Debatable Delicacies

What do lobster, frog legs and goose liver have in common? They're all traditional delicacies. But their preparation methods are all controversial. Lobsters are boiled alive, frogs are dismembered while still conscious and geese are forcibly fattened with tubes down their throats. Are these luxury products culturally valuable assets that should be preserved, or quite simply animal cruelty? Euromaxx explores this question in a new series "Debatable Delicacies." The first episode takes us to France, where frog legs are among the world's best-known culinary specialties.

How AI is Changing the Music World

Composing and arranging songs, generating vocals, writing lyrics: Artificial intelligence can support musicians in the creative process. But not everyone is happy about that. Some fear that their ideas and voices will be stolen and worry about their intellectual property rights and income. SHIFT shows how AI is changing the world of music.

Guardians of Truth: Julian Assange

Julian Assange is a free man. After a 14-year legal odyssey, the WikiLeaks founder has returned to his native Australia. His release follows a plea deal with the US Department of Justice. Indicted on charges of espionage, the journalist had spent the last five years in a London high security prison fearing extradition to the US, where he faced a possible 175 prison sentence.

Assange's most explosive publication: the video "Collateral Murder" from 2010, showing alleged war crimes committed by the United States during the Iraq war. The journalist Can Dündar tracked down a soldier as well as a survivor from the video. Victim and perpetrator talk to each other for the first time. The documentary Julian Assange and the Dark Secrets of War tells a gripping story of the struggle for forgiveness and truth. The latest episode in the DW documentary series "Guardians of Truth."

ARTS UNVEILED

Brazil: 200 Years of German Immigration

They were looking for a better life and left everything behind to pursue that goal. German migrants in São Leopoldo founded the first German settlement in Brazil 200 years ago. What drove Germans to leave their homeland in the 19th and 20th centuries? How have they left their mark on Brazil? Journalist Guilherme Becker searches for answers to these questions in the South American nation. Becker's grandmother emigrated to Brazil as a child to make a new home together with her foster parents. Arts Unveiled accompanies the young man on his journey and tells some of the stories – both positive and traumatic, also for the country's indigenous and Afro-Brazilian communities – associated with this migration movement.

Sandinistas after the victory over Nicaraguan dictator Somoza

DOCFILM

A Dream of Revolution

To establish a new, socially equitable society: That was the aim of the left-wing Sandinista movement, which toppled Nicaragua's dictator Somoza in 1979. A young generation of leaders formed the Central American nation's next government. The documentary Nicaragua – A Dream of Revolution looks back on the dramatic events that followed the Sandinista triumph. It recalls the commitment of thousands of young people from West Germany, who traveled to Nicaragua in the 1980s to support the country's new administration. What has become of their dreams, wishes and hopes 45 years on?

THE 77 PERCENT

Young Africans Trapped by Sports Betting

Sports betting companies are tightening their grip on young Africans. Aggressive marketing, new apps and low odds have created a perfect storm for the betting market. In the Street Debate in Uganda's capital Kampala, The 77 Percent asks young people: How do you deal with the onslaught of sports betting? Moderator Edith Kimani hears heartbreaking stories of school tuition gambled away, students who try to finance themselves by gambling, and the psychological tricks used by betting companies to ensnare people in a vicious cycle. The 77 Percent also shows how betting companies lobby African politicians all over the continent to stop gambling legislation in its tracks.

Carbon Capture in Germany

Carbon capture and storage is a hot topic – including in Germany, where some CCS technology remains banned. The U.S. and Norway, by contrast, have been using CCS for decades. Oil and gas industries there have amassed a great deal of know-how regarding the capture and storage of CO<sub>2</sub>. Both countries aim to ramp up the technology with tax incentives and subsidies, in the U.S. by implementing the Inflation Reduction Act, and in Norway, by way of the Longship project. Germany is set to change course, announcing plans to implement CCS technology in 'hard to abate' sectors like the cement, chemical, and steel industries, for which there are currently few climate-neutral solutions. How does CCS work? How will the U.S. and Norway incentivize the technology? Did Germany make a mistake with its more hesitant strategy?

Supporters of Donald Trump storm the Capitol in Washington, D.C.

DOCFILM

The Enemy Within

6 January 2021: Hundreds of Donald Trump supporters stormed the U.S. Capitol in Washington, D.C. Five people died and many others are injured. Around 15 per cent of those involved were former members of the U.S. military or police, some of whom were organized in far-right extremist militias hostile to the U.S. government. According to U.S. law enforcement, these groups represent the biggest threat to democracy in the United States. What is the background to this development? Find out in the two-part documentary The Enemy Within – US Veterans Against Democracy.
