

Table of contents

Chapter 1. Introduction	1
1. A first approach to evidential meaning	2
1.1. Basic notions in the description of evidentials	2
1.2. Deixis	9
2. The discovery of evidential meaning and evidentials in (German) linguistics	15
2.1. The status of evidential meaning in present-day German	16
2.2. The diachronic development of evidentials in German	20
3. Hypotheses and theoretical foundations	23
4. Methodology and corpora	27
4.1. The data sources of the present study	28
4.2. Principles and method of the corpus study	33
5. Structure of the book	37
Chapter 2. Evidentiality - definitions and delimitations	40
1. Evidentials, evidential strategies and pre-evidentials	40
1.1. Terminological distinctions in synchronic perspective	41
1.2. Terminological distinctions in diachronic perspective	46
1.3. The dispute on the status of evidential expressions in European languages	50
2. Intra-evidential distinctions	52
2.1. Direct and indirect evidentials	54
2.2. Sub-classifying the indirect branch	59
2.3. Distinguishing quotatives from mediated evidentials	66
3. Summary: classification of evidential distinctions	73
Chapter 3. Evidentiality and modality - drawing the lines	75
1. Prior suggestions on the relation between evidentials and modality	76
2. The common deictic nature and the different realizations of source concepts	81
3. Diachronic explication of distinctions between evidentials and epistemics	88
4. Typological issues	90

5.	Areas of overlap between evidentiality and epistemic modality	91
Chapter 4. Grammar and grammaticalization		97
1.	Obligatoriness and paradigmatic organization	97
2.	Grammaticalization parameters and German evidentials	105
2.1.	Lehmann's grammaticalization parameters	105
2.2.	Degree of grammaticalization of evidential drohen ~ a detailed study	108
2.3.	The degrees of grammaticalization of versprechen , scheinen and werden	116
3.	Summary	122
Chapter 5. Scales and scenarios of grammaticalization		124
1.	Regularities in semantic and functional changes	124
1.1.	Metaphorization and metonymization scales	124
1.2.	Scheme retention and reinterpretation	128
1.3.	Successive semantic-functional stages	132
2.	Dealing with ambiguity and context dependence	136
3.	Stages, contexts and constructions	143
4.	Summary	158
Chapter 6. The four evidential constructions in present-day German		159
1.	Werden & 'm£\n\ t\ Q	159
1.1.	Relevant construction types with werden in present-day German	159
1.2.	Semantic diversity of werden & infinitive and its core semantics	163
1.3.	Temporal reference or modal evaluation: the core semantics of werden & infinitive	171
1.4.	What is evidential about the core semantics of werden & infinitive?	173
2.	Scheinen & zw -infinitive	177
2.1.	Relevant construction types with scheinen in present-day German	177
2.2.	Semantic diversity of scheinen & zu -infinitive	180
2.3.	Lexical versus evidential scheinen : some (more) crucial differences	185

2.4.	Two types of evidential scheinen and their conceptual relationship	189
3.	Drohen & zw-infinitive	191
3.1.	Relevant construction types of drohen in present-day German	192
3.2.	Lexical versus evidential drohen	196
3.3.	The perceptual inferential value of evidential drohen	200
4.	Versprechen & zw-infinitive	205
4.1.	Relevant construction types of versprechen in present-day German	206
4.2.	Lexical versus evidential versprechen	210
4.3.	Drohen & zw-infinitive versus versprechen & zw-infinitive	212
Chapter 7. Intermediate summary		218
1.	The inferential evidential paradigm in present-day German	218
1.1.	Formal characteristics of a paradigm	219
1.2.	Conceptual structure of the paradigm	221
2.	German evidential system in a typological perspective	225
Chapter 8. Diachronic corpus study		229
1.	Werden & infinitive	231
1.1.	Previous work on the development of werden & infinitive	232
1.2.	Werden in the history of German	237
1.3.	Werden in Old High German	240
1.4.	Werden in Middle High German	243
1.5.	Werden in Early New High German	247
2.	Scheinen & zw-infinitive	251
2.1.	Scheinen in the history of German	252
2.2.	Scheinen in Old High German	254
2.3.	Scheinen in Middle High German	255
2.4.	Scheinen in Early New High German	257
2.5.	Scheinen in the 18 th century	263
3.	Drohen & zw-infinitive	268
3.1.	The development of drohen & zw-infinitive: a short survey	268
3.2.	Drohen in Old and Middle High German	270
3.3.	Drohen in Early New High German	274
3.4.	Drohen in the 18 th and 19 th centuries	276
4.	Versprechen & zw-infinitive	284
4.1.	Versprechen in the history of German and its development up to Early New High German	286

viii Table of contents

4.2.	Versprechen in the 18 th century	289
4.3.	Versprechen in the 19 th century	293
Chapter 9. Summary: the diachrony of the four constructions		299
1.	Relevant semantic and functional changes	299
1.1.	Metaphorization and metonymization scales	299
1.2.	Scheme retention and reinterpretation	303
1.3.	Successive semantic-functional stages	308
2.	Stages, contexts and constructions	311
3.	Common grammaticalization path	320
