

Contents

Foreword	page ix
Dale C. Allison, Jr.
1 Introduction	1
The Challenge of a Jewish Jesus and Anti-Temple Biases in Scholarship	3
Jewish Partings and the Gospel of Matthew	6
The Gospel of Matthew and the Future of the Quest	13
2 The Demise of “Authenticity” and the Challenge of Methodology	20
The Limitations of the Conventional Criteria	21
Memory Research and the Problem of “Authenticity”	26
Recurrent Attestation in a Triple Context Approach	30
This Study’s Approach and Some Qualifications	38
3 Jesus and the Jerusalem Temple	43
The Historical Jesus and the Temple	45
The Temple in Jesus’s Ministry in Matthew	55
Implications for the Historical Jesus	76
4 Jesus and the Destruction of the Temple	81
Jesus’s Predictions of the Temple’s Destruction	82
Jesus’s Temple Action and Divine Judgment in Matthew	97
Implications for the Historical Jesus	110
5 Jesus, David, and the Temple	115
Jesus and Messianic Traditions	117
Jesus’s Davidic Temple Authority in Matthew	135
Implications for the Historical Jesus	145

6	The Son of David and the Temple-Community	157
	Jesus as the Davidic Messiah and the Ekklēsia as Temple	158
	The Priesthood of the Disciples in Matthew	165
	The Parable of the Wicked Tenants and Temple Imagery	171
	Implications for the Historical Jesus	180
7	Jesus, Sacrifice, and Priesthood	189
	The Last Supper and Temple Traditions	190
	Other Cultic Imagery in the Jesus Tradition	205
	Implications for the Historical Jesus	220
	Concluding Thoughts	234
	Appendix: Matthew within Jewish Partings	239
	Acknowledgments	253
	Bibliography	258
	Index of Primary Sources	285
	Index	305