“2020 was supposed to be the year when we analyze great global achievements for nature conservation from each country and from every one of us; a year of possibilities and sharing solutions for the new decade ‘a decade dedicated to revitalizing ecosystems’. The new challenges that prevented us from gathering and jointly celebrating our advancement are the same one that will make us stronger. This is the right time for us as ecologists to remind that every challenge is the start of a new adaptation and adaptations are the source of prosperity and greater strength. The skills we developed, the new ways of living and the cooperation we established; as well as the new focus as we understand that we are part of nature brings us closer to solutions offered by nature”
