FROM THE DEAN...

LSH: Is it your sense that the University of Pennsylvania Law School has taken on a different spirit and ambiance since the Mundheim Deanship began almost four years ago?

Dean Mundheim: To a certain extent the Law School is a different place than it was a few years ago. Externally, Vice Dean Margo Marshak, Building Administrator Pat Pancoast and Assistant Dean Alice B. Lonsdorf have tried to spruce up the physical appearance of the School, and I also think that there is a more positive spirit here. We have a better sense of the problems which we will be facing in the future, and we look with confidence to solving them.

LSH: What problems did you pinpoint as most urgent when you assumed the Law School Deanship?

Dean Mundheim: There were a number of problems that needed to be addressed. The most important was the need to rebuild the Faculty. We were faced with the prospect of losing seven of our most senior Faculty to retirement. In addition, other law schools attempted to and, in fact, were successful at luring away some of our Faculty. This past year, two of our Faculty members took on deanship roles at other law schools. Not only did we have to replace those who left but, with the growth of our student body to 720, our then 26person Faculty was insufficient to serve the needs of the students. Our student-Faculty ratio was roughly 28:1, which was much larger than the ratio enjoyed by most of our peer schools.

We also had a substantial problem with The Biddle Law Library. When I took on the Deanship, I read a Faculty committee report which pointed out that our library had not been getting the resources it needed. Indeed, a study conducted in 1980-81 ranked Biddle 57th out of the 60 American law school libraries surveyed in expenditures for books and materials. Upon the retirement of Richard Sloane, The Biddle Law Librarian, it seemed to me that two courses of action were necessary to help Biddle: strong, new leadership had to be brought in and substantial new resources had to be provided.

Student financial aid proved to be a third problem facing the School. The cost of attending law school increased at a substantially greater rate than our ability to find scholarship funds. As a result, students were being forced to borrow money or look to family sources to finance their legal education. Those pressures severely threatened our need-blind admissions policy—a policy which has been at the heart of the School's ability to attract the highly-talented, very-diverse student body of which we boast today.

LSH: Fortunately for the School, you have addressed these issues. Specifically, could you please report on the progress made in the area of Faculty building?

Dean Mundheim: We have made progress under the energetic leadership of Stephen B. Burbank and, last year, Steve Schulhofer. We have made some first-rate appointments. Among our "mature" scholars, we have acquired Hank Gutman [Professor Harry L. Gutman] who came from the University of Virginia Law School. Hank brings extensive experience as a private practitioner and as a government policy-maker in the Tax Legislative Counsel's Office of the U.S. Treasury. Hank has taken full-hold here and, indeed, will chair the Appointments Committee this year. Fritz Kubler [Professor Friedrich K. Kubler] from the University of Frankfurt is a distinguished appointment. He is an internationally acclaimed scholar, who brings the Law School an unparalleled opportunity to strengthen ties outside of this country. We also look forward to the strengths which Ned Spaeth [The Honorable Edmund B. Spaeth, Jr.] will bring to the Law School when he takes his position as Senior Fellow on January 1, 1986. In addition, we have made a series of strong appointments at the entry-level of which I am enormously proud. If the appointments process can continue at the same pace and with the same quality as it has in the last two years, we will build a faculty second to none in this country.

LSH: What do you project as the potential size of the Faculty? Will it not be very costly to support a substantially larger one?

Dean Mundheim: The Law School Board of Overseers has approved a goal of increasing the size of the Faculty to forty. A faculty of forty would give us an 18:1 student-Faculty ratio and would provide the critical mass in numbers to enable the faculty to undertake the collegial effort in research and writing which would, once again, allow this Faculty to be viewed as a leading force in American legal education.

The support of additional Faculty is very expensive and, for the most part, we look to our general budget—as supplemented by Annual Giving—for such funds. However, an increase of the sort we hope to achieve realistically requires the establishment of a number of fully-endowed chairs. The Overseers are working with the Law School to raise funds to endow a Dean's chair, three chairs for senior Faculty and two chairs for junior Faculty. Securing the funding for such chairs is a substantial task and will take a great deal of work, but I am committed to seeing this task accomplished.

The law school world is highly competitive and, as we achieve our goal of building the best Faculty in the country, other law schools will seek to steal our stars from us. A major inducement for attracting and keeping faculty here is the Law School's ability to provide adequate support for summer research, for research and secretarial assistance and for needed materials and travel. We are trying to create a series of funds which will provide that kind of faculty support. The Thomas D. McBride Fund recently was created to support the study of Criminal Law and Criminology. Gladys Pearlstine has established the Raymond M. Pearlstine Fund to honor Ray [Raymond Pearlstine, '32] for support of work in the area of Professional Responsibility and the Legal Profession. The Cozen Family [Stephen A. Cozen, '64] Fund To Honor Professor A. Leo Levin and The Fred Carr Fund For Building the Faculty are recently created funds which also make special support available to the Faculty. The establishment of such funds sends a message. It tells Faculty members that the Law School is highly supportive of their work. The ability to send that message retains and attracts faculty.

LSH: The Biddle Law Library, through the leadership and efforts of both you and Director, Professor Elizabeth S. Kelly, has been and is in the process of undergoing tremendous positive changes. What has been happening in this very important Law School activity?

