

CONTENTS

1	Introduction: The Scene for a Reflexive Practice	1
	Amanda Kearney and John Bradley
	The Start of a Story	1
	Our Approach to the Book	9
	Collaboration and Change	13
	Yanyuwa Families, Country and Law	15
	On Becoming Reflexive	26
	Overview	30
	References	33
2	Writing from the Edge: Writing What Was Never Meant to Be Written	39
	John Bradley
	Introduction	39
	Living on the Edge: Suffering and Loss	40
	Field Notes and Reflections: Transitioning into the Academy	42
	Writing of Knowledge	45
	Songs, Stories, and Relationships	50
	Knowing Loss and Finding Words	56
	Final Thoughts	58
	Contributor Response, by Philip Adgemis	61
	References	63

3	Mobility of Mind: Can We Change Our Epistemic Habit Through Sustained Ethnographic Encounters?	65
	Amanda Kearney
	Introduction	65
	What Do I Know?	67
	How Did This Happen?	69
	Mobility of Mind: Epistemic Habit in the Context of Fieldwork Encounters	70
	Sustained Ethnographic Encounters as Acts of Testimony and Witnessing	78
	Did I Always Know?	85
	Why Have Yanyuwa Taught Me?	87
	Am I Permitted to Know an Indigenous Epistemology in a Settler-Colonial Context?	88
	Final Thoughts	89
	Contributor Response, by John Bradley	91
	References	93
4	Mapping the Route to the Yanyuwa Atlas	95
	Nona Cameron
	Putting It Down, Giving Voice to Country	95
	Changes, Shifts, and Paradoxes	98
	Threads, Tracks, and Paths to Yanyuwa Relationships	101
	How Getting Lost Offered Us an Atlas	104
	Moving In from the Edges	105
	Art as Ways of Knowing and Expressing	108
	Creased Maps and Field Jottings	111
	Sensing a Topography of Rage	115
	Moving from Stasis	117
	A Final Reflexive Gathering	119
	Contributor Response, by Liam M. Brady	120
	References	122
5	“Invisible Things in Nature”: A Reflexive Reading of Alexis Wright’s Carpentaria	125
	Frances Devlin-Glass
	Introduction	125
	Carpentaria’s Unexpectedness	126

	The Many Strands that Make up Carpentaria	133
	Reading Carpentaria in the Light of an Apprenticeship in Yanyuwa Cosmology	135
	Reading Wright's Rainbow Serpent	138
	Final Reflection	144
	Contributor Response, by Amanda Kearney	145
	References	149
6	Encounters with Yanyuwa Rock Art: Reflexivity, Multivocality, and the "Archaeological Record" in Northern Australia's Southwest Gulf Country	153
	Liam M. Brady
	Introduction	153
	Reflexivity in Archaeology Practice	155
	Archaeology and the Southwest Gulf Country	157
	Research Questions and Entering the Field	159
	Looking for a Donkey	160
	Kurrmurnnyini and Sorcery Rock Art	164
	Yalkawarru and the Power of Place	170
	Discussion	172
	Contributor Response, by Nona Cameron	174
	References	176
7	"So Did You Find Any Culture Up Here Mate?": Young Men, "Deficit" and Change	181
	Philip Adgemis
	Introduction	181
	Realizations and Motivations	182
	Discourse and Deficit Framings: "Some People Just Hate Us"	185
	Expectations and Intersubjective Connections	189
	Change and the Shame in Not Knowing	192
	Reflections	202
	Contributor Response, By Frances Devlin-Glass	205
	References	207
	Index	213