

CONTENTS

Foreword James Peto	6
Introduction and Acknowledgements Gemma Blackshaw and Leslie Topp	8
Chapter 1. Scrutinised Bodies and Lunatic Utopias: Mental illness, psychiatry and the visual arts in Vienna, 1898–1914. Leslie Topp and Gemma Blackshaw	14
Chapter 2. Karl Henning, Wax Models of Two Male Heads, 1897–98. Nicola Imrie	38
Chapter 3. ‘Mad’ Modernists: Imaging mental illness in Viennese portraits. Gemma Blackshaw	46
Chapter 4. Gustav Jagerspacher, Portrait of Peter Altenberg , 1909. Gemma Blackshaw	66
Chapter 5. Modernity follows madness? Viennese architecture for mental illness and nervous disorders. Nicola Imrie and Leslie Topp	76
Chapter 6. Erwin Pendl (studio), model of Lower Austrian Provincial Institution for the Cure and Care of the Mentally and Nervously Ill ‘am Steinhof’, c.1907. Leslie Topp	100
Chapter 7. Josef Karl Rädler, Untitled (Self-Portrait) , 1913. Luke Heighton	110
Chapter 8. The Allure of Nerves: Class, gender and neurasthenia in Klimt’s society portraits. Sabine Wieber	118
Chapter 9. Richard Luksch, Two Faience Figures for the Purkersdorf Sanatorium , 1905. Sabine Wieber	136
Chapter 10. Madness and Literature in Vienna 1900. Geoffrey C. Howes	144
Bibliography	154
Object Checklist	158
Picture Credits	163
Index	164