

This study draws upon the resources of both contemporary analytic theology and the theological interpretation of the New Testament in order to investigate a set of important issues in Christology. It is the first work in analytic Christology to draw upon both recent scholarship in biblical studies and recent contributions to analytic philosophy and theology. Thomas H. McCall explores the themes of union with Christ and the faith of Christ as these are developed by the “apocalyptic” and “New Perspective” interpreters of Pauline theology.

The volume offers a careful analysis of recent dogmatic proposals about the identity of Christ and the doctrine of election, and provides an examination of debates over the subordination of the Son in Hebrews. It also probes the relationship of the incarnate Son to his Father in Johannine theology. McCall presents an exegetically grounded theological engagement with recent work on the place of logic in the doctrine of the incarnation.

Thomas H. McCall is Professor of Theology and Scholar-in-Residence at Asbury University. He was formerly Professor of Biblical and Systematic Theology and Director of the Carl F. H. Henry Center for Theological Understanding at Trinity Evangelical Divinity School.

OXFORD STUDIES IN ANALYTIC THEOLOGY

Series Editors

Michael C. Rea and Oliver D. Crisp

Analytic Theology utilizes the tools and methods of contemporary analytic philosophy for the purposes of constructive Christian theology, paying attention to the Christian tradition and development of doctrine. This innovative series of studies showcases high quality, cutting-edge research in this area, in monographs and symposia.
