

Contents

Notes on Contributors	ix
Acknowledgements	xiii
1 Introduction: The Difference That Time Makes Elizabeth Barry with Margery Vibe Skagen	1
2 On Not Knowing How to Feel Helen Small	17
3 Ageing in the Anthropocene: The View From and Beyond Margaret Drabble's The Dark Flood Rises Kathleen Woodward	37
4 Age and Anachronism in Contemporary Dystopian Fiction Sarah Falcus	65
5 Grandpaternalism: Kipling's Imperial Care Narrative Jacob Jewusiak	87
6 "I Could Turn Viper Tomorrow": Challenging Reproductive Futurism in Merle Collins's The Colour of Forgetting Emily Kate Timms	105
7 Critical Interests and Critical Endings: Dementia, Personhood and End of Life in Matthew Thomas's We Are Not Ourselves Elizabeth Barry	129
8 Self-Help in the Historical Landscape of Ageing, Dementia, Work and Gender: Narrative Duplicities and Literature in a "Changing Place Called Old Age" David Amigoni	149
9 Toying with the Spool: Happiness in Old Age in Samuel Beckett's Krapp's Last Tape Peter Svare Valeur	167

Afterword: When Age Studies and Literary-Cultural Studies Converge: Reading "The Figure of the Old Person" in an Era of Ageism Margaret Morganroth Gullette	189
Index	203