MODERATOR GUIDE

MEETING OVERVIEW

Today you'll continue to discuss performance bias, how it impacts tradeswomen, and how you can handle common situations.

- 1. Before you get started, read all the way through this moderator guide and the accompanying slides so you know what to expect. You can print this guide for reference, or keep it open in a window on your computer.
- 2. Read our Circle Fundamentals out loud to remind everyone of our shared values:
 - Confidentiality: What happens in our Circle stays in our Circle. Trust is crucial.
 - Communication: Share openly and honestly. Listen with empathy, and make sure everyone gets a chance to speak.
 - Commitment: Be fully present and ready to engage.

3. Check in with each other (20 minutes)

Use the conversation starters below or make up your own. Try to stick to 30 to 45 seconds per person—to make sure everyone has a chance to speak, avoid slipping into conversation.

- My week has been...
- I'm looking forward to...
- I'm struggling with...
- Something that's been on my mind is...
- My update on my One Action from last month is...

OR Go around your Circle and have each member share an update on how they're feeling using the traffic light colors:

- Green (mostly good)
- Yellow (mixed feelings, unsure, or just OK)
- Red (mostly not doing great)

If they want to, members can also briefly share why they're feeling that way.

START sharing the deck for Meeting 2 using Zoom's screen share feature

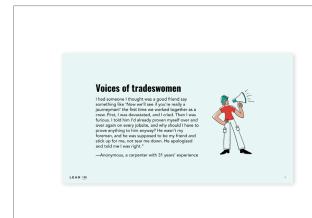

4. Ask a volunteer to read the important reminders from slide 2 of the meeting deck.

WHAT THEY'LL SEE	WHAT THEY'LL READ
Reminders • It's important to report serious concerns to a trusted authority. If you ever feel that you are the your concern to a ploud to steward, or another authority figure you trust. • These activities focus on strategies you can start using right row. We wish two dight need to start using right row. We wish two dight need to start using right row there are took, you can use these strategies to confront everyday sewarm and gender bus. • There is no one "right" way to confront biss. If you have other stategies, feel free to share • Bits for thinked to gender. Women also specimence bisses, due to their race, sexually, a disability, or other parts of their identity.	Reminders: It's important to report serious concerns to a trusted authority. If you ever feel that you are unsafe or that you can't perform your job, bring your concern to a jobsite safety officer, union steward, or another authority figure you trust. These activities focus on strategies you can start using right now. We wish we didn't need to share these recommendations—but until there is true equality for women at work, you can use these strategies to confront everyday sexism and gender bias. There is no one "right" way to confront bias. If you have other strategies, feel free to share them with everyone. Bias isn't limited to gender. Women also experience biases due to their race, sexuality, a disability, or other parts of their identity.

5. Review the explanation of performance bias from last month. Ask for a volunteer to read the content from slides 3 and 4 of the meeting deck:

WHAT THEY'LL SEE	WHAT THEY'LL READ
Reviewing performance bias Performance bias causes us to underestimate women's performance and overestimate men's. Bessue of performance bias, women's abstities are more likely to be doubted, and they often get less credit for their accomplishments and more biam for mistake. Performance bias is most han fustation—it can be despensus, in one study, women who reported felionic perhy had to overcompensate or prove themselves on the job were four times more likely to get injured.	Reviewing performance bias Performance bias causes us to underestimate women's performance and overestimate men's. Because of performance bias, women's abilities are more likely to be doubted, and they often get less credit for their accomplishments and more blame for mistakes. Performance bias is more than frustrating—it can be
LEAN IM	dangerous. In one study, women who reported feeling they had to overcompensate or prove themselves on the job were four times more likely to get injured.

Voices of tradeswomen

"I had someone I thought was a good friend say something like 'Now we'll see if you're really a journeyman!' the first time we worked together as a crew. First, I was devastated, and I cried. Then I was furious. I told him I'd already proven myself over and over again on every jobsite, and why should I have to prove anything to him anyway? He wasn't my foreman, and he was supposed to be my friend and stick up for me, not tear me down. He apologized and told me I was right."

— Anonymous, a carpenter with 31 years' experience

6. Go through the performance bias activity (60 minutes). Follow the steps below, referring to slides 5-14 in the meeting deck.

- Explain that the activity is similar to last month's—but the situations will be new.
- Read the first situation aloud.
- Discuss the situation as a group, using the prompts on the next slide.

TIP: Stop screen sharing during discussion about each situation so members can interact more easily. Then, start screen sharing for the "Why it happens" and "What to do" slide

You are screen sharing

Stop Share

- Ask for a volunteer to read the explanations on the "Why it happens" and "What to do" slides.
- Repeat these steps for the remaining situations, until you've finished the deck or there are only 20 minutes left in the meeting.

7. Reflect on the activity as a group (10 minutes)

One you finish the activity, take a few minutes to reflect on how it went. Choose one situation you discussed today and talk about how you will put what you learned into action at work.

8. Commit to a One Action (10 minutes)

At the end of your meeting, go around the Circle and share your "One Action"—one concrete thing you're going to do on your jobsite or to practice a new skill. And be ready to tell the group about your progress at your next meeting!

9. Wrap up and remind members of next steps

End the meeting by thanking members for their participation and scheduling your next meeting. You can also remind members that they'll receive a summary of the next meeting in an email from Lean In.

