

Contents

List of figures	vii
List of tables	viii
Preface	xii
Abbreviations	xvii

PART 1 LIBERALIZATION AND THE ASIAN FINANCIAL CRISIS

1 Asia's new-found development strategy	3
2 The Asian financial crisis	27

PART 2 THE EARLY REFORMERS

3 Korea: a case of cautious capital account liberalization	57
4 Malaysia: broad-based financial liberalization stopped in its tracks	83
5 Singapore: reform towards financial centre status	110
6 Indonesia: liberalization amidst persistent exchange rate instability	147
7 Taiwan: export-led growth and limited financial-sector openness	172
8 Thailand: quite open external sector but poorly managed financial sector	192

PART 3 COMMUNISTS RETURN TO MARKET FORCES

9 China: a command economy responding well to market signals for the time being	223
10 Vietnam: hesitant transition from command to market economy	255

PART 4 THE HESITANT REFORMERS

11 Bangladesh: restructuring and liberalization did help	283
12 India: a decade of liberalization, a hesitant choice	307
13 Pakistan: internally suppressed economy under liberalization	344
14 The Philippines: lost opportunities for correction of reforms	376
15 Sri Lanka: a case of development regression	403

PART 5 THE LESSONS FROM LIBERALIZATION

16	Macroeconomic effects of financial liberalization	429
17	Lessons for developing and transitional economies	444
	Select bibliography	474
	Index	497