Dean Mundheim: First, persuading Elizabeth Kelly to direct the Library was one of the School's important recent achievements. Liz brings great knowledge and great energy to the Library together with the determination to bring Biddle back to a position of leadership. She possesses the wonderful quality of being able to listen to people's problems and difficulties and, then, find solutions for them. Certainly, without a substantial expansion of resources, Liz cannot rebuild our collections or meet the challenges of an era where data is increasingly accessed and transmitted by electronic means. We have tried to direct more resources to the Library by allocating funds from the general Law School budget and, in addition, under the leadership of Sylvan M. Cohen, '38, The Friends of Biddle Law Library has been reinvigorated. When Sylvan first took on that job, the Friends of Biddle produced an annual income of $18,000, all of which was spent solely for the purchase of books and materials. Over the last two years, the Friends of Biddle Law Library has raised roughly $175 thousand for the purchase of books and materials.

A most exciting event to take place next year will be the Biddle Library's celebration of its one hundredth birthday. Plans for a gala party to be held on Saturday, June 7, 1986 are well underway. That promises to be a happy event to which, I hope, many Alumni will come. In connection with this birthday event, a determined effort under Bill White's [William White, '38] leadership is being made to present the Biddle Law Library with its first substantial endowment —a $2 million birthday present.

LSH: There has been a major re-thinking of the Law School curriculum under the creative leadership of Professor Robert A. Gorman. This is an important development in the School's changing image, wouldn't you say?

Dean Mundheim: Most certainly. Bob Gorman has devoted thought and energy to putting together a 70-page, extremely useful report on the condition of the curriculum. This report provided the background for discussions which were held last year with students, with Faculty, with Alumni and with the Overseers. We still are discussing proposals for the second and third years, but we have made a number of innovations in the first-year program which are very exciting.

First, we have initiated a program enabling each first-year student to work in a group of 15 or fewer students. These groups are taught by a professor as an adjunct to one of the first-year lecture courses. Second, we have created a set of four elective offerings for the first-year-one of which may be chosen by each student. The electives are designed to provide perspective for the students. This year the electives are Income Security, which provides exposure to some of the legal problems relating particularly to poor people; Legal History; Legal Philosophy; and Law and Economics. A third innovation grows out of moving the examination period from after to before Christmas, leaving us a two-week open period. Rather than extending and lengthening the spring term courses, we plan to utilize that two-week period to provide for intensive work in legal research and writing and to offer thirty hours of instruction in problems of Professional Responsibility and the Legal Profession. That Program is under the leadership of [Professor] Curtis R. Reitz, '56 and involves [Practice Professor] Douglas Frenkel, '72, Judge Edmund Spaeth-our new Senior Fellow-and myself. It will consist of lectures, panel discussions and will examine specific problems which will be analyzed not only by the four Faculty members, but also by members of the practicing Bar and Bench who deal with such problems on a day-to-day basis. I think we can build a very special program in this area and also tell our students that these problems are important and should be taken seriously. Placing this course in the first-year curriculum will also help alert students to professional responsibility problems in their second and third-year courses.

LSH: What do you view as the Law School's special strengths and how have you exploited them?

Dean Mundheim: Law schools tend to develop strengths in special areas. For example, the University of Pennsylvania Law School always has been strong in Labor Law. We are also strong in the international field. But I think your questions allows me to talk about strength more broadly.

We are part of a University which, as a physical matter, is more densely constructed than any other University in the country. This feature enables easy access among all schools in the University. And I think the spirit of One University is really beginning to work. One example of the strength provided by being part of a University is our Institute for Law and Economics. The Institute was founded prior to my becoming Dean, but it has gotten a new vigor and enthusiasm with the appointment of Professor Michael Wachter as its Director. Michael, an economist from the Wharton School, has an office at the Law School and is teaching two courses here each year. As a result, he has become very much a part of the Law School Community. The Institute supports joint teaching by law and economics professors. For example, an immensely successful offering in tax policy is taught by Law School Professors Hank Gutman and David Shakow and Alan Auerbach of the Wharton School. It also encourages research and has taken the innovative step of funding economics students to help law professors and law students to help economics professors. The Institute also runs a series of "Roundtables" held at the Law School in which academics, businessmen, lawyers and regulators sit together and discuss major recent research and apply it to analyzing important current problems.

I have been very anxious to bring some of the intellectually exciting work and people in the University to the Law School. The president of the Council of Student Representatives, Patty Shwartz, '86, and I have agreed on a program to accomplish that. The University has given 22 faculty members the special distinction of being named University Professor, and they include people like Nobel Prize Winner, Larry Klein. I have talked with a number of University Professors who have enthusiastically agreed to spend an afternoon or evening at the Law School, giving a lecture on a subject that interests them and then carrying on discussions in an informal setting such as dinner with students and Faculty.

We also have a very interesting group of Overseers whom, we think, should become acquainted with our students and our Faculty. The Law School Community should be given the opportunity to learn how these special people earned their successes and how they have built exciting and satisfying lives. By spending a substantial part of a day at the Law School, the Overseers will better understand the Law School and be even more helpful in providing advice and oversight.

Such efforts to introduce exciting people to the Law School Community supplement existing programs. For example, this year's Thomas Jefferson Lecturer, Spiro Simitis, is a Professor from the University of Frankfurt who has written an influential article on "Co-determination, the participation of labor in corporate governance." Simitis is a distinguished labor lawyer and, most recently, has served as Ombudsman for the State of Hesse in Germany. In that connection, he has been very much concerned with the protection of privacy in a world in which data-collection and data-dissemination play an increasingly important role. Simitis will give a public lecture on Monday afternoon, October 28 and will participate in classes and in informal discussions with students on Tuesday, October 29.

