
Contents

Preface	xiii
Acknowledgements	xiv
Acronyms and abbreviations	xv
1. Introduction	1
Gennady Chufirin
I. Asia in the post-Soviet foreign policy of Russia	1
II. Research objectives	4
III. The period covered	5
IV. The structure of the volume	6
Part I. The Asian dimensions of Russian foreign and security policy
Map of Russia in Eurasia	10
2. Russia and Asia: challenges and opportunities for national and international security	11
Vladimir Baranovsky
I. Introduction	11
II. Factors in Russia's Asia policy	12
III. Russia's stakes in Central Asia	17
IV. Russia's perspectives on South-West Asia	21
V. Russia in South Asia	25
VI. Russia in the Asia–Pacific area	26
VII. Conclusions	31
3. Between Europe and Asia: the search for Russia's civilizational identity	33
Igor V. Podberezsky
I. Introduction	33
II. Russia as European	34
III. Russia as Asian	37
IV. Russia as Eurasian	40
V. Russia's civilizational identity and its foreign and security policy thinking	46
VI. Conclusions	50

4. Domestic developments in Russia	52
Nodari Simonia
I. Introduction	52
II. The nature of political power in Russia	52
III. The formation of bureaucratic capitalism and the emergence of new foreign policy actors	54
IV. The armed forces and the defence industry as factors in Russia's foreign policy	61
V. The Russian regions as foreign policy actors	71
VI. 1998: crisis of the ultra-liberal model	75
Part II. Russia's stakes in Central Asia
Map of Central Asia	82
5. The emerging geopolitical balance in Central Asia: a Russian view	83
Vitaly V. Naumkin
I. Introduction	83
II. The geopolitical forces in Central Asia	83
III. Threats to security	88
IV. Conclusions	99
Table 5.1. Quantities of drugs seized by the Tajik Ministry of the Interior, 1991–95	93
Table 5.2. Immigration to the Russian Federation from Central Asia, 1996	96
Table 5.3. Immigration of Kazakhs to Kazakhstan, 1991–94	98
Figure 5.1. Existing and possible future oil routes from Central Asia	90
6. The policy of Russia in Central Asia: a perspective from Kazakhstan	100
Konstantin Syroezhkin
I. Introduction	100
II. The course of Russian policy	100
III. Russia and Central Asia: mutual interests	106
IV. Conclusions	108
Table 6.1. Ethnic Russians and Russian-speakers in Central Asia, 1989	102
7. The policy of Russia in Central Asia: a perspective from Tajikistan	110
Mouzaffar Olimov
I. Introduction	110
II. The role of Russia in the inter-Tajik conflict settlement	113
III. Military cooperation between Russia and Tajikistan	114
IV. Trade and economic ties	118
V. Conclusions	120

8. Russia's policy options in Central Asia	123
Irina D. Zviagelskaya
I. Introduction	123
II. The progress of Russian policy	124
III. Political approaches	127
IV. Economic links	130
V. Problems of security	132
VI. Conclusions	136
Table 8.1. Russia's trade with the Central Asian republics, 1991–96	131
9. Central Asia, Russia and the West	137
Martha Brill Olcott
I. Introduction	137
II. Working out the terms of the divorce	143
III. Accepting international direction	145
IV. The coming threats	149
V. What if things go sour?	152
Table 9.1. Foreign direct investment in the Central Asian countries, 1993–97	146
Table 9.2. Central Asian production of oil and natural gas	148
Table 9.3. Percentage change in real GDP in the Central Asian countries, 1993–97	150
Part III. Russia's perspectives on South-West Asia
Map of South-West Asia	156
10. Russia's assets and liabilities in South-West Asia	157
Vladimir I. Maksimenko
I. Introduction	157
II. The Caspian Sea Basin	160
III. Turkey	162
IV. Iran	165
V. Afghanistan	166
VI. The future of Iraq and the security threats in the Gulf	168
VII. Conclusions	169
11. Russian–Turkish relations	172
Victor Nadein-Raevsky
I. Introduction: the historical development of Russian–Turkish relations	172
II. The newly independent countries of Central Asia	174
III. The oil pipeline routes	177
IV. Conclusions	179

12. Iran and Russia: neighbours without common borders	181
Abbas Maleki
I. Introduction	181
II. The present situation	182
III. The Russian elites	183
IV. The Iranian elites	185
V. Cooperation at the international level	185
VI. Cooperation at the regional level	187
VII. Bilateral relations	192
VIII. Conclusions	195
13. Russian–Afghan relations	197
Vyacheslav Belokrenitsky
I. Introduction	197
II. The stages of Russian disengagement	198
III. The extent of Russian involvement	199
IV. Russia’s security concerns	201
V. Afghanistan and Russian policy in Central and South-West Asia	203
VI. Prospects for a settlement in Afghanistan and the future of Russian–Afghan relations	204
14. Russia and South-West Asia: a view from the region	207
Duygu Bazoglu Sezer
I. Introduction	207
II. Russia’s ‘south’ in historical context	209
III. Ethnic separatism in the southern Caucasus	210
IV. Islamic fundamentalism in the expanded Middle East	213
V. Encroachments by regional and extra-regional powers	214
VI. Neo-imperialist impulses in the ‘near abroad’	217
VII. The Middle East: a partner in the search for a multipolar world order?	218
VIII. Conclusions	225
Part IV. Russia’s perspectives on South Asia
Map of South Asia	228
15. Russia’s security and the geopolitical situation in South Asia	229
Vladimir Moskalenko and Tatiana Shaumian
I. Introduction	229
II. Sources of instability	230
III. Russia and South Asia: geopolitical aspects	233
IV. The conflict potential of South Asia and Russia’s security	236
V. Nuclear weapon proliferation	238
VI. The Kashmir problem	241
VII. Conclusions	243

