

Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Prologue xv

Issues xvii • Chapters xxii

Chapter 1

INTRODUCTION: THE DANGERS OF HOME—

ETHNOGRAPHICAL AND CONCEPTUAL EXPLORATIONS 1

Witchcraft: The pitfalls of a notion 3 • Academic discourse and the dangers of a panacea notion 7 • Witchcraft and the dangers within 13 • Continuity and new beginnings 17 • Intimacy and the uncanny 23 • The struggle over trust 28

Chapter 2

WITCHCRAFT, INTIMACY, AND CHANGING

PERCEPTIONS OF DISTANCE: AFRICAN EXAMPLES 35

Changing parameters of intimacy and distance 36
An urban elite attacked by witchcraft 39 • Urban witchcraft attacks the village 42 • Witchcraft brings the village to the city 46
Witchcraft, distance, and the post-cold war crisis 50 • Feymen and their magic money: Beyond kinship? 54 • “Bushfallers,” transcontinental migration, and the stretching of kinship/witchcraft 59
Intimacy and new distances 62

Chapter 3

TO TRUST A WITCH 69

Trust: Rational, ontological, or historical? 69
Trust and doubt: The recourse to the nganga (healer) 71 • Ambiguities of the nganga 73 • Modern nganga and the fear of charlatans 82
A new solution: God’s work as the basis for ultimate trust 89
Everyday ways of coping 93

Chapter 4

COMPARATIVE PERSPECTIVES I: WITCHES, NEIGHBORS, AND THE CLOSURE OF "THE HOUSE" IN EUROPE 103

Historians and anthropologists on witchcraft: Rapprochements and distancing 104 • Witchcraft and state formation: Europe and Africa 107 • Witchcraft, proximity, and kinship in early modern Europe 111 • An African reading 117 • The dangers of intimacy: Neighbors or family? 123 • Favret-Saada on the Bocage: Désorceleurs denouncing neighbors 124 • Closing or stretching "the house" 130

Chapter 5

COMPARATIVE PERSPECTIVES II: CANDOMBLÉ
DE BAHIA—BETWEEN WITCHCRAFT AND RELIGION 135
Candomblé: Commonalities with and differences from Africa 136
History: From witchcraft to religion—The struggle for purity 139
National identity and regional politics 147 • Feticaria versus purity 151 • Candomblé on the frontier: Everyday struggles against evil 156 • Candomblé: The occult as a basis for trust? 160

Interlude

FURTHER COMPARISONS: MELANESIA AND JAVA—
ONTOLOGICAL DIFFERENCES OR APHASIA
BEFORE "THE UNCANNY"? 165
Africa and Melanesia: Different ontologies? 166
Java: "Post-Suharto witches" and the uncanny 172

Chapter 6

BACK TO TRUST: NEW DISTANCES, NEW CHALLENGES 181
Witchcraft on screen: Changing parameters of intimacy and trust 183 • Pentecostalism, the devil, and the scaling up of witchcraft 186 • Child witches in Kinshasa: Transformations of witchcraft and kinship 192 • Satan and the spirits in Islamic Africa 197 • Mediation, increase of scale, and trust: African specificities 200 • Une didactique contre la sorcellerie? 210

Notes 215

References 267

Index 287