair, who released his major label debut with Virgin Music.

Along with Raze, Attic also distributes both the Hi-Bias and Blacklisted urban labels, and has direct deals with Maestro, Jazmin and Pocket Dwellers.

Al Mair, president of Attic Records, commented, "Attic continues to confirm its status as Canada's leading independent record company, and we are very pleased to confirm this relationship with Raze Records. Both Jonathan and Day have their fingers firmly on the pulse of Canadian urban music, and I'm impressed with how both have great knowledge of the artistic and the business sides of the Canadian music industry."

An announcement on the initial Raze signings is expected in the next few weeks.

Johnny Reid has followed up his recent chart happen, Given Up On Me, with the release of Runnin' Wild, a song he wrote with Barry Brown. Both tracks are included on his just released self-titled CD (RPM - New Releases), which also includes the Scottish traditional folk song When You And I Were Young Maggie, which, ironically, was written in Canada in 1875 by a Scottish teacher who immigrated to Hamilton, Ontario where he married Maggie Johnson, who died while giving birth and for which the song was written. Obviously, the Scots adopted the song as their own. Born in Glasgow, Reid, who retains his distinctive Scottish accent, immigrated to Brampton, Ontario with his family when he was 15, moving to Quebec's Eastern Townships a couple of years later where he attended Bishop's University. He has been performing professionally for more than half his 25 years and gained recognition with his show-stopper showcase at the CCMA's Canadian Music Week in Ottawa (RPM - Dec. 20/99). Produced by Al Bragg and recorded at Ottawa's Sound Of One Hand Studio, some of the best session players in the business are heard on the CD, including Steve Pitocco (lead and rhythm guitar, mandolin), Bragg (pedal steel and slide guitar, piano and bass vocal), Ken Post (drums), Andrew Affleck (bass guitar), Jon Park-Wheeler (lead, acoustic, classical and rhythm guitar), Steve O'Connor (piano, keyboards, accordion), Frank McKinlay (electric and rhythm guitar), Ed Bimm (piano), Don Reed, Guy Gagnon and Bobby LaLonde (fiddle), John Doohar (percussion), Mike Stevens (harmonica), Alvaro De Minaya (percussion) Ted Gerow (Hammond organ) and Tom McMahon (bass guitar). McKinlay, Marty McTiernan and Andrea Karam supplied harmony vocals. Reid and guitarist Yvan Petit are working their way west from Ontario on a promotion tour where they will be calling on country radio programmers through to Vancouver Island. They are expected to return to their homebase on April 6.

Michelle Wright has another winner with the release of I Surrender, which bullets up to #33 on the RPM Country 100 from #60, the biggest mover of the week. The new single is the follow-up to When I Found You, the video of which maintained the #1 position on the CMT Country 30 for two weeks. The single was also a Top 20 hit (#16) on the RPM A/C 100 (Feb. 21/00) and is still in the Top 30 (#25) after 16 weeks. Both songs, co-written by Wright, are included on her Greatest Hits Collection. Wright has also experienced much success in the U.S. with When I Found You, particularly on the A/C trade

ANGIE STONE - R&B
Black Diamond
 Arista - 07822-190922-N

While her album has attained gold status in the U.S. and music critics around the world are raving about Arista's latest prize, Angie Stone remains relatively unknown in Canada. Nothing some work on the labels' part and the openness of radio programmers could not change. Her style can be compared to many of soul music's best including Anita Baker, Millie Jackson and Deniece Williams. Her vocals are confident and polished, displaying maturity and fostering a sense of awe. Ms. Stone is not a newcomer. She's had some exposure as lead singer for the relatively unknown R&B outfit Vertical Hold (A&M). The current and second single from Black Diamond is Everyday, which Stone previously released under the name DeVox and was covered by Mary J. Blige. Arista released No More Rain (In This Cloud) to launch the album and did it. Rain is classic soul, emulating the musical phrasings of say Denise Williams (Free) and Floaters (Float On) and aimed at garnering the attention of urban-music baby boomers. And they dig it. Life Story, however, is the kicker. It is all of Anita Baker's Rapture, wrapped up in a catchy, pop-radio riff and hook that gets your finger snapping and your brain humming. Visions is also very strong. The simplicity of this soulful up-tempo track is magic. It cleverly blends background harmonies into Stone's sensual vocals, meanwhile soothing you with subtle live instrumentation. Bone To Pic (Wit U), Green Grass Vapors, Trouble Man all provide strong introspective lyrics, contrasted with retrospective sounds like wah wah's (Shaft) and bridges that accentuate the instrumental back line. Black Diamond is rooted in soul music's rich past while clearly positioned to establish itself as musical gem of the day. -TS