16. Russia in South Asia: a view from India	247
Vinay Shukla
I. Introduction	247
II. South Asia: Russia's strategic neighbour	247
III. Indian–Russian relations after the end of the USSR	251
IV. Russia and Pakistan	254
V. The nuclear dimension in the South Asian security calculus	256
VI. Russia's dilemma	258
VII. Outside players in South Asia	263
VIII. From special relationship to strategic partnership in the next millennium	265
IX. Conclusions	269
 Part V. Russia in Asia–Pacific
Map of North-East Asia	272
17. Russia in the Asia–Pacific area: challenges and opportunities	273
Vyacheslav B. Amirov
I. Introduction	273
II. The new Russia's posture in the Asia–Pacific area	275
III. The Russian far east	276
IV. Russia's place in the region: an agenda for the future	278
V. Final considerations	286
 18. Sino-Russian relations after the break-up of the Soviet Union	288
Chen Qimao
I. Introduction	288
II. The development of relations	289
III. The foundation of the relationship	292
IV. Problems	293
V. Conclusions: Sino-Russian relations in the future	297
Table 18.1. Bilateral trade between China and Russia, 1991–97	294
 19. Russia and China: what is in the pipeline?	301
Yuri V. Tsyganov
I. Introduction	301
II. Strategic relations	304
III. Economic relations	308
IV. Arms transfers	310
V. Energy supply	312
VI. The Mongolian dimension	313
VII. Conclusions	315

20. Russo-Japanese relations and the security of North-East Asia in the 21st century	318
Tsuyoshi Hasegawa
I. Introduction	318
II. The new power configuration in North-East Asia	320
III. The response of the major powers to the new international configuration	323
IV. Omni-directional friendliness and interlocking bilateral dialogues	326
V. Japan's multi-layered approach	329
VI. Russo-Japanese relations and Asian security: future scenarios	332
Figure 20.1. Map of Japan, the southern Kuriles and Sakhalin	320
21. Russian–Japanese relations: back to the deadlock	337
Alexei Zagorsky
I. Introduction	337
II. Historical models of Soviet–Japanese cooperation	339
III. Defence-related problems	340
IV. The loss of motivation	342
V. Revival of the dialogue	343
VI. Development of energy resources: a genuine option?	346
VII. Back to the territorial dispute	349
VIII. Conclusions	351
22. Russia–US relations in Asia–Pacific	353
Mikhail G. Nosov
I. Introduction	353
II. From ideological confrontation to political pragmatism	353
III. China: between Russia and the USA	357
IV. Japan remains with the USA	364
V. A Korean settlement: one purpose, two approaches	367
VI. Conclusions	370
23. US–Russian relations in North-East Asia in the post-cold war period: a US perspective	373
Joyce K. Kallgren
I. Introduction	373
II. US foreign policy in Asia: priorities and constraints	374
III. Russia in Asia: priorities and constraints	383
IV. US–Russian relations	387
V. Conclusions: East Asia and the road ahead	390

24. Russian policy and interests on the Korean Peninsula	394
Alexander N. Fedorovsky
I. Introduction	394
II. The evolution of policy	394
III. The North Korean missile test	400
IV. Conclusions for Russian policy	401
Figure 24.1. Map of the Korean Peninsula	396
25. Russia and a new balance of power in East Asia: implications for stability on the Korean Peninsula	403
Sang-Woo Rhee
I. Introduction	403
II. Pax Americana	404
III. The Japanese concept of Pax Consortis	405
IV. The dream of restoring China-centrism	406
V. The emerging balance of power	407
VI. Russia's role as balancer	407
VII. Conclusions: Korea in the new balance-of-power system	409
26. Russia and ASEAN: emerging partnership in the 1990s and the security of South-East Asia	411
Victor Sumsky
I. Introduction	411
II. Background to the emerging partnership	416
III. The impact of the financial crisis on ASEAN	420
IV. The importance of Russian relations with Viet Nam	422
V. The South China Sea paradox and Russia's national interests	424
VI. Conclusions	425
Figure 26.1. Map of South-East Asia	412
27. Russia and great-power security in Asia	427
Andrew C. Kuchins
I. Introduction	427
II. Russia: the 'sick man' of Eurasia	429
III. Russia and East Asian regional security	433
IV. The Sino-Russian strategic partnership	437
V. Conclusions	443
Table 27.1. Gross national products of Russia and selected countries, 1997	428
Table 27.2. Changes in Russian GDP, 1992–96	430

Part VI. Conclusions

28. The evolving security environment in Asia: its impact on Russia	447
Jonathan D. Pollack
I. Introduction	447
II. The legacy of the cold war	451
III. Potential patterns of alignment in Asia and Russia's strategy	455
IV. Alternative security scenarios	468
V. The Russia factor in Asian security: some tentative conclusions	471
29. Asia as a factor in Russia's international posture	474
Gennady Chufrin
I. Introduction	474
II. Relations with CIS states in Asia	477
III. Multipolarity and partnership	480
IV. Multilateral security	490
V. Conclusions: what next?	492
Appendix 1. Select multilateral economic and security-related organizations and initiatives in Asia, April 1999	497
Shannon Kile
Appendix 2. Chronology of principal defence- and security-related agreements and initiatives involving the Russian Federation and Asian countries, 1992-99	500
Shannon Kile
Appendix 3. Transfers of major conventional weapons by Russia to Asian countries, 1992-98	506
About the authors	514
Index	519