

While the sheep and goat inventory across Nebraska fluctuates from year to year, Nebraska Extension has become a resource for small ruminant producers to grow and develop their programs.

Sheep and goat producers local to Southeast Nebraska gathered at a goat operation to increase their knowledge on kidding, feeding, and overall management. Because Nebraska isn't the largest in sheep and goat producers, there are limited education resources for breeders. An attendee stated that they were excited for more opportunities offered to small ruminant producers. Shifting to livestock systems has allowed Nebraska Extension to serve a larger clientele.

Programs At-A-Glance

- Johnson County Extension partnered with Johnson County Central school to offer afterschool 4H programming to 82 youth.
- Partnering with Early Childhood educator, Ingrid Lindal-Chavarria, 8 youth were able to develop skills in childcare by participating in the Build a Better Babysitter program.

36

Community Members renewed their Private Pesticide Safety Education Training

STRENGTHEN NEBRASKA AGRICULTURE & FOOD SYSTEMS

128

Youth are members of a Johnson County 4-H Club

INSPIRE NEBRASKANS & THEIR COMMUNITIES

35

Sheep and Goat producers attended the first annual Lambing and Kidding School

ENHANCE THE HEALTH & WELLBEING OF ALL NEBRASKANS

