
Marco Just Quiles

Fragmented State Capacity

External Dependencies, Subnational
Actors, and Local Public Services in Bolivia

 Springer VS

Table of Contents

1 Introduction	1
1.1 A Novel Approach to Subnational Variations of State Capacity in Bolivia.....	4
1.2 Research Question and Central Argument.....	6
1.3 Studying State Capacity: What Do We Know?.....	10
1.4 Bolivia: A Paradigmatic Case in Latin America and Beyond.....	12
1.5 Conceptualizing and Measuring State Capacity	14
1.6 The Historical Development of Subnational State Capacity in Bolivia	17
1.7 Mixed-Method Research Design and Data Issues.....	20
1.8 Applying the Argument and Implications of the Results	22
2 Theorizing Fragmented State Capacity	27
2.1 Studying the State: From “Bringing the State Back in” to State Capacity.....	31
2.1.1 The Weberian Legacy in Neo-Statist Research.....	33
2.1.2 New Perspectives on State Capacity from the Postcolonial World.....	35
2.1.3 State Capacity Lessons from Contemporary Latin America	42
2.2 State Capacity as a Research Object.....	43
2.3 The Determinants of State Capacity.....	52
2.4 The External Dimension of State Capacity	61
2.5 The Debate on State Formation and State Capacity in Bolivia	64

2.6 Theorizing Fragmented State Capacity: Sketching the Research Gap.....	67
3 Contemporary Public Service Variations in Bolivia	71
3.1 Local Public Service Variations in Bolivia.....	72
3.1.1 A Public Service Approach to State Capacity.....	73
3.1.2 Measuring State Capacity: The State Density Index (SDI).....	79
3.1.3 Descriptive Analysis of the State Density Index Bolivia	85
3.2 The Determinants of Local Public Service Variations in Bolivia.....	103
3.2.1 Independent Variables: Data and Operationalization.....	103
3.2.2 Results of the Correlation Computation.....	110
3.2.3 Multiple Regression Analysis of the State Density Index 2012	113
4 Tracing the Origins of Fragmented State Capacity in Bolivia	119
4.1 The External Dimension of State Territorialization: A Heuristic Conceptualization.....	121
4.2 The External Dimension of State Territorialization: The Historical Analysis.....	132
4.2.1 State Service Development in the Andean Mining Areas (1870–1925)	132
4.2.2 State Service Development in the Tropics and Rural Highlands (1870–1952).....	165
4.2.3 State Service Development in the Bolivian Lowlands (1940–1990)	177

4.3 The Origins of Fragmented State Capacity in Bolivia: Concluding Remarks.....	208
5 Fragmented State Capacity in Four Typical Bolivian Municipalities	213
5.1 Method, Case Selection and Main Findings	213
5.2 Colquechaca (Province of Chayanta, Potosí Department).....	221
5.3 Presto (Province of Jaime Zudáñez, Chuquisaca Department).....	235
5.4 Caraparí (Province of Gran Chaco, Tarija Department)	247
5.5 Mairana (Province of Florida, Santa Cruz Department).....	261
5.6 Results and Conclusion of the Case Analysis.....	272
6 Conclusion: Fragmented State Capacity	277
6.1 Empirical Findings: Fragmented State Capacity in Bolivia	280
6.2 Theoretical and Practical Implications	284
6.3 Limitations of the Study and Recommendations for Future Research	287
Annex	291
Bibliography	313