7. Proposition 55: Extend Prop 30 tax rates California November 2016 general election likely voters

In 2012, California voters approved a temporary increase in the personal income tax rate for Californians earning over $250,000 for single filers, $340,000 for heads of households, and $500,000 for married couples who have earned income. Under current law, these higher tax rates will end in 2019.

On the November general election ballot, voters will be asked to decide on Proposition 55. This ballot measure, if approved, would continue those tax increases for another 12 years.

The money collected by continuing the higher tax rate would be spent mostly on education and up to $2 billion per year could be used for low-income healthcare programs. For every $10 spent on education, $9 would go to K-12 schools and $1 would go to California's community colleges.

In the November general election, will you vote YES or NO on Proposition 55?

Target population California general election likely voters

Sampling method Respondents were selected from among California registered voters in YouGov's opt-in Internet panel and then matched down to a sample of 1250 likely voters to produce the final dataset. The sample was matched on gender, age, race, education, and California geographic region, and subset on those likely to vote in the upcoming election. The sampling frame used in matching was constructed by stratified sampling from the full 2012 American Community Survey (ACS) sample. Data on voter registration status and turnout were matched to this frame using the November 2012 Current Population Survey.

Weighting The sample was weighted using propensity scores based on age, gender, race/ethnicity, years of education, and geographic region. The final weights were then post-stratified to match the September 2016 party registration statistics reported by the CA Secretary of State, and a full stratification of four category age, four category race, gender and four category education. The weights were trimmed at a maximum of seven and normalized to sum to the sample size. The weights range from .2 to 7.0, with a mean of one and a standard deviation of .6.
