Table of contents

Introduction: The nature of the node and the network – Open questions in Diachronic Construction Grammar 1
Elena Smirnova and Lotte Sommerer

The nodes: Creation, change and loss

Constructionalization and the Sorites Paradox: The emergence of the into-causative 45
Susanne Flach

Constructionalization, constructional competition and constructional death: Investigating the demise of Old English POSS DEM constructions 69
Lotte Sommerer

The links: Vertical and horizontal relations

(Re)shaping the constructional network: Modeling shifts and reorganizations in the network hierarchy 107
Emmeline Gyselinck

Productivity and schematicity in constructional change 141
Florent Perek

Constructional networks and the development of benefactive ditransitives in English 167
Eva Zehentner and Elizabeth Closs Traugott

Allostructions, homostructions or a constructional family? Changes in the network of secondary predicate constructions in Middle English 213
Michael Percillier

Converging variations and the emergence of horizontal links: To-contraction in American English 243
David Lorenz

Beyond existing models

Paradigms lost – paradigms regained: Paradigms as hyper-constructions 277
Gabriele Diewald

Putting connections centre stage in diachronic Construction Grammar 317
Sara Budts and Peter Petré

Index 353