

CONTENTS

Foreword	1
Helen Carr
Prologue: Ways in	3
Helen Carr and Suzannah Lipscomb
1. Why global history matters	17
Peter Frankopan
2. Why history deserves to be at the movies	33
Alex von Tunzelmann
3. Can and should we queer the past?	48
Justin Bengry
4. What is vernacular history?	66
Sarah Churchwell
5. How can we write the history of empire?	84
Maya Jasanoff
6. Glorious memory	101
Dan Hicks

7.	How can we write the history of disability? Jaipreet Virdi	116
8.	Can our emotions have a history? Helen Carr	134
9.	What can prehistory and ancient history tell us about being wise? Bettany Hughes	152
10.	Why diversity in Tudor England matters Onyeka Nubia	169
11.	How can we recover the lost lives of women? Suzannah Lipscomb	178
12.	How do we write the history of religion? Miri Rubin	197
13.	Why family history matters Emily Brand	213
14.	How can museums open doors to the past? Gus Casely-Hayford	230
15.	How making space for Indigenous peoples changes history Leila K. Blackbird and Caroline Dodds Pennock	247
16.	How East Asia's past is shaping the present and future (or why we ignore China and Japan at our peril) Rana Mitter	263
17.	Why history should always be rewritten Charlotte Lydia Riley	280
18.	How literature shapes history Islam Issa	296

