

Contents

Acknowledgments

vii

	Introduction:
	The Pan-German League and the German Right	1
1	In the Wake of War and Revolution	13
	The Bamberg Declaration	14
	First Steps	22
	Political Parties and the New System	29
	The Kapp Putsch	33
2	The Völkisch Malaise, 1919–1924	41
	Reinhold Wulle and Heinrich Claß: Personal Differences	42
	The Growing Völkisch Divide	46
	General Erich Ludendorff	49
	The Founding of the Deutschvölkische Freiheitspartei	54
3	Early Contacts: Adolf Hitler and National Socialism, 1920–1924	63
	Forging the Relationship	64
	Claß, Pöhner, Kahr, and Bavarian Politics	70
	The “Beer Hall” Putsch and its Aftermath	76
4	The Demands of Party Politics, 1919–1925	87
	The DNVP’s Early History and the “Völkisch Secession” of 1922	89
	Internal and External Challenges to the DNVP in 1924	101
	From the Dawes Plan Vote to the December 1924 Elections	107
	1925: The DNVP in Government	111
	Withdrawal from the Luther Cabinet	124

5	The Campaign for Alfred Hugenberg, 1926–1928	133
	Laying the Foundation: Heinrich Claß and Personal Political Influence	134
	The “Claß Putsch” and Right-Wing Politics, 1926–1927	138
	Toward a Change in DNVP Leadership, 1927–1928	146
6	The Collapse of the Non-Nazi Right, 1929–1939	159
	The Anti-Young Plan Campaign and the Radicalization of the DNVP	160
	From the Harzburg Front to the Nazi Seizure of Power	169
	Between Conformity and Opposition in the Third Reich	179
	Conclusion	185
	Bibliography	191
	Index	207