October, actually, is an exciting month at the Law School. The year 1985 marks the 250th Anniversary of The Trial of Peter Zenger and the Law School, with the Philadelphia Bar Association and the Annenberg School, will sponsor a day-long conference on Friday, October 25 to examine some of today's major free press problems.

LSH: One of your early goals was to mobilize numerous of our upwards of 7200 Alumni who have expressed the desire to participate in Law School activities. Has this come about and through what means?

Dean Mundheim: One of the happiest developments of my Deanship is the degree to which we have found ways to give Alumni the opportunity to participate in the life of the Law School. They have made very important contributions. In the first year of my Deanship, we were blessed with a very active and forward-looking President of the Law Alumni Society, Bernie Borish [Bernard M. Borish, '43]. Fortunately, Bernie was succeeded by Barclay Cale, [E. Barclay Cale, '62], who was equally interested and productive. I know that our new Society President, Clive Cummis [Clive S. Cummis, '52], is also eager for Alumni participation. Through the Alumni Society, we have been able to develop specific mechanisms for involvement; for example, our LL.M. Friendship Program enables Alumni to work with our foreign graduate students on a one-to-one basis. That Program has made Philadelphia and the Law School a much more welcoming place for our international students. On the other hand, those Alumni who have participated in the Program have been enriched by their contact with these remarkable women and men.

Placement is a great concern to our students, and Alumni have participated in programs designed to educate our students on the numerous placement opportunities available to them. In addition, Alumni are actively at work on a major study of our Placement Program, providing a different vantage from which to evaluate the services that we provide.

Because the Law School is an exciting place, one of my concerns has been to communicate that sense of excitement to Alumni and, then, to involve them in a more detailed way in what is taking place. We have developed the ''Inside Pennsylvania Law School'' program to meet that need.

I am particularly delighted that Alumni involvement in the School has gone beyond our local Philadelphia constituency. Of course our Philadelphia Alumni are closest to home, so it is natural that we turn to them for help-and that they respond. But, we are a national law school and, increasingly, more than half of our graduates are getting jobs and are living outside of Philadelphia. One example of the degree to which non-Philadelphia Alumni are playing important roles in the Law School is the elevation of Clive Cummis to the Presidency of the Law Alumni Society. The fact that Clive lives in Northern New Jersey does not mean that there will be any less active a Law Alumni Society-or that Clive will spend less time on the duties of the Society. It is simply an indication that the desire to be part of the Law School extends beyond Philadelphia, and that we can benefit from the enlargement of that circle. Another good example of non-Philadelphia participation is our New York Alumnus, Glen Tobias [Glen A. Tobias, '66], who is a member of our Board of Overseers. Glen's wife, Lynn, has taken an active role with Alma Cohen [the wife of Sylvan M. Cohen, '38] in the co-Chairing of the Biddle Gala birthday celebration about which we spoke previously. Incidentally, the head of our very successful 1983-1985 Annual Giving Drives was another of our New York Alumni, Dick Smith (Richard B. Smith, '53). These examples illustrate the increasingly national character of this Law School.

LSH: Has closer Alumni involvement been reflected in increased Alumni financial support of the Law School?

Dean Mundheim: Absolutely. Involvement of Alumni in Law School activities and education of Alumni about Law School programs promotes a better understanding of the need for the Law School to build its resources. When I become Dean, roughly 39 percent of our Alumni were contributors to Law Annual Giving. Less than $450,000 was raised. In 1983-84, our percentage of participation rose to 47 percent and more than $750,000 was raised. As you will notice upon reading The 36th Annual Report of Giving in this issue of The Law Alumni Journal, the number of Alumni making contributions to Annual Giving remains strong, and we raised almost $1 million in Annual Giving. That makes all of us at the Law School feel very good. The new 1985-1986 Chair of Annual Giving, Iim Crawford (James D. Crawford, '62), has a very ambitious two-year plan that, I think, is right on the mark. The plan, as you know, calls for $1.25 million in this fiscal year and $1.5 million in fiscal '87.

LSH: It appears that the School is flourishing and thriving. What are your visions for its future?

Dean Mundheim: The Law School is flourishing. Yet we cannot be complacent because many urgent problems remain to be solved.

We have only made a start on building the Faculty. We have a long way to go before we can be satisfied that the Biddle Law Library has the resources it needs. We are desperately short of scholarship funds and are close to losing our ability to maintain a need-blind admissions policy. Solving these problems are high priority problems.

There are other items of importance on this year's agenda. We will complete our student/Faculty/Alumni study of the placement process this year and, I expect, we will have a number of recommendations to consider and implement.

Last year I appointed a committee of students, Faculty, Overseers and Alumni to consider the Law School's efforts to attract talented members of minority groups to teaching at the Law School and to make recommendations designed to enhance the success of such efforts. The Chairman of the Board of Overseers, Judge Arlin M. Adams, '47, chaired this group. The committee reported in May. Although the committee concluded that the Law School has demonstrated a strong commitment to affirmative action and recognized the Faculty's vigorous efforts to increase minority presence, it also made a number of recommendations calling for additional efforts. I know those recommendations will be taken seriously by the Faculty and that we will spend considerable time and energy to implement them.

In short, I look forward to another busy and productive year.

SYMPOSIUM

The Law School and The University-Building on the Present For the Future

The University of Pennsylvania Law School and The University of Pennsylvania have reached a key phase in a planning effort which was begun four years ago—an effort which should guide the Law School's resource investments over the next five years. The strength of the effort, however, depends fundamentally on the Law School's connection to the institution as a whole.

