

Contents

Notes on Contributors	ix
Preface Judith Berling	xii
Introduction: On Maps, Elephants, and Buddhists Scott A. Mitchell	1
Part One Historical Studies	15
1 When Food Becomes Trespass: Buddhism and the Kami in Local Economies Lisa Grumbach	17
2 Making the Modern Priest: The Ōtani Denomination's Proto-University and Debates about Clerical Education in the Early Meiji Period Victoria R. Montrose	39
3 Taking the Vajrayana to Sukhāvati Aaron P. Proffitt	54
Part Two Textual Studies	65
4 Yijing's Scriptural Text about Impermanence (T. 801) Charles Willemen	67
5 Dualistic and Bifunctional Spirits: A Translation of the Oni no Shikogusa Takuya Hino	77
6 A Note Concerning Contemplation of the Marks of the Buddha Charles D. Orzech	86
Part Three Ethnographic Studies	93
7 Buddhism, Consumerism, and the Chinese Millennial Courtney Bruntz	95
8 Describing the (Nonexistent?) Elephant: Ethnographic Methods in the Study of Asian American Buddhists Chenxing Han	109

Part Four Theoretical Concerns	127
9 Is a Dazang jing a Canon? On the Nature of Chinese Buddhist Textual Anthologies Charles B. Jones	129
10 Our Buddhadharma , Our Buddhist Dharma Franz Metcalf	144
11 On Authenticity: Scholarship, the Insight Movement, and White Authority Natalie Fisk Quli	154
Notes	173
Bibliography	213
Index	235