

Contents

List of figures	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
THOMAS BISKUP, BENJAMIN MARSCHKE, ANDREAS PEČAR, and DAMIEN TRICOIRE, Introduction: court and Enlightenment	1
I. Courtly patronage
DAMIEN TRICOIRE and ANDREAS PEČAR, Diderot the courtier? Philosophers and the world of the court in Enlightenment Europe	33
CLARISSA CAMPBELL ORR, Celebrity, status, and gender at the late Hanoverian court: the careers of Charles Burney (1726–1814) and Frances Burney (1752–1840)	69
II. Public sphere
DAMIEN TRICOIRE, “Hey France, your coffee is fing off!” Or how to interpret unauthorized literature in late ancien régime France: courtly patronage and the so-called “Mairobert corpus” (1774–1777)	97
TAL SOKER, Music, taste, and Enlightenment discourse at the Prussian court: the Marburg–Agricola controversy over the relative merits of the French and Italian styles	135
III. Self-representation
PAUL BECKUS, What makes Enlightenment princes enlightened? The representation of Franz of Anhalt-Dessau and Frederick August of Anhalt-Zerbst	161
	vii

LUISE MASLOW, Enlightenment in courtly garden art: ideas and anti-court sociability in the Sanspareil rock garden of Wilhelmine of Bayreuth	181
ALEXEI EVSTRATOV, Clemency in the boudoir: favoritism and imperial virtues at the Russian court (1740s–1790s)	209
ANDREAS ÖNNERFORS, Fraternal kingdom? Freemasonry at the court of Gustav III of Sweden (1772–1792)	231
IV. Projects and reforms
KIRILL OSPOVAT, Sovereignty and the politics of knowledge: Royal Society, Leibniz, Wolff, and Peter the Great's Academy of Sciences	259
GIJS VERSTEEGEN, Continuity and change in courtly and Enlightenment discourse on education in Spain: Gaspar Melchor de Jovellanos and the moral regeneration of the nobility	281
SIMON KARSTENS, The king is dead—long live the Enlightenment? Viennese court culture, networks, and enlightened reforms in periods of transition (1765–1795)	299
Bibliography	319
Index	357