"The Penn Profile," which follows, is reprinted from a larger supplement originating from the offices of University President Sheldon Hackney and Provost Thomas Ehrlich. It summarizes the activities of the Law School's projects in terms of research excellence, student financial aid, quality of education, and potential major initiatives together with a review of the concerns facing the School in fulfilling its promise-all from the perspective of the Law School as part of the entire University. That article is followed by "The Law School Profile" which reflects the financial realities that are confronted yearly by Dean Robert H. Mundheim and the leadership of the Law School. The two pieces together identify the challenges facing the School in the years ahead.

THE PENN PROFILE

The Law School has earned an academic reputation that places it among this nation's leading schools of law. Its faculty include some of the best in the country and its student body is chosen from among outstanding graduates of the finest colleges and universities; indeed, the Law School is one of the most selective within the University. This past year, the School received 3,335 applications for the 225 places in the first-year class.

The School's plan states: "The quality of our Law School will depend in the future, as it has in the past, essentially on three elements: the strength and dedication of its faculty; the talent and character of its students; and the availability of an environment in which the analytical and human qualities that make for superb and influential lawyers can flourish. In the past, we have had these strengths. For the future we must be sure that they are maintained—indeed improved—so that we will build upon the achievements made and the reputation earned."

To preserve and build on its strengths, the School has established as its goals:

 building its faculty to 40 full-time tenure track teachers by 1990; rethinking its curriculum, including opportunities to broaden legal education by capitalizing on the intellectual resources of the University;

 revitalizing the Biddle Law Library, principally by providing increased support; maintaining need-blind admissions, which will require the raising of new financial aid funds, particularly for those graduates who pursue careers in government service, teaching and public fund-raising work.

To achieve these goals, particularly the growth of the faculty to 40 tenure-track teachers, the School of Law has launched an ambitious development campaign.

Research Priorities

Research at the Law School has been a primary concern of individual faculty members. Traditionally, their research activities have not been supported by outside funding, though the faculty has established a strong record of scholarly publication when compared to that of other schools of law.

The School is now taking some important steps to provide institutional as well as financial support for faculty research. The work of its expanding Institute for Law and Economics and its Center for the Study of Financial Institutions, whose efforts include the publication of The Journal of Comparative Business and Capital Market Law, has earned increasing attention as well as external funding. The investment in microcomputers represents a second means by which the School is increasing research support. Finally, the net proceeds from the School's Continuing Legal Education Program are being devoted exclusively to supporting faculty research and supplementing faculty salaries.

Priorities in Undergraduate Education

In the past, the Law School's modest contribution to undergraduate education was based principally in the particular interests of individual faculty members in teaching undergraduates. Their ability to do so depended on matching these interests with the needs of an undergraduate school. on their ability to work out appropriate financial arrangements and to ensure that the Law School had adequate coverage for courses they would otherwise teach. The School of Law is now committed to playing a more direct role in undergraduate education in the future, and looks forward to working out a series of arrangements with the undergraduate Schools.

Concerns

Two sets of concerns must be addressed as the Law School plans its future. The first derives from the financial pressures the School will face in reaching its primary goals of increasing faculty size and compensation, preserving its need-blind admissions policy and increasing financial support for the Biddle Law Library. Currently, the School expects to meet these demands by dramatically increasing annual giving and by raising substantial individual gifts. If the School's campaign falters, then its planning goals will have to be reconsidered.

The second set of concerns revolves around the School's role in the University. Nationally, schools of law often practice a kind of separatism that leads them to operate their own facilities, manage and keep separate their libraries, and operate on academic schedules often at variance from those of their universities. At Penn, the Law School has an important opportunity to broaden its involvement. The School's plan specifically encourages the 'exploitation of resources available to the Law School from being located in a great University." The work of the Institute of Law and Economics is an important example of bridges that can be built. As the School expands its faculty, it is desirable that a significant number of new appointments be made jointly with other Schools of the University.

Prospects

The Law School's current reputation is built on strengths developed in the 1960s and early 1970s. During this period its faculty and student body won recognition both nationally and abroad. Today, the Law School is poised for a comparable burst of energy and creativity.

In terms of curriculum, the School's clinical legal education program has expanded significantly. Currently, more than half the members of the graduating class have taken at least one clinical course. The newly-authorized practice professorships should aid in strengthening the clinical program even further. The imaginative curricular review now underway promises other important developments for the future. These may include placement of increased curricular emphasis on legal theory, lawyering skills, the legal profession and the lawyer as problem-solver and a force for conflict adjustment. Potential broad-based developments may involve enhancing the structured progression of the School's curriculum, heightening the diversity of teaching methods and materials, expanding interaction with the practicing bar and furthering interaction with other University disciplines. The School attracts a substantial and strong cadre of foreign students, and is building a lively program designed to ensure that the Law School community devotes adequate attention to international concerns. In another context, Law School faculty meet regularly in research seminars to expose their work-in-progress to critical peer review. Plans are being made to further encourage faculty interaction.

The School has taken important steps to address the needs of the Biddle Law Library, the first being the appointment of a strong new Director. She and her colleagues are working to restore the Library to the level of quality essential to faculty and student research and teaching. Recognition by the School of Biddle's significance as a University resource should lead to increased central investment in the Library toward its campaign for excellence. These and other steps augur well for the School. It faces a number of real challenges. At the same time, the present generation of faculty and students, with support from Alumni and friends, has a prime opportunity to strengthen the School academically and expand its intellectual horizons.

