

CONTENTS

List of Illustrations	xi
List of Contributors	xiii
Introduction The Silent Noise of (Everyday) Identities	1
Abel Polese, Oleksandra Seliverstova, Emilia Pawtusz and Jeremy Morris
Doggy Bags and Post-Soviet Identities	1
Limp Flags and Noisy Invisible Identities (Post-Socialism and the Everyday)	4
This Book's Approach	10
Structure of the Book and Main Themes	12
1. 'I'm Only Half!' Schooling and Strategies of Belonging Among Adolescents from Minority Ethnic Backgrounds in Russia	17
Dilyara Suleymanova
Introduction	17
Schooling in Post-Soviet Russia as an Arena of Competing Nationhood Claims	20
School Practices of Ethnic Ascription	23
Strategies of Belonging: Portraits of Pupils	27
'I Like to be Taken for a Tatar': Passing as a (Christianised) Tatar	30
Conclusion	33

2. Borders of a Borderland: Experiencing Identity in Moldova Today	36
Ágnes Patakfalvi-Czirják and Csaba Zaborán
Introduction	36
State-Building and Nation-Building in Moldova	38
Competing Identity Categories	40
Nationalising Collective Memory in the Public Spaces	44
The Stencils of Identity	46
Transformations of Identity through the Lens of the Everyday	47
Language, Asymmetrical Power Relations and Everyday Practices	50
Conclusion	53
3. Teaching the National through Geography and Nature: Banal Nationalism in Primary Schools in Serbia and Croatia	57
Tamara Pavasović Trošt
Introduction	57
Methodology	60
Findings: Textbook Content Analysis	62
Discussion and Conclusion	79
4. Why Nations Sell: Reproduction of Everyday Nationhood through Advertising in Russia and Belarus	83
Marbaryta Fabrykant
Introduction	83
Nation-Building and Economic Transformations in Russia and Belarus: A Historical Background	87
Advertising in Russia: Empire, Nation and In Between	90
Advertising in Belarus: The Struggle for Banality	96
Conclusion	102

5. Money Can't Buy It? Everyday Geopolitics in Post-Soviet Russia	104
Elizaveta Gaußman
Introduction	104
Why Prosume Foreign Policy?	106
Speaking Geopolitics	108
Framing Geopolitics	111
Symbolising Geopolitics	115
Eating Geopolitics	118
Conclusion	120
6. Turbofolk as a Means of Identification: Music Practices as Examples of the National in Everyday Life	123
Petra Št'astná
Introduction	123
The Setting for the Birth of Turbofolk	127
Identification with Turbofolk	129
Contradictions in Evaluating Turbofolk Music	132
Impact of Turbofolk Music on its Consumers	134
Autochthonous Turbofolk as an Illustration of Diasporic Identity	135
'Turbofashion', 'Turbostyle'	138
Conclusion	141
7. Something Bulgarian for Dinner: Bulgarian Popular Cuisine as a Selling Point	144
Rayna Gavrilova
Introduction	144
Why Food as a National Practice?	146
What is Food as a National Consumption Practice?	147
How to Read the Food as Text	149
The Structure of the Menu: The Sign System	153
The Words of the National Culinary Discourse	155
The Twenty-First-Century Image of Bulgarian National Cuisine	160

8. Making Modern Mongolians: Gender Roles and
Everyday Nation-Building in Contemporary Mongolia	164
Timofey Agarin and Līga Rudzīte
Building a Nation for Mongolians	165
Nomadism as Practice of Everyday Nation-Building	168
Forging Ties to the Nation via Religious Practices	171
Chenggis Khaan Legacies	173
Contribution of Women to Mongolian Everyday
Nation-Building	176
Conclusion	180
Conclusion When Post-Socialism Meets the Everyday	183
Abel Polese, Oleksandra Seliverstova, Emilia Pawłusz
and Jeremy Morris
Bibliography	189
Index	211