

Contents

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |     |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| List of Illustrations                                                                                                                                                                                               | ix  |
| Acknowledgements                                                                                                                                                                                                    | x   |
| List of Contributors                                                                                                                                                                                                | xi  |
| Abbreviations                                                                                                                                                                                                       | xiv |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |     |
| Introduction: 'No Such Thing as Society?' Solitude in CommunityCate Gunn and Liz Herbert McAvoy                                                                                                          | 1   |
| 1 'O Sely Ankir!'E. A. Jones                                                                                                                                                                             | 13  |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |     |
| Part I. Religious Communities                                                                                                                                                                                |     |
| 2 The anchoress of Colne Priory: A Solitary in CommunityCate Gunn                                                                                                                                        | 37  |
| 3 Anchorites in their Heavenly CommunitiesSophie Sawicka-Sykes                                                                                                                                           | 53  |
| 4 Rule Within Rule, Cell Within Cloister: Grimlaicus's Regula SolitatorumAndrew Thornton OSB                                                                                                      | 68  |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |     |
| Part II. Lay Communities                                                                                                                                                                                     |     |
| 5 English Nuns as 'Anchoritic Intercessors' for Souls in Purgatory:The Employment of A Revelation of Purgatory by Late MedievalEnglish Nunneries for Their Lay CommunitiesClarck Drieshen | 85  |
| 6 'In aniversaries of ower leoveste freond seggeth alle nihene':Anchorites, Chuntries and Purgatorial Patronage in MedievalEnglandMichelle M. Sauer                                              | 101 |

|                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                        |     |
|------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| 7                                        | 'Item receyvdy of ye Anker': The Relationships between a Parish and its Anchorites as Seen through the Churchwardens' AccountsClare M. Dowding                              | 117 |
| 8                                        | The Curious Incident of the Hermit in FishertonJames Plumtree                                                                                                               | 131 |
| 9                                        | Was Julian's Nightmare a Māre ? Julian of Norwich and the Vernacular Community of StorytellersGodelinde Gertrude Perk                                                | 147 |
| Part III. Textual Communities |                                                                                                                                                                                        |     |
| 10                                       | Anchoritic Textual Communities and the Wooing Group PrayersCatherine Innes-Parker                                                                                           | 167 |
| 11                                       | The anchoress transformed: On wel swuðe god ureisun of God almihti and þe wohunge of ure lauerd in the Fourteenth-Century A Talkyng of the Love of GodDiana Denissen | 183 |
| 12                                       | Ancrene Wisse and the Egerton HoursDorothy Kim                                                                                                                | 199 |
|                                          | Bibliography                                                                                                                                                                           | 221 |
|                                          | Index                                                                                                                                                                                  | 244 |