

Contents

List of Figures	ix
Acknowledgements	xiv
Introduction	1
Biographical background	6
Outline of the book	9
1 Analysis and experience: Artefacts in archaeology and cultural history	16
Archaeological hermeneutics and Karl Otfried Müller	17
Cultural history and Arnold Heeren	23
2 Artefacts and reconstructions of the past	33
Assyria in text	36
Semper's reconstructions	45
Manners and customs	47
Object lessons	53
3 Domestic space and the theory of decorative things	65
Origins of architecture in domestic space	67
Assyrian palaces and sensual luxury	70
Homology between the house and the city	73
Symbolic capacity of the domestic interior	76
Textile origin of the wall	79
4 Interiors and the education of taste	92
Education of taste	93
Taste and the interior	96
Collections and interiors	103

Catalogue of metalwork 108

5 Commodity and the Great Exhibition	122
Semper at the Crystal Palace 123
Global culture and material flows 130
Babylonian confusion 133
The Kunstformenlehre manuscript 137
The whole and the parts 150
6 Artefacts and bodies	157
Ceramics as national fossils 158
Animated appendages 162
Decorations of the body 169
Epilogue	181
Bibliography	191
Index	208