

218 EAST 78th STREET HOUSE, Borough of Manhattan. Built 1861-65.

Landmark Site: Borough of Manhattan Tax Map Block 1432, Lot 41.

On January 10, 1978, the Landmarks Preservation Commission held a public hearing on the proposed designation as a Landmark of the 218 East 78th Street House and the proposed designation of the related Landmark Site (Item No. 7). The hearing was continued to March 14, 1978 (Item No. 8). The hearing had been duly advertised in accordance with the provisions of law. One witness spoke in favor of designation. There were no speakers in opposition to designation.

DESCRIPTION AND ANALYSIS

This charming house at No. 218 is one of a row of six surviving houses (Nos. 208-218) built between 1861 and 1865 as a speculative venture for several successive developers. As such, they may be seen as representative examples of New York City row house development during the 1860s. The builders, Warren and Ransom Beman and John Buckley, were probably responsible for the design. While the Italianate style had been popular for row house design in New York during the 1850s and 1860s, this row is given particular distinction by the treatment of the elliptically-arched door and window openings, which are very unusual on Italianate-style houses.

The block of East 78th Street between Second and Third Avenues on which this row is located was considered a part of the village of Yorkville at the time of construction. Until 1851 the block was part of the property of the City of New York known as the Common Lands. In 1852 the Third Avenue Railroad opened, making it possible for residents of Yorkville to commute to lower Manhattan.

Although the residential sections of the city had gradually moved northward from the lower tip of the island during the 19th century, the block was still undeveloped in 1861 when Howard A. Martin purchased 200 feet of property fronting the south side of East 78th Street. As a condition of sale, Martin was assessed $128 for the opening of 78th Street in a judgment handed down by the New York State Supreme Court in 1860. Martin subdivided his property into fifteen lots (Nos. 206-234), each 13 feet 4 inches wide; construction had already begun when William H. Brower, an investment broker purchased them in 1862. Because each of the fifteen lots was the same width and the same builders were responsible for the construction of all, the fifteen houses in the row were probably identical in appearance even though Brower sold all of the properties to several different owners before construction was completed in 1865. The four-year construction period is long for a row of houses of this type in New York City, but the rate of building was affected by the occurrence of the Civil War taking place during these years. Samuel O. Howe, also an investment broker, purchased the properties at Nos. 210-218 in 1864; after the houses were completed in 1865, he sold this house, No. 218, and No. 210 to his lawyer, William Grigg. Grigg then sold the property to Mary Jane Haskins, the first resident of No. 218.

The brick house at No. 218 rises three stories above a basement. Because the house is only 13 feet 4 inches wide, the facade has only two bays. Each has distinctive elliptically-arched openings which are very unusual for an Italianate design. A tall stoop leads to the doorway at the left with handsome double doors and original arched transom. Both the doorway and the full-height parlor window have crisply-detailed stone enframements with decorated keystones. The elliptically-arched windows at the second and third stories have similar enframements. Projecting sills resting on corbels accent the window bases. Crowning the facade is a handsome cornice with closely-spaced vertical brackets. All the window sash are original. Original iron-work may be seen enclosing the areaway and lining the stoop. All of these elements work together to create a particularly noteworthy Italianate row house design.

This house with the other five of the row which survive is a handsome component of the streetscape and a distinctive example of the Italianate style. It continues to be used as a residence.

FINDINGS AND DESIGNATIONS

On the basis of a careful consideration of the history, the architecture and other features of this building, the Landmarks Preservation Commission finds that the 218 East 78th Street House has a special character, special historical and aesthetic interest and value as part of the development, heritage and cultural characteristics of New York City.

The Commission further finds that, among its important qualities, the 218 East 78th Street House is one of a charming row of six surviving houses; that its elliptically-arched openings make it a distinctive example of the Italianate style; that it, with the other houses in the row, is a handsome component of the streetscape; that it is a representative example of New York City row house development during the 1860s; and that it continues to be used as a residence.

Accordingly, pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 21 (formerly Chapter 63) of the Charter of the City of New York and Chapter 8-A of the Administrative Code of the City of New York, the Landmarks Preservation Commission designates as a Landmark the 218 East 78th Street House, Borough of Manhattan and designates Tax Map Block 1432, Lot 41, Borough of Manhattan as its Landmark Site.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Lockwood, Charles. Bricks and Brownstone: The New York Row House, 1783-1929, An Architectural and Social History. New York: McGraw-Hill Book Company, 1972.

Property Conveyances (Office of the Register, New York County).

Stokes, I.N. Phelps. The Iconography of Manhattan Island, 1498-1909. 6 vols. New York: Robert H. Dodd, 1915-1928.

Tax Assessment Records, New York County, 1860-68 (New York City Department of Records and Information Services).

Trow's Directories for New York, 1860-1870.

Photo Credit: Philip Harris, Landmarks Preservation Commission

212-218 East 78th Street Houses
Manhattan
Built 1861-65