

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	vii
Preface	ix
Introduction	xi
Transcription Conversion Table	xix
Part I: What Makes China Chinese?
1. Archaeology and Mentality: The Making of China	1
2. Early Civilization in China: Reflections on How it Became Chinese	37
3. What Did Make the Chinese “Chinese”? Some Geographical Perspectives	75
Part II: Religion, Metaphysics, and Theology
4. The Religious Commitment: Shang Theology and the Genesis of Chinese Political Culture	87
5. Late Shang Divination: The Magico-Religious Legacy	101
6. Shang Divination and Metaphysics	123
7. The Making of The Ancestors: Late Shang Religion and Its Legacy	155
Part III: On Writing and Inscriptions
8. Theology and the Writing of History: Truth and the Ancestors in the Wu Ding Divination Records	207
9. Marks and Labels: Early Writing in Neolithic and Shang China	229
Part IV: Early China/Early Greece
10. Clean Hands and Shining Helmets: Heroic Action in Early Chinese and Greek Culture	253
11. Epistemology in Cultural Context: Disguise and Deception in Early China and Early Greece	283
Part V: A Lighter Touch
12. Notes and Comments: “There Was an Old Man of Chang’an...”: Limericks and the Teaching of Early Chinese History	311
Bibliography of the Writings of David N. Keightley	315
Index	321