

Contents

List of figures and tables	vii
Notes on contributors	x
Acknowledgements	xiv
Introduction	1
Quintin Colville and James Davey
Part I – Sociocultural analyses of the Royal Navy
1 Particular skills: warrant officers in the Royal Navy, 1775–1815	29
Evan Wilson
2 ‘My dearest Tussy’: coping with separation during the Napoleonic Wars (the Fremantle papers, 1800–14)	47
Elaine Chalus
3 The Admiralty’s gaze: disciplining indecency and sodomy in the Edwardian fleet	70
Mary Conley
4 Navy, nation and empire: nineteenth-century photographs of the British naval community overseas	89
Cindy McCreery
5 Salt water in the blood: race, indigenous naval recruitment and British colonialism, 1934–41	113
Daniel Owen Spence

Contents

Part II – Representations of the Royal Navy

6	Memorialising Anson, the fighting explorer: a case study in eighteenth-century naval commemoration and material culture Katherine Parker	133
7	The apotheosis of Nelson in the National Gallery of Naval Art Cicely Robinson	151
8	Naval heroism in the mid-Victorian family magazine Barbara Korte	175
9	'What is the British Navy doing?' The Royal Navy's image problem in War Illustrated magazine Jonathan Rayner	193
10	Patriotism and pageantry: representations of Britain's naval past at the Greenwich Night Pageant, 1933 Emma Hanna	215
	Afterword: Britain and the sea: new histories Jan Rüger	232
	Index	240