THE LAW SCHOOL PROFILE

What does it cost to operate the University of Pennsylvania Law School in the mid-1980's? What does the School spend each year per student? What should a Penn Law School student expect to pay in tuition, fees, living expenses for the year 1985-86?

The School's revenue and expenditure report (see Charts #1 and #1A), prepared by Business Administrator, Ernie Gonsalves, reveals that $10.3 million in income will balance the Law School's operating budget for the year 1985-86. Expenditures include building maintenance, operation of the Biddle Library and salaries for Law School Faculty, Administration and staff. The 10% rise in costs for the year 1985-86 reflects the Law School administration's commitment to revitalizing the Biddle Law Library and to increasing the size of the Faculty without enlarging the size of the student body.

Penn Law School spends roughly $14,000 per year to "produce" a lawyer. With the 1985-86 tuition revenue at $10,650 for each fulltime student (which constitutes an 8.5% increase over 1984-85), a deficit would be present were it not for gifts, endowment income, limited government funds, book store sales and other miscellaneous sources. The School's gift income exceeds 10% of the operating budget, comparing favorably to the over 5% available at most other private law schools. Incidentally, the aggregate amount paid by a Penn Law School student in tuition, fees, room and board, and miscellaneous fees for the year 1985-86 approximates $18,154. (See Chart #2 to compare costs at the University of Pennsylvania Law School with its peer schools)

The Report of Annual Giving supplement, found in this issue of The Law Alumni

Journal, states that the 1984-85 Annual Giving effort—which is the principal source of gifts—totalled $988,197, placing Penn Law School among the highest in the country (for schools of equivalent size) in the raising of unrestricted funds. (See Chart #3. Please note: The fiscal year 1983-84 is the most recent for which comparison of statistics on law school giving are available).

The Law School looks to unrestricted Annual Giving ($1.25 million is the 1985-86 goal) to provide roughly 10% of its operating budget. Increasing the size of the Faculty and aiding the rebuilding of Biddle Library require restricted current-use funds and additions to the endowment well in excess of the amount provided by Annual Giving. For the 1985-86 fiscal year, $3 million in such funds are being sought.

Biddle Library is approaching 100 years old (1986!); it also is getting a new look. The new look, which is more than skin deep, entails a face lift now in progress.

The old central reference area which is under reorganization in the current renovation project, will result in the new "Gateway" area at the entrance to Biddle from the Great Hall staircase. The "Gateway," which promises to be highly functional, will focus attention on the principal aids available to help the library user to access the collection of Biddle Library: the Public Services staff, computer terminals, and the card catalog.

The Public Services staff includes: the librarians who specialize in Foreign and International legal materials; those librarians who work principally in American legal reference; and the media librarian who manages the micro, audio and video collections. It also includes an active interlibrary loan department as well as assistants who staff the new Circulation/Information Desk.

There are a variety of terminals in the Gateway area and there will be more. During this school year, Biddle Library should get some of the first terminals of a developing, online library information system known as PennLIN. There are also Lexis and Westlaw terminals, terminals to access the massive bibliographic databases known as RLIN and OCLC, and terminals to access commercial databases such as ELSS (Electronic Legislative Search System), NEXIS and Dialog. The Public Services staff stands ready to help with the effective use of these terminals just as they do with the card catalog and other kinds of indexes or legal information however packaged.

The card catalog, now in the category of older technology, remains a rich repository of information on Biddle's collection. It is being relocated so that it no longer dominates the Gateway area.

The renovation of the Gateway area symbolizes the kind of renewal taking place in Biddle Library. It is my hope that Alumni have the opportunity to see the new Gateway area, which we expect will be ready for inspection and use around Christmas 1985.

The Biddle Gala Birthday Dinner Dance, to be held on June 7, 1986 at the Law School, is a date I hope you will mark on your calendars. I see it as a great opportunity to meet with you and to enable you to see the changes which mark Biddle's entry into its second century.

Professor Geoffrey C. Hazard, Jr. The 1986 Roberts Lecturer

University of Pennsylvania Law School Overseer, Professor Geoffrey C. Hazard, Jr. of the Yale Law School, will deliver the 27th Annual Owen J. Roberts Memorial Lecture on Wednesday, February 19, 1986 at the University Museum, 34th and Spruce Streets.

Established to honor the late Owen J. Roberts, the 11th Dean of the University of Pennsylvania Law School and an Associate Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, the Lecture series is supported by an endowment awarded by the Philadelphia firm of Montgomery, McCracken, Walker & Rhoads, and is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Chapter of the Order of the Coif, the University of Pennsylvania Law Alumni Society and the Law School.

The 1985 Keedy Cup Scheduled for November 18

The Annual Edwin R. Keedy Moot Court Competition will be held on Monday. November 18, 1985 at the University Museum, 34th and Spruce Streets at 7 p.m.

The distinguished Bench includes The Honorable Alvin Rubin, of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, presiding: The Honorable Thomas N. O'Neill, Jr., '53, of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania; and The Honorable Ellen Peters, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Connecticut.

The 1985 Thomas Jefferson Lecture

Professor Spiro Simitis of Johann Wolfgang Goethe-Universitat, Frankfurt, West Germany will deliver the 1985 Thomas Jefferson Lecture entitled "Reexamining Privacy Concepts in an Information Society" on Monday, October 28, 1985 at 4:00 p.m. at the Law School. On Tuesday, October 29, Professor Simitis will spend the day at the School lecturing, attending classes and meeting informally with students, Faculty and Alumni.