GRAMMY RAP NOMINEES 2000
 Various Artists
 RCA - 07863-679442-N

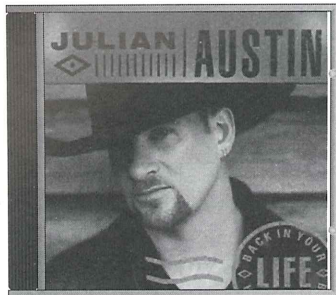

And the winner is... Apart from Eminem, who took home hardware for Best Rap Solo Performance and Best Rap Album, and The Roots featuring Erykah Badu for Best Rap Performance, there is little value here for fans of the genre. Nevertheless the compilation highlights some of rap's best including Dr. Dre and Busta Rhymes, who is by far the most revered and exciting MC today. Missy "Misdemeanor" Elliott carries her own on She's A Bitch. The uncut version of My Name Is, Still D.R.E., and Gimme Some More (Busta) are probably worth the price of the CD. Other artists featured include Will Smith, NAS and Snoop Dogg. -TS

JULIAN AUSTIN - Country
Back In Your Life
 ViK-BMG-43216-89942-N

The BMG people have been playing this release close to their chest, sending out mixed signals; a single, Take The Money & Run, a smash, thank you very much (#14); a five song sampler; an advance of the album; and finally, the real thing. The marketing strategy has paid off. Country radio programmers have been thirsting for another barnburner single from Austin, and they got it. And, lookee here, there are 14 tracks and that's a lot of music, particularly when it's his second album release, or sophomore as the "in" people like to say. Austin says he really needed "to give the people a bang for their buck", so he's stamped his musical signature with ease on all of these 14 tracks, 13 of which he's solo written or co-written. He was obviously taking a chance covering Steve Miller's Take The Money & Run, but, and to his credit, he covered it his way, and that's the magic of the track. The team of

Austin and Daniel LeBlanc continue to work like hand-in-glove, teaming to write a number of songs; Forever Loving You, the title track, Baby Bye Bye, Doesn't Take A Fool, and Cause He Ain't Here, all key tracks. Lying To Myself, Holdin' On For 8 and Should Be Over You, were solo-writes by Austin and are also key. But don't overlook Better Think Twice and She's Through, which he wrote with Stephen Robichaud, they could both be left-fielders. There's no mistaking that pushy, in-yer-face Austin vocal attack that commands attention. The Cancon properties of each track are up to question. The BMG comp (#1) gives Take The Money & Run, two-parts (AP), although the album was recorded in Nashville. It's assumed, because of the writers, that most of the other tracks are three-parts Cancon. -WG

DAVID GREENBERG - Celtic Fiddling
DOUG MacPHEE
Tunes Until Dawn
 Marquis-7471-81245-F

The title is singularly appropriate since the music here is for dancing until dawn. To the uninitiated, the tunes might seem to have a sameness about them but careful attention soon brings awareness of the different foot work required to dance a programme of reels, waltzes and glorious strathspeys. Our late parents were expert Scottish dancers and we can remember them coming home, not quite at dawn but certainly well past the witching hour after Ladies Night at Kilwinning Lodge. One feels in recollection that they probably wished they could have danced till dawn. Mr.

