

CONTENTS

ONE

Introducing the Indigenous Women of Latin America 3

Some Introductory Remarks 4

Some Useful Concepts 5

Some Background on Latin America's Earliest Women 11

TWO

Of Warriors and Working Women: Gender in Later Prehispanic Mesoamerica and the Andes 18

Women and Gender among Northern and Central Mexican Peoples: Parallel Organizations, Hierarchical Ideologies 19

The Postclassic Nudzahui: Elite Gender Complementarity 30

The Maya of the Classic and Postclassic Periods: The Flexible Patriarchy 35

The Andes: Women and Supernatural and State Power 41

Conclusion 5 r

THREE

Colliding Worlds: Indigenous Women, Conquest, and Colonialism 53

Gender, Sex, and Violence in the Conquest Era 55

Laboring Women: Paying Tribute, Losing Authority 63

Family and Religious Life: The Paradoxes of Purity and Enclosure 71

A Rebellious Spirit 81

Conclusion 86

CONTENTS

FOUR

With Muted Voices: Mesoamerica's Twentieth- and Twenty-First Century Women 90

Nahua Women: Complementarity within Submissiveness 92

Oaxaca: Land of the "Matriarchs"? 103

Maya Women: Working, Weaving, Changing 112

Conclusion 125

FIVE

Fighting for Survival through Political Action and Cultural Creativity: Indigenous Women in Contemporary South and Central America 127

Women in the Andes: Revolutionizing Tradition in the Highland Cultures of Ecuador, Peru, and Bolivia 129

Women in the Tropical Lowlands of South America: Egalitarian Political Structures, Female Subordination, and the Fight for Cultural Survival 142

Indigenous Women in Central America: Searching for Empowerment in Diverse Circumstances 157

Conclusion 167

SIX

Indigenous Women: Creating Agendas for Change 169

ORGANIZATIONS MENTIONED IN THE TEXT
AND THEIR ACRONYMS 179

GLOSSARY 181

NOTES 185

BIBLIOGRAPHY 239

INDEX 317

PPN: 258189606

Titel: Weaving the past / a history of Latin America's indigenous women from the prehispanic period to the present ; Susan Kellogg. - Oxford University Press New York 2005

ISBN: 0-19-512381-6

Bibliographischer Datensatz im SWB-Verbund