Sponsored by the Jefferson Bank and the Philadelphia firm of Spector, Cohen, Gadon & Rosen, the Thomas Jefferson Lecture Series is fashioned after the Olive Wendell Holmes Lectures at Harvard, the William Storrs Lectures at Yale, the James S. Carpenter Lectures at Columbia and the Thomas M. Cooley Lectures at Michigan. In keeping with the formats of these institutions, a distinguished scholar, judge or practitioner, is invited to the School to deliver lectures dealing with fundamental questions of law and jurisprudence, in addition to meeting with members of the Law School Community.

!!!SAVE-THE-DATE-SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 1986-SAVE-THE-DATE!!!

Celebrate "The Event of the Spring Season!!" Celebrate Biddle Library's 100th Birthday at a GALA Party given in its honor on June 7, 1986 at the Law School!!! All Alumni and their guests are invited to dine elegantly, and to dance and listen to the music of the Mark Davis Orchestra.

Biddle Library Gala Pre-Dinner Held at the Whites'

Barbara and William White, Jr., '38, graciously hosted a dinner at their home in mid-June to generate interest in the gala celebration to be held for the Biddle Library on the occasion of its 100th birthday.

Attendees included members of the Biddle Library Gala Committee, co-Chaired by Alma Cohen and Lynn Tobias, who are planning the stellar celebration. Dean Robert H. Mundheim and Guna Mundheim were present at the Whites' home as was Biddle Library Director, Elizabeth S. Kelly, who presented the Biddle Library promotional film to the dinner gathering.

The Biddle Gala Birthday Party will take place at The Law School on June 7, 1986 and will feature an elegant dinner party with music by the Mark Davis Orchestra.

Transitions...Elevations, Arrivals, Visitors

The University of Pennsylvania Law School Faculty continues its pattern of growth, change and movement. In June 1985, Professor Morris S. Arnold left the Law School to become Dean of the University of Indiana Law School at Bloomington. Assistant Professor Courtney W. Howland retired from teaching in June as did Assistant Professor Michael Singer. Associate Professor Stephen B. Burbank is on-leave, teaching and doing research at the University of Michigan Law School for the year 1985-1986. Professor Stephen J. Schulhofer will return to the School having spent the fall semester teaching at the University of Chicago Law School. Assistant Professor Drucilla Cornell is in residence, writing a book, at Cardozo Law School in New York for the year.

Five Faculty members have been promoted in status and/or have been awarded Law School Chairs:

Douglas Frenkel, '72, has been appointed Practice Professor and Director of the Clinical Program. Professor Frenkel's designation is a Law School innovation designed to ''provide security to persons wishing to make a career and to build a professional life in the Law School's Clinical Program.''

Professor Robert A. Gorman is the Law School's new Kenneth W. Gemmill Professor of Law.

Professor Curtis R. Reitz, '56, was appointed the Algernon Sydney Biddle Professor of Law previously held by George L. Haskins, now Algernon Sydney Biddle Professor of Law Emeritus.

Professor Noyes E. Leech, '48, is now the William A. Schnader Professor of Law. Retired Professor John O. Honnold, is William A. Schnader Professor of Law Emeritus.

Professor Stephen J. Schulhofer has become the Ferdinand Wakeman Hubbell Professor of Law formerly chaired by Professor Noyes E. Leech.

The School's three new Faculty appointments include:

Assistant Professor Michael A. Fitts, a native Philadelphian, is a graduate of Harvard University and Yale Law School (1979), where he was an editor of the Yale Law Journal. Mr. Fitts clerked for Judge A. Leon Higginbotham, Jr., of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit and, subsequently, worked in the Office of the Legal Counsel of the Department of Justice. Professor Fitts' primary teaching interests are Administrative Law and Legislative Process.

Professor Friedrich K. Kubler who received his degrees from Tubingen University (LL.B., 1956, Dr. iur 1961, Habilitation, 1965) and has taught at Johann Wolfgang Goethe-Universitat in Frankfurt, West Germany, and at GieBen, Konstanz, Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania. Professor Kubler has written books and law review articles in the areas of Corporations, Securities, Banking, Mass Media, Comparative Law and Legal Theory. He teaches Corporations and European Community Law.

Assistant Professor Paul Shechtman was graduated from Harvard Law School, magna cum laude, in 1978. The son of Alumnus, George Shechtman, '40, Professor Shechtman served as law clerk to Judge Louis H. Pollak of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and for Chief Justice Warren E. Burger of the U.S. Supreme Court. For the past four years, Mr. Shechtman has been an Assistant U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of New York, where he was the Chief Appelate Attorney and head of the General Crimes Unit. Professor Shechtman teaches Criminal Law, Criminal Procedure, and Evidence.

There will be six visiting professors at the School during the 1985-1986 Term.

Visiting Assistant Professor James Boyle, of American University, Washington, D.C., will be teaching a seminar in Jurisprudence and a course on the Legal Profession during the Spring 1986 semester.

Visiting Associate Professor Rhonda

Copelon teaches at CUNY Law School at Queens College. She was the University of Pennsylvania Law School's 1985 Honorary Fellow and, presently, is teaching a course in Family Law, and a seminar in Reproduction and Sexuality at the School during the 1985-86 year.

