

Contents

Introduction
Matthew Evan Davis and Colin Wilder	1
Challenges and Opportunities
The King's Cabinet Splintered: The King's Cabinet Opened and Digital Mediation
Travis Mullen	9
Lost in Pools of Data: Text Reuse in the Emblem Genre and the Nature of Humanities Research Data
Peter Boot	33
Digital Approaches to Analyzing and Understanding Baroque Literature
Claudia Resch	63
Methods and Insights
A Tale of Two Collectors: Using nodegoat to Map the Connections between the Manuscript Collections of Thomas Phillipps and Alfred Chester Beatty
Toby Burrows	89
TL;DR: An Experimental Application of Text Analysis and Network Analysis to the Study of Historical Library Collections, in Particular the Title Catalogs of Four Libraries in the Western Holy Roman Empire in the Period 1606–1796, Accompanied by Some Methodological Speculations and Ideas for Further Research
Colin Wilder	113
The Implications of Image Manipulation Tools for Petrarch's Philology
Alessandro Zammataro	157
Translation and Print Networks in Seventeenth-Century Britain: From Catalog Entries to Digital Visualizations
Marie-Alice Belle and Marie-France Guénette	195

Collaboration

What's in a Name? Six Degrees of Francis Bacon and Named-Entity Recognition Jessica Marie Otis	237
Remixing the Canon: Shakespeare, Popular Culture, and the Undergraduate Editor Andie Silva	257
Digital Interventions: Towards the Study of Women Artists in the Early Modern Courts Tanja L. Jones	279
Contributors	305