

---

Contents

---

Foreword	ix
GEORGE HAGMAN, LCSW
Preface	xi
1 Framing the issue	1
2 Painting as affective scaffolding	13
Situatedness, niche construction, and affective scaffolding	14
Painting and multidimensional affective scaffolding	18
Concluding remarks	28
3 The developmental roots of creative being and painting	31
Forging a creative world-relation	32
From creative relating to artistic creativity and painting	41
Concluding remarks	51
4 Vitality	53
It's alive! From Pygmalion to present-day painters	55
The relational and psychological dynamics of vitalistic fantasy	58
The vital potential of paint and the metamorphosis of paintings	63
Existential vitality	69
Concluding remarks	71
5 Oceanic feeling	73
What is the oceanic feeling?	76
The oceanic feeling in painterly creativity	87
Concluding remarks	99

6	Getting it right	101
	The 'it' in getting it right	102
	Pre-sense, ideation, and the struggle to get it right	106
	Selfobject experience and aesthetic resonance	113
	Concluding remarks	118
7	Painting and existential feeling	121
	Shifting realities in Milner's On Not Being Able to Paint	122
	The affective nature of Milner's creative transformation	129
	Existential feeling	133
	Painting an existential orientation	136
	Concluding remarks	138
	Postscript	140
	Bibliography	144
	Index	151