

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	ix
Chapter One. Methodological reflections	1
1.1. Introduction	1
1.2. The UEM Program for Cooperation between German and Foreign Language Churches, 1998–2008	8
1.3. Other European Protestant church responses to migrant churches: A short overview	12
1.4. Description of my research	18
1.5. Reflecting my own role as agent and researcher	22
1.6. Interpretative paradigms	25
Chapter Two. The field of study	33
2.1. Terminology: “Migrant churches”	33
2.2. Delimiting “pentecostal / charismatic”	36
2.3. Constructing a pentecostal / charismatic discourse field	39
2.4. Migrant churches: Categorizations	47
2.5. Historical dynamics: Foundation and development of migrant churches	53
2.6. Migrant churches as part of a globalized discourse network	56
Chapter Three. The role of the pastor: The relationship to one’s own congregation	61
3.1. The pastor as father and shepherd	62
3.1.1. The shepherd: Mediator between God and the congregation	62
3.1.2. The authority of the shepherd	65
3.1.3. “To stay with God always”—The spiritual life of a shepherd	70
3.1.4. Sacrificing oneself for the congregation and living as a role model	74
3.1.5. Becoming a shepherd: Call, training, ordination and gifts of the Spirit	77

3.2. Defending one's call: Biographical stories as legitimation narratives	83
3.2.1. Call narratives in a pentecostal / charismatic context	84
3.2.2. No legitimation narrative: Observations and possible reasons	87
3.2.3. Legitimation narratives I: Called by a prophetic word	90
3.2.4. Legitimation narratives II: Deciding for the ministry after a miracle experience	94
3.2.5. Legitimation narratives III: Called by visions and dreams	98
3.2.6. Legitimation narratives IV: Woman pastors	104
3.3. Mediators of divine power in a market situation: Observations and analysis of the pastoral role.....	116
3.3.1. The market situation: Undermining pastoral authority	117
3.3.2. Asserting pastoral authority	122
3.3.3. Growing into authority: Calling and ordination	127
3.4. Summary: Mediators of divine power in a market situation .	130
Chapter Four. Following the call: Expatriation narratives	133
4.1. Theoretical framework: Some considerations	133
4.2. Intertwined call and expatriation narratives	143
4.2.1. 'Circular' stories: How the call was realized after all ..	144
4.2.2. 'Oscillating' narratives: How the call became clear over time.....	158
4.2.3. Called after expatriation	168
4.2.4. Struggling to understand call and expatriation	172
4.2.5. Concluding remarks: Intertwined call and expatriation narratives	177
4.3. Expatriation as consequence of the call.....	178
4.3.1. Independent charismatic missionaries: Success stories	178
4.3.2. Missionaries sent by pentecostal churches	198
4.3.3. Concluding remarks: Expatriation as consequence of the call	208
4.4. Pastoral call and expatriation not connected	208
4.4.1. V.K.: For me it was so wonderful to go to Germany ..	208
4.4.2. A.M., P.S., I.A.: Asylum in Germany	215

4.4.3. Spiritual interpretation instead of expatriation narrative	219
4.5. Expatriation narratives: Some final observations	220
Chapter Five. Being on a mission: The relationship to the outside world	225
5.1. "What is your mission?" Observations from the short interviews	225
5.2. Missionary practice: Evangelizing Germans	229
5.2.1. Street evangelism	229
5.2.2. Tracts	232
5.2.3. Gospel music	234
5.2.4. Other means	234
5.3. Conceptualizing evangelism in interdenominational dialogue: The long interviews	236
5.3.1. Locating oneself globally: Sent to the world	237
5.3.2. Describing one's message	243
5.3.3. Reflections on contextualization	248
5.4. Imagining Germany and Europe	254
5.4.1. Restoring a ruined church	255
5.4.2. "Bringing back" the Gospel	259
5.4.3. The German nation in the economy of salvation	262
5.4.4. Territorial spirits	267
5.4.5. Summary notes: Imagining Germany and Europe	269
5.5. Conceptualizing evangelism in the global pentecostal / charismatic network: The 'spiritual warfare' paradigm	271
5.5.1. Evangelism in the framework of spiritual warfare: The anglophone West African Example	272
5.5.2. Evangelism in the framework of 'spiritual warfare': Concretizations	286
5.6. Conclusion: Evangelism, inculturation and clashing paradigms	301
Chapter Six. Consequences	305
6.1. The current situation	305
6.2. Dialogue fields: A description	311
6.2.1. Ministerial authority	311
6.2.2. Immigration	313
6.2.3. Mission and evangelism	318

6.3. Ecclesiology and the politics of difference: Who defines Christianity in Europe?	323
6.4. The functional question: Does a missionary self-image further or hinder integration?	329
6.5. The theological question: Are European churches ready to be evangelized?	334
Appendix. Expatriation narratives	337
Bibliography	409
Subject Index	425
Index of Names, Places, and Terms	427