Visiting Professor Louis Loss was Professor of Law at Harvard Law School from 1952 until his retirement in 1984. He is currently William Nelson Cromwell Professor Emeritus at Harvard. In the spring of 1986, Professor Loss will teach Securities Regulation: Distributions at the Law School.

Visiting Professor Harold G. Maier is Director of Transnational Legal Studies at Vanderbilt University Law School. This fall, Professor Maier is teaching Conflict of Laws, Foreign Relations and Laws of the United States.

Visiting Professor Lawrence Rosen is a professor of anthropology at Princeton University and has taught at the Columbia, Duke and Northwestern Law Schools. He is the recipient of a MacArthur Foundation Award and teaches Anthropology and the Law at the Law School during the fall semester.

Visiting Assistant Professor Lea S. VanderVelde from the University of Iowa College of Law, is teaching courses in Property and Natural Resources for the 1985-1986 year.

LIFE INSURANCE: THE GIFT OF CHOICE

Life insurance is increasingly the gift of choice for those seeking to make a substantial commitment to the Law School. More than 60 men and women have transferred or purchased policies in the University's name. As assigned owner and beneficiary, the School can use the proceeds to endow a chair, grant a scholarship or underwrite a fellowship. Biddle Law Library seeks gifts of endowment to build its acquisition of books and periodicals, to improve its services and to increase access to computer-based reference and bibliographic services. Won't you join those who are supporting Biddle with a gift of Life Insurance? Whether you wish to transfer an existing policy or purchase a new one in Biddle's name, the Law School will help you make the proper choice. For further information, contact Donald G. Myers, Director of Development, University of Pennsylvania Law School, 3400 Chestnut 1/4, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104.

March

Allentown, PA Alumni Reception Basketball Dinner and Game for Law School Alumni Penn Law People In The News

This Journal feature highlights members of the Law School Community (Alumni, Faculty, Overseers, Students, etc.) whose appearances in the news media have been called to our attention primarily by the University news clipping service.

James A. Backstrom, '76, Chief of the Dallas (Texas) Office of the Antitrust Division of U. S. Department of Justice, published the article "Keeping Them Honest" in the March 1985 issue of Texas Business.

Marshall A. Bernstein, '49, of the Philadelphia firm of Bernstein, Bernstein and Harrison, was designated one of "The Best Lawyers in the U. S." in the May 1985 issue of Town and Country Magazine for his work in the areas of Personal Injury, Malpractice and Product Liability, and as a Plaintiff's Attorney.

Robert L. Bildner, '78, who is the third generation of the New Jersey-based King's Specialty Food Market chain, was featured in an article published in the May 26, 1985 issue of Your Daily Record entitled, "How Kings Developed a Chain."

Marshall J. Breger, '73, Special Assistant to President Ronald Reagan in the Office of Public Liaison, was the subject of the April 26, 1985 New York Times "Working Profile" column titled "Taking the Heat Over the Bitburg Visit."

George R. Burrell, Jr., '74, former Deputy Mayor of Philadelphia, and Steven R. Waxman, '70, both founding partners of Burrell, Waxman, Donaghy & Lee, a new minority owned law firm, were featured in the March 1985 Corporate Monthly article, 'Burrell, Waxman, Donaghy & Lee: A Minority Business Enterprise Typifying the New Breed of Philadelphia Law Firm Entering the Market.'

Gilbert F. Casellas, '77, a partner in the Philadelphia firm of Montgomery, McCracken, Walker & Rhoads, was named one of the "Who's Who Among the New Philadelphians" in the June 1985 issue of Philadelphia Magazine.

Sylvan M. Cohen, '38, of the Philadelphia firm of Cohen, Shapiro, Polisher, Sheikman & Cohen and President of the Pennsylvania Real Estate Investment Trust appeared in the Sunday, May 19, 1985 New York Times supplement Personal Investing Financial Planning Guide, as a featured expert in "Roundtable: 3 Experts' Choices." As part of its May 1, 1985 salute to Law Day and the Philadelphia Lawyer, The Legal Intelligencer, the daily law journal for the Delaware Valley, published "Sylvan Cohen: A Man Who Cares" as part of their Philadelphia

Lawyers Profile Series.

Lyn Davis, the Law School's Assistant Director of Placement, discussed the job market facing the Class of '85 in the June 1985 Philadelphia Magazine article, 'Look Out, World, Here I Come! (I think).''

Thomas Ehrlich, the Provost of the University of Pennsylvania and Professor of Law at the Law School, was listed as one of the June 1985 Philadelphia Magazine's "Who's Who Among the New Philadelphians."

Donald J. Farage, '33, of the Philadelphia firm Farage & McBride, Pasquale J. DiQuinzio, '54, of Dechert, Price & Rhoads, Philadelphia, and Oscar B. Goodman, '64, of Goodman, Terry, Stein & Quintana, Las Vegas, Nevada, were mentioned in Town and Country magazine's June 1985 article ''The Best Lawyers in the U. S., Part II.''

Charles Goldberg, '80, who practices with Exxon Company in Baton Rouge, LA, was featured in the article "Taking a Look at Antitrust: On Trial at Baton Rouge" in Profile, Exxon's in-house magazine which is distributed to 27,000 employees.

Stephen N. Huntington, LL.M. '73, of the Philadelphia firm of Sarner, Franklin, Grodinsky, Margulies & Huntington, published ''Is Your Fine Print Enough to Take Into Court?'' in the Legal Briefs section of the March 1985 issue of Advertising Communications Times.

