

Contents

Foreword	vii
In focus: a comparative reading of Souleymane Bachir Diagne and Jean-Loup Amselle Anthony Mangeon
Introduction Souleymane Bachir Diagne and Jean-Loup Amselle	1
1 Universalism in questions Jean-Loup Amselle	7
2 On the universal and universalism Souleymane Bachir Diagne	19
3 Race, culture, identity Jean-Loup Amselle	30
4 Africanity, Afrocentrism, representation Souleymane Bachir Diagne	39
5 The racial ban on representation Jean-Loup Amselle	45
6 On cultural and linguistic specificities Jean-Loup Amselle	50
7 On African languages and translation Souleymane Bachir Diagne	60
8 An optimism of translation Jean-Loup Amselle	67

Contents

9	On philosophy in Islam and on the question of a 'West African Islam'	71
	Souleymane Bachir Diagne
10	The political instrumentalization of a West African Sufi Islam	87
	Jean-Loup Amselle
11	West African Sufism revisited	96
	Souleymane Bachir Diagne
12	Thinking/creating Africa	99
	Souleymane Bachir Diagne
13	On the non-existence of Africa ... and of Europe	106
	Jean-Loup Amselle
14	On Africa and pan-Africanism	114
	Souleymane Bachir Diagne
15	Souleymane Bachir Diagne's 'desire for Africa'	118
	Jean-Loup Amselle
16	Were human rights born in Africa?	120
	Jean-Loup Amselle
17	On the charters of the Mandé	131
	Souleymane Bachir Diagne
18	On various contemporary questions	136
	Souleymane Bachir Diagne and Jean-Loup Amselle
	Notes	159
	Bibliography	182