

This innovative volume focuses on the generic and thematic experimentations that took place within late antique Christian poetry. The contributions are written by experts in their respective fields, who explore specific case studies of how a poem manipulates, and alternates between, major and minor registers, how it negotiates readerly expectations, and how much it deviates, like a fugue, from a given theme or genre.

THE SERIES: TRENDS IN CLASSICS – SUPPLEMENTARY VOLUMES

The journal Trends in Classics and the accompanying Supplementary Volumes publish innovative, interdisciplinary work which brings to the study of Greek and Latin texts the insights and methods of related disciplines, such as narratology, intertextuality, reader-response criticism, and oral poetics. Both publications seek to publish research across the full range of classical antiquity.
