

CONTENTS

List of illustrations	XIII
Preface to the Third Edition	XIV

THE BEGINNINGS OF ENGLISH:

Old and Middle English 600–1485

Preface	3
Contexts and conditions	4
Personal and religious voices	8
Language note: The earliest figurative language	11
Long poems	12
French influence and English affirmation	16
Language and dialect	20
Language note: The expanding lexicon: Chaucer and Middle English	23
From anonymity to individualism	24
Women's voices	27
Fantasy	29
Travel	30
Geoffrey Chaucer	31
Langland, Gower and Lydgate	37
The Scottish Chaucerians	41
Mediaeval drama	43
Malory and Skelton	46
Language note: Prose and sentence structure	48

THE RENAISSANCE: 1485–1660

Contexts and conditions	53
Language note: Expanding world: expanding lexicon	58

Renaissance poetry	59
Drama before Shakespeare	63
From the street to a building – the Elizabethan theatre	68
Renaissance prose	70
Translations of the Bible	76
Language note: The language of the Bible	77
Shakespeare	79
The plays	80
The sonnets	90
Language note: Shakespeare's language	93
The Metaphysical poets	94
The Cavalier poets	100
Jacobean drama – to the closure of the theatres, 1642	102
Ben Jonson	102
Masques	103
Other early seventeenth-century dramatists	105
Domestic tragedy	110
City comedy	110
The end of the Renaissance theatre	111

RESTORATION TO ROMANTICISM: 1660–1789

Contexts and conditions	115
Language note: Changing patterns of 'thou' and 'you'	118
Milton	119
Restoration drama	125
Rochester	134
Dryden	135
Pope	139
Journalism	141
Scottish Enlightenment, diarists and Gibbon	144
The novel	147
Criticism	160
Language note: The expanding lexicon – 'standards of English'	161
Johnson	162
Sterne, Smollett and Scottish voices	164
Drama after 1737	172
Poetry after Pope	173
Language note: Metrical patterns	179
Melancholy, madness and nature	180

The Gothic and the sublime	185
Language note: Point of view	188

THE ROMANTIC PERIOD: 1789–1832

Contexts and conditions	193
Blake, Wordsworth and Coleridge	198
Language note: Reading Wordsworth	202
Language note: The 'real' language of men	206
Keats	208
Shelley	212
Byron	216
Rights and voices and poetry	220
Clare	222
Romantic prose	224
The novel in the Romantic period	227
Jane Austen	229
Language note: Jane Austen's English	232
Scott	233
From Gothic to Frankenstein	237
The Scottish regional novel	238

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY: 1832–1900

Contexts and conditions	243
Dickens	245
Language note: Reading Dickens	250
Victorian thought and Victorian novels	252
The Brontës and Eliot	261
'Lady' novelists	265
Late Victorian novels	267
Victorian fantasy	273
Wilde and Aestheticism	277
Hardy and James	280
Victorian poetry	285
The Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood and after	297
Language note: The developing uses of dialects in literature	302
Victorian drama	303
Language note: Reading the language of theatre and drama	306

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY: 1900–45

Contexts and conditions	311
Modern poetry to 1945	314
Language note: Reading Hardy	315
Later Hardy	317
Georgian and Imagist poetry	320
First World War poetry	322
Irish writing	325
W.B. Yeats	326
T.S. Eliot	328
Language note: Modernist poetic syntax	333
Popular poets	335
Thirties poets	335
Language note: Reading Auden	340
Scottish and Welsh poetry	341
Twentieth-century drama to 1945	343
Irish drama	345
D.H. Lawrence	347
Popular and poetic drama	348
The novel to 1945	350
Subjectivity: the popular tradition	351
The Kailyard School	352
Provincial novels	353
Social concerns	354
Light novels	355
Genre fiction	356
Modernism and the novel	357
Forster	358
Conrad and Ford	360
D.H. Lawrence	365
Woolf and Joyce	372
Language note: Irish English, nationality and literature	380
Novels of the First World War	382
Aldous Huxley	383
Rooms of their own	384
Ireland	388
Early Greene and Waugh	389
Thirties novelists	391

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY: 1945 to 2000

Contexts and conditions	397
Drama since 1945	400
Language note: Drama and everyday language	401
Poetry of the Second World War	417
Poetry since 1945	418
Martians and gorgons	431
The novel since 1945	439
Writing for younger readers – so-called children’s literature	439
Later Greene	441
Post-war Waugh	442
Orwell	443
Dialogue novels	446
Language note: Discourse, titles and dialogism	448
The mid-century novel	449
Amis, father and son	452
Golding	454
Fowles and Frayn	455
Novel sequences	457
The campus novel	458
Falling in love	460
. . . and blood	464
Muriel Spark and others	465
Margaret Drabble	467
Lessing, Hill, Dunmore and Weldon	468
Iris Murdoch	470
Internationalism	471
Rotten Englishes	473
New modes of modern writing	480
Language note: English, Scots and Scotland	487
The contemporary Scottish novel	488
The contemporary Irish novel	494
Endings and beginnings	495

THE TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY

Contexts and conditions	501
The novel since 2000	502
How to be both	504
States of the nation	505

Who would want to stay?	513
the freedom of all of england here in my heorte	515
Wars and times and perspectives	520
Genre fiction	522
All Fun and Games Until Somebody Loses an Eye	523
Poetry since 2000	524
Drama since 2000	527
Twenty-first century drama – Blasted to Hangmen	528
Endings and beginnings	535
Timelines	537
Acknowledgements	556
Select bibliography	560
Key Texts	571
Index	591