

CONTENTS

Preface	ix
Introduction: Tourism, Aesthetics, and War	1
1. The Emergence of France as a Tourist Icon in the Belle Époque	20
2. Two 1940 Sites as Symbols: The Maginot Line and the Compiègne Railway Car	53
3. The French as Tourists in Their Occupied Country	64
4. German Tourism in Occupied France, 1940–1944	99
5. The Liberation, 1944: Normandy and Paris	146
6. Sites of Memory and the Tourist Imaginary	163
7. Tourism, War, and Memory in Postwar France	193
Conclusion: Tourism and Appropriate Remembrance	213
Appendix: References and Sites	227
Notes	229
Index	299