

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgments	xii
Abbreviations and Symbols	xiii
Chapter 1. A Theory of Tense, Aspect, and Modality	1
1.1. Pre-modern Treatments of Tense and Aspect	1
1.2. The R-Point and Modern Tense Theory	4
1.2.1. Jespersen’s Universal Tense Theory	4
1.2.2. Reichenbach’s R-Point Theory	7
1.2.3. Revisions of Reichenbach’s R-Point Theory	10
1.2.3.1. Hornstein: Reducing R-Point Redundancies	10
1.2.3.2. Bull: Multiple R-Points	12
1.2.3.3. Comrie: A Compromise R-Point Theory	13
1.2.3.4. Declerck: A Bifurcated R-Point	15
1.2.4. Summary: The R-Point and Tense Theory	18
1.3. A Primer on Aspect	18
1.3.1. Situation Aspect	19
1.3.2. Phasal Aspect	25
1.3.3. Viewpoint Aspect	26
1.4. The R-Point in Tense-Aspect Theory	28
1.4.1. M. R. Johnson: The Triadic Relationship of E, R, and S	28
1.4.2. W. Klein: The R-Point as “Topic Time”	31
1.4.3. Olsen: Multiple R-Points	33
1.4.4. Summary: The R-Point and Tense-Aspect Theory	36
1.5. The R-Point and Discourse	36
1.5.1. Explaining R-Point Movement with Viewpoint Aspect	37
1.5.2. Explaining R-Point Movement with Situation Aspect	38
1.5.3. Explaining R-Point Movement with (Un)boundedness	41
1.5.4. Summary: The R-Point in Discourse	41
1.6. A Primer on Modality	42
1.6.1. Backgrounds of Modality: Grammar, Logic, and Speech Acts	42
1.6.2. Defining Modality	45
1.6.3. Categorizing Modality	47
1.6.3.1. Classifications of Modalities	47
1.6.3.2. Modality and Speech Acts	52
1.6.3.3. Modality and Mood Systems	53
1.6.4. Conclusion: Modality and TAM Systems	54

1.7. A Model of Tense, Aspect, and Modality	55
1.7.1. Semantics and TAM	55
1.7.2. Time and Space: Temporality and TAM	57
1.7.3. Aspect and Event Time	57
1.7.3.1. Situation Aspect and Event Time	58
1.7.3.2. Phasal Aspect and Event Time	62
1.7.3.3. Viewpoint Aspect and Event Time	65
1.7.4. Tense and Unilinear Time	68
1.7.5. Modality and Alternative Times	70
1.7.6. The Interaction of Tense, Aspect, and Modality	72
1.8. Conclusion	75
Chapter 2. Tense, Aspect, and Modality in Biblical Hebrew	77
2.1. A Primer on the Biblical Hebrew Verbal System	77
2.2. The Establishment of the “Standard” Theory of the Biblical Hebrew Verbal System	83
2.2.1. Before Ewald and S. R. Driver	83
2.2.2. Ewald’s “Standard” Theory	86
2.2.3. S. R. Driver’s “Extended Standard” Theory	90
2.2.4. Summary	93
2.3. The Biblical Hebrew Verbal System in Historical and Comparative Perspective	93
2.3.1. The Linguistic Context of the BHVS	95
2.3.2. East Semitic and the West Semitic Verbal System	97
2.3.2.1. The Akkadian Verbal System	97
2.3.2.2. The West Semitic Verbal System in Light of Akkadian	99
2.3.3. Ugaritic and the Northwest Semitic Verbal System	105
2.3.3.1. The Ugaritic Verbal System	105
2.3.3.2. The Northwest Semitic Verbal System in Light of Ugaritic	107
2.3.4. Amarna and the Canaanite Verbal System	110
2.3.4.1. Peripheral Akkadian and the Amarna Letters	111
2.3.4.2. The Canaanite Verbal System in Light of Amarna	112
2.3.5. Summary: The BHVS in Light of Historical-Comparative Data	118
2.4. Biblical Hebrew Verb Theory in the Last Half Century	121
2.4.1. Aspect-Prominent Theory	122
2.4.1.1. Rundgren’s Privative Opposition Theory	122
2.4.1.2. Meyer’s Diachronic Systemüberlagerung Theory	124
2.4.1.3. Michel’s Synchronic Theory	126
2.4.1.4. Summary	130
2.4.2. Tense-Prominent Theory	130

2.4.2.1. Tense and Diachrony	131
2.4.2.2. Tense and Syntax	132
2.4.2.3. Relative Tense and Modality	135
2.4.2.4. Summary	148
2.4.3. Discourse-Prominent Theory	149
2.4.3.1. Discourse Analysis of Biblical Literature	150
2.4.3.2. Discourse Analysis and the Semantics of the BHVS	156
2.4.3.3. Conclusion	171
2.5. Hebrew Verb Theory at the Beginning of the 21st Century	172

Chapter 3. The Semantics of the Biblical Hebrew Verbal System . . . 176

3.1. Theoretical Considerations	176
3.1.1. Basic Principles	176
3.1.2. Goals of a Semantic Theory	182
3.1.3. Diachronic Typology and Grammaticalization	185
3.1.4 Concluding Remarks and a Look Ahead	190
3.2. The Expression of Aspect in BH	191
3.2.1. Phasal Aspect: The Lexical-Semantic Dimension	191
3.2.2. Situation Aspect: The Stative-Dynamic Opposition	194
3.2.3. Viewpoint Aspect: The Perfective-Imperfective Opposition and the Progressive	199
3.2.3.1. Perfective Qatal	201
3.2.3.2. Imperfective Yiqtol	217
3.2.3.3. Participle as Adjectival Encoding of Event Predicates	223
3.3. The Expression of Modality in BH	233
3.3.1. Word Order in BH: An Overview	235
3.3.2. Directive-Volitive Mood System	237
3.3.3. Realis-Irealis Mood Opposition	244
3.3.3.1. Irealis Yiqtol	244
3.3.3.2. Irealis Qatal (Including So-Called Wəqatal)	249
3.4. The Expression of Temporality in BH	256
3.4.1. The Past Narrative Wayyyiqtol Conjugation	256
3.4.2. The “Default Pattern” of Temporal Interpretation in BH	265
3.5. The TAM System of BH in Diachronic-Typological Perspective	268

Chapter 4. Semantics and Discourse Pragmatics of the Biblical Hebrew Verbal System 272

4.1. On Discourse-Pragmatic Approaches to BH	272
4.2. Some Elements of Discourse Structure	275
4.2.1. Temporal Succession	275
4.2.2. Foreground-Background	283
4.2.3. The Relationship between Temporal Succession and Foreground	286
4.3. The Semantics of Temporality in BH Discourse	288

4.3.1. Wayyiqtol and Narrative Discourse	289
4.3.2. Wayyiqtol in Poetry	298
4.3.3. Irrealis Qatal and Non-narrative Discourse	304
4.3.4. Discourse בִּנְיִם and בַּתְּרֵבָה	309
4.4. The Temporal and Modal Interpretation of Discourse	312
4.4.1. 1 Samuel 8 (Prose Narrative)	326
4.4.2. Exodus 12 (Irrealis Instruction)	332
4.5. Conclusion	337
Works Cited	339
Indexes	375
Index of Authors	375
Index of Scripture	380