Miller, Granville George, Judge of the District Court, Queensland, is the youngest son of the late Robert Miller, serjeant-at law, and was born in London in 1847, and educated at Trinity Hall, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. in 1874. He entered at the Inner Temple in Nov. 1873, and was called to the Bar in Nov. 1876, when he at once emigrated to Queensland, where from 1879 to 1882 he held the office of Master of Titles. In 1882 he was appointed Crown Prosecutor, and in November of that year Judge of the Central District Court.