The Honorable Franklin L. Kury, '61, who served in the Pennsylvania State Senate for eight years, co-authored the July 12, 1985 Philadelphia Inquirer Op-Ed article "A Better Way of Choosing Lieutenant Governor."

Richard M. Leisner, '70, of Tampa, Florida, published 'Boardroom Jitters: A Landmark Court Decision Upsets Corporate Directors' in the April 22, 1985 issue of Barron's. Mr. Leisner and his wife, Susan Leisner, were the subjects of The Miami Herald article of March 20, 1985, entitled, 'Susan Leisner Adopts a New Life.'

Gerald M. Levin, '63, Executive Vice-President at Time Incorporated, was profiled in the May 20, 1985 New Yorker magazine article "Onward and Upward With the Arts: Cable I" as one of the founders of Home Box Office, presently the largest and most successful cable company in the country.

Alice B. Lonsdorf, the Law School's Assistant Dean for Alumni and Graduate Students and former Chair of the Friends of Independence National Park in the 1970's, was quoted extensively in the June 1985 Philadelphia Magazine article "The Friends of Hobie Cawood."

Deborah F. McIlroy, '79, and Bruce S. Marks, '84 of Washington, DC, who serve on the staff of Pennsylvania Senator Arlen Spector, were discussed in the March 12, 1985 New York Times Congress article entitled "Oh, To Be Young and Legal Talent."

Fred E. Newberg, '65, President and Chief Executive Office of Butcher Capital Markets, Butcher and Company, Philadelphia, was featured in the article "Butcher Building Real Estate as Stock Underwriting Wanes" in the Philadelphia Business Journal, March, 1985.

Harris Ominsky, '56, of the Philadelphia firm of Blank, Rome, Comisky & McCauley, has published more than 30 articles since June, 1984—possibly a record for any other practicing lawyer in the United States.

Raymond M) Pearlstine, '32, of the Norristown, (PA) firm of Wisler, Pearlstine, Talone, Craig and Garrity, was cited in The Norristown Times Herald of June 8, 1985 for his 50 years of service to the Borough of Collegeville as its Township Solicitor.

Professor Michael L. Wachter, the

Director of the Law School's Institute for Law and Economics, was quoted in the February 25, 1985 Wall Street Journal article "The Outlook: High Unemployment is Likely to Linger On." The Los Angeles Times of March 31, 1985 article entitled "Cultivating The Economy: Industrial Policy Debate Renewed" quoted Professor Wachter, as did the May Issue of Glamour Magazine in "Women Are Raising the Standard of Living."

The Philadelphia Daily News March 25, 1985, in its "Hunger in Philadelphia" feature made mention of The University of Pennsylvania Law School's Food Stamp Clinic and student, John McVeigh, '86, in its article "Bare Cupboards At Month's End."

Recent Gifts and Bequests

The Judge Doris M. Harris Memorial Fund

The Fund was established by family, friends, colleagues and former law clerks to honor the memory of the late Judge Doris May Harris, '49, of the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas, and an active member of the University of Pennsylvania Law Alumni Society.

The Class of 1954 Reunion Gift

In commemoration of their 30th year since graduation from the University of Pennsylvania Law School, the Class of 1954 made a generous reunion gift of $26,496.75 to the Biddle Law Library in 1984. Under the guidance and leadership of Morris M. Shuster, the 1954 Class Agent, Pace Reich, the Reunion Chair, and Floyd E. Brandow, Jr., the Class earmarked the funds for audio and video materials and the preparation of library space for their use, particularly for the Clinical Education Program in its practical approach to legal education. Mr. Reich anticipates that the Class of '54 will add to their Library gift on an annual basis by donating funds above and beyond their usual Annual Giving donations.

The Class of 1954's strong history of Reunion Class giving was reflected on the occasion of their 25th Reunion with the establishment of the Faculty Colloquia Seminar Fund chaired this year by Law School Professor Gerald L. Neuman.

For The Library: "The Art of Negotiating," a Computer Program

Alumnus Roy Nierenberg, '70, has donated his computer program, "The Art of Negotiating," to the Law School's Biddle Library. Written by Mr. Nierenberg and distributed through his company, Experience in Software, Incorporated, of Berkeley, California, the program is based on strategies developed in two books written by his father, Gerald J. Nierenberg. "The Art of Negotiating" instructs the user in the skillful process of negotiating through a detail-oriented series of questions and answers.

A Proposed Scholarship for the Handicapped

In a letter to Dean Robert H. Mundheim, Henry S. Hoberman, '85, the 1984-85 President of CSR (The Law School's Council of Student Representatives) requested consideration of 'the creation of a special scholarship for an outstanding handicapped student (or students),' to help offset the economic and cultural discrimination encountered by the handicapped.

Mr. Hoberman, who was inspired by a similar scholarship for the physically handicapped already in place at Columbia Law School, stated that "one of the principal goals of my tenure in CSR has been to increase the diversity of our institution. Initiating such a scholarship would be an imaginative yet relatively inexpensive step in that direction."

Those interested in supporting this scholarship may send their gifts to Donald G. Myers, Director of Development, at The Law School.

The Overseers Meeting-April, 1985

The Overseers of the University of Pennsylvania Law School convened on April 18, 1985 for their Annual Spring Meeting.

After a joint breakfast with Faculty and students, the Board of Overseers was presented with Dean Robert H. Mundheim's Report. Assistant Dean of Admissions, Frