

Contents

List of figures	vii
Notes on contributors	viii
Acknowledgments	xii
Timelines	xiii
Introduction	1
VASSILIKI MARKIDOU AND AFRODITI-MARIA PANAGHIS
Overview: Calvinist statesman, Jesuit martyr: the worlds of Fulke Greville and Robert Southwell	16
SARAH COVINGTON
PART I
Fulke Greville (1554–1628)	39
1 “Freedom Among the Dead”: Greville’s Dedication to Sir Philip Sidney	41
ALISON FINDLAY
2 Reading might make us know: Vulcan’s brothers and Myra’s posies in Greville’s Cælica	57
ELIZABETH MAZZOLA
3 “The Mind of Man is this worlds true dimension”: space, knowledge, and the divine in Fulke Greville’s A Treatie of Humane Learning and A Treatise of Religion	77
RACHEL WHITE

4	Duality and aporia in Greville's political writings ROBERT APPELBAUM	94
5	Monarchy and patriarchy in Fulke Greville's Mustapha BRIAN CUMMINGS	112
6	"A voyce cries out; Reuenge and Liberty " – republicanism and gender in Fulke Greville's Alaham VASSILIKI MARKIDOU	136
PART II
	Robert Southwell (1561–1595)	151
7	"This pompe is prizèd there": Southwell's challenge to courtly identities in "New Prince, New Pompe" THERESA KENNEY	153
8	Complaint as reconciliation in the literary mission of Robert Southwell EMILY A. RANSOM	172
9	Robert Southwell's articulation of self-fashioning AFRODITI-MARIA PANAGHIS	205
10	Southwell's influence: imitations, appropriations, reactions ALISON SHELL	229
	Conclusion VASSILIKI MARKIDOU AND AFRODITI-MARIA PANAGHIS	250
	Index	262