

Contents

	PAGE
Part I: Texts and Analysis
Chap. 1: The Latin Works of Alhazen and the Knowledge of Conic Sections: De speculis comburentibus and Perspectiva	3
Chap. 2: John of Palermo's Translation of a Short Arabic Tract on the Hyperbola	33
Text A: The Treatise on Two Lines Always Approaching Each Other but Never Meeting	44
Text B: Another Version of the De duabus lineis	55
Chap. 3: William of Moerbeke and Witelo	63
Chap. 4: The Speculi almukefi compositio	99
Text: The Composition of the Parabolic Mirror	114
Chap. 5: Conic Sections in the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Centuries: Jean Fusoris, Giovanni Fontana, and Regiomontanus	159
Text A: Johannes Fusoris, The Booklet on the Parabolic Section	185
Text B: Notes for Alhazen's De speculis comburentibus as prepared by Giovanni Fontana	200
Text C: De speculis comburentibus (= Speculi almukefi compositio) as prepared by Regiomontanus	203
Text D: Additions by Regiomontanus to the Speculi almukefi compositio	222
Chap. 6: The Medieval Traditions of Conic Sections in the Early Sixteenth Century: Giorgio Valla, Johann Werner, and Albrecht Dürer	235
Text: Johann Werner, The Booklet on Twenty-two Conic Elements	269
Chap. 7: The Last Stages of the Medieval Traditions of Conic Sections	311
Text A: Orontius Finaeus, De speculo ustorio	360
Text B: Extracts from F. Barozzi's Admirandam illud geometricum problema	384

Part II: Bibliography, Diagrams, and Indexes

Bibliography	465
Diagrams	471
Index of Latin Mathematical Terms	519
Index of Manuscripts Cited	553
Index of Apollonian Definitions and Propositions	557
Index of Names and Works	561