

Jacob A. Rodriguez investigates which gospels tended to keep company with one another in early Christian reading practices.

Engaging a variety of second-century gospel combinations, he identifies a center of gravity in early gospel reading consisting of the Synoptics and John.