

Contents

List of illustrations	vii
List of contributors	viii
Acknowledgements	xii
Introduction	1
JOHN E. PETROVIC AND BEDRETTIN YAZAN
1 Confronting language fetishism in practice	7
WILLIAM SIMPSON AND JOHN P. O'REGAN
2 Language as instrument, resource, and maybe capital, but not commodity: A Marxian clarification	24
JOHN E. PETROVIC AND BEDRETTIN YAZAN
3 Language, context, and economic value: An interactionist approach	41
KENNETH MCGILL
4 Misconceptions of economics and political economy in sociolinguistic research	56
FRANÇOIS GRIN
5 Between voice and voices: Negotiating value among interpreters in Toronto	71
JULIE H. TAY AND SEBASTIAN MUTH
6 "A breathtaking English": Negotiating what counts as distinctive linguistic capital at an elite international school near Barcelona	89
ANDREA SUNYOL
7 Language, ethnicity, and tourism in the making of a Himalayan Tamang village	108
BAL KRISHNA SHARMA

vi Contents

8	When linguistic capital isn't enough: Personality development and English speakerhood as capital in India	127
	KATY HIGHET AND ALFONSO DEL PERCIO
9	Ideologies of multilingualism as an investment and as a marketable commodity among Greek expat families in Luxembourg	144
	NIKOS GOGONAS
10	Names as linguistic capital	164
	PETER K. W. TAN
11	Ideologies of French and commodification: What does meaning making imply for multilinguals in transnational times?	181
	SYLVIE ROY AND JULIE S. BYRD CLARK
	Coda: Issues arising around conceptual and empirical work on the commodification of language	200
	DAVID BLOCK
	Index	212