Greenberg expertly captures the essence of celtic music of -- not from -- Cape Breton Island and Mr. MacPhee on piano provides the proper dance beat. Nice accompanying work as well by guitarists Dave MacIsaac and Curly Boy Stubbs with guest fiddlers Kate Dunlay and Donald MacLellan. One last reminiscence if possible; your auditor's father died at an obscenely young age while we were still a young boy. Still, we have this memory of him sitting at our Mason and Risch upright piano playing The Mathematician. Until hearing it on this album we never knew it had a title. Perhaps pater didn't either. -BW

LEILA JOSEFOWICZ - Classical
For The End Of Time
 Philips-28945-65712-J

Concert artists tend to prefer and perform certain composers as they progress in their careers. Time will tell if that's to be the case with young Leila Josefowicz. For now, the nineteen year old violin wizard is quite at ease with an eclectic choice of composers. Heard on this album are works by deFalla, Messiaen, Greig and Bartok. That's about as wide ranging musically as is possible given the distinct style and even, nationalism of each. Her deFalla is Latin-tinged, her Grieg is properly Scandinavian but not too cold and her Bartok is ... well, it's Bartok. Look forward to much from this young woman. An especial kudo is in order too for her piano accompanist, John Novacek. He's clearly an accomplished musician in his own right as a soloist. As an accompanist however, he's quite the best we've heard since Samuel Sanders. -BW

WORLD SAXOPHONE QUARTET - Jazz
Requiem For Julius
 Justin Time-68944-01372

Any aggregation can, subject to copyright laws, call itself whatever it wishes. So if saxophonists Hamiel Bluiett (baritone), Oliver Lake (alto), David Murray (tenor) and John Purcell (soprano) choose to be known as World Saxophone Quartet, so be it. Still, the implication is that it's the world's best. Oh dear! If it is then how must other saxophone quartets sound? To be fair, the original compositions played on the album would tax the limits of any musicians to coax at least some semblance of melodic line. To be honest however, the sound heard is merely that of post feeding flatulence in a swine slaughter house. As always, each auditor must make his or her own determination but this one certainly doesn't enjoy the offering and has difficulty even appreciating it. Chacun à son goût? -BW

JOHNNY REID - Country
Self-titled
 JCD-281 (Independent)

A great talent with a personality to match, this guy has a couple of hooks that can't be overlooked. First off, he has that lilting Scottish burr that's an immediate door-opener, and he's Cancon to boot, not that he needs any such crutch. Reid made an impact last year with Given Up On Me which is included here, a song he wrote with steelman Al Bragg who produced this CD. The single caught a lot of country programmers off guard with its warmth and Reid's definitive lyric attitude. And that's what he's done on the other 12 tracks. Reid obviously works well with other tunesmiths who have the same bent. Runnin' Wild, the follow-up to Given Up On Me, which he wrote with Barry Brown, displays that same ease of confidence with a firm, somewhat encroachment on the lyric content that adds importance to his song message. As a matter of fact, all tracks are key. There's no pretentiousness here. He's billboarding his talent in a very effective way. The bonus track of Maggie, the traditional Scottish folk song, is up there with Amazing Grace, due, in no small part, to Reid's unique talent in creating an audio/visual effect to this public domain property which, incidentally, was written by a Canadian but adopted by the Scotts as their own. My Guarantee, written by Bill Wallace and Byron Hill, The Blues Is Winning from the songwriting team of Dean McTaggart and David Tyson and his solo penning of Hey There Mister and Mr. Saturday Night, are in keeping with Reid's natural structuring of excitement and a little bit of angst in his projection. -WG

ALBUM PICK

DAMHNAIT DOYLE - Pop
hyperdramatic
 EMI Music Canada-20836-F

There's certainly no doubt as to where EMI's current domestic priorities lie - the marketing and promotional push behind this release is downright huge, with EMI obviously having a strong belief in Doyle's artistry and saleability. Folks were raving about Doyle's recent showcase during Canadian Music Week, and the radio/Much response to the lead single, Tattooed, has been strong, indicating that, perhaps, Canadian programmers are just dying for a slice of Cancon that isn't simple-minded pop, and isn't a parade of slack-jawed long-haired guitarists. Doyle obviously has the pipes - she's a classically-trained vocalist from her childhood. And she was wisely matched up with some more experience songwriters, who could help to focus her composing talents. Nowhere is that more obvious than on the aforementioned Tattooed, co-written by veteran Christopher Ward, with its sultry build-up and powerhouse chorus. So Well is an upbeat track, with a more mainstream, pop-oriented feel to it which could attract CHR programmers. The title track finds a bit darker tone, and definitely contains a tad bit of anger. Lie To You has a nice verse line, and the delicate strings attached provide some simple, but effective enhancing. The echoing vocals in the chorus of Never Too Late lift that track above the norm, while Elusive Drug contains a nice hook. Sleep Past You has an appropriately addictive rhythm section, while the album's closing track, Maybe A Son, is a powerful slice of storytelling. Doyle's debut may not have the all-out radio friendliness the one might think (there isn't a great deal of hooks), but the polished production and Doyle's appealing voice should lift this one into retail prominence. -RR charts. And Your Love, Wright's award-winning collaboration with Windham Hill pianist Jim Brickman, recently became a Top 20 hit on the A/C charts in the U.S., two years after its initial release in Canada. The video for When I Found You was filmed in Montreal last September by director Tara Johns, who worked with Wright on her previous video What Love Looks Like.

Toby Keith has a #1 hit with How Do You Like Me Now, bulleting up to the top of the chart from #4. The single, written by Keith and Chuck Cannon, is the title track from his Dreamworks CD which was produced by Keith and James Stroud.

Amanda Stott, the Canadian youngster signed to WEA, has the most added single this week. Black Is Black, written by Nashville writers Even Stevens, Scott Miller and Niki Hassman, enters the chart at #68. The track, which is two-parts Cancon (AP) was taken from her upcoming self-titled WEA album which was produced by Tom McKillip. The CD will be in stores on April 4.

Acclaimed stunt man John Stoneham turned country recording artist, has shipped his new single, Who Said, a Stoneham original, to country radio. The bouncy track, to be included on his new album, was produced by Stoneham and Brent Bodrug. Stoneham is no stranger to the pages of RPM. He first gained trade recognition with the release of Train (RPM - April 11/94), a track taken from his self-titled EP, which was recorded in Burlington, Ontario, Stoneham's home, by Bodrug. He got some ink as "Stony" Stoneham (RPM - Feb. 2/98) as he was shopping his five-song CD which was produced by Gary Buck. His next single release, Jennie Lee (RPM - July 20/98), was included on a Hillcrest compilation CD. Interestingly enough, Stoneham began his professional career as a rock singer and lead guitar player in a local band. But, at age 19, he became an on-air personality at CKOC, a rock station in Hamilton. He later moved to country radio and then moved out into the recording business. He penned Sweet Dreams Baby, which was what he describes as "a nationwide turntable hit." The restless Stoneham was thirsting for action however, and he turned to the silver screen and became one of the top stunt people in the business, appearing opposite Kris Kristofferson, Sidney Poitier, Robert Stack and more. Stoneham, the actor/stuntman, is now Stoneham, the singer/songwriter, although he still takes risks with the odd stunt for the movies and television.

Duane Steele is on the road on an extensive tour that will take him across Canada through to June. Steele is currently charting with Little Black Dress (#44), a track taken from his Mercury CD This Is The Life. Steele wrote the song with Tim Taylor. He is no longer with Mercury, but his popularity persists. Steele played a couple of dates in March, one in Prince Albert with the Poverty Plainsman who are catching fire in the chart with Same Things (#40*), a track taken from their Poverty release There's No Lookin' Back (RPM New Releases - Jan 24/2000). His Dream Catcher Tour begins April 6 at New Brunswick's Big Cove First Nation, followed by Kahnawake First Nation in Quebec (7), Montreal (8), Toronto (9), Rankin Inlet in Nunavut (10), Iqaluit, Nunavut (11), Kuujuaq, Quebec (12), Cross Lake, Manitoba (13), Winnipeg (14), Regina (17), Piapot First Nation Saskatchewan (18), Saskatoon (19), Gordon First National Saskatchewan (20), Prince Albert (21), Edmonton (24), Yellowknife (25), Inuvik (26), Whitehorse (27), Hobbema, Alberta (30), Calgary (May 1), Siksika First Nation Alberta (4), Stoney First Nation Alberta (5), Ash Creek, B.C. (7), Merritt (8), Vancouver (9), Victoria (10) and Grande Prairie (June 2-3).
