

T&T Clark Studies in Systematic Theology is a series of monographs in the field of Christian doctrine, with a particular focus on constructive engagement with the subject through historical analysis or contemporary restatement.

'In this fine book Jason Goroncy engages in a critical and appreciative assessment of the theological work of P. T. Forsyth by directing our attention to the ways in which Forsyth understands divine action in terms of the Lord's Prayer's first petition. This focus serves well the task of exploring the richness of Forsyth's work. Goroncy's beautifully crafted prose and astute theological judgement combine in a compelling case that Forsyth deserves to be reckoned with still.'

MURRAY RAE, UNIVERSITY OF OTAGO, NEW ZEALAND

'P. T. Forsyth (1848-1921) has been described as a "Barthian before Barth" (not entirely accurate, but a great compliment to Barth). His works enjoyed a revival in the middle years of the twentieth century, and now we are in the midst of a second great awakening inspired by Trevor Hart and others in the mid-1990s. Since then articles and monographs have appeared, and among the best is this book by Jason Goroncy. He has fastened upon the thus far insufficiently-studied theme of sanctification which pervades Forsyth's works. His treatment is stimulating, his research is unusually thorough, his style is fluent. The result is an important book which should be read by ministers of religion and church members, as well as by professional toilers in the theological vineyard—especially, perhaps, by any who have somehow momentarily mislaid the gospel.'

ALAN P. F. SELL, UNIVERSITY OF WALES TRINITY SAINT DAVID, UK

JASON GORONCY (PhD, St Andrews) is Lecturer and Dean of Studies at the Knox Centre for Ministry and Leadership in Dunedin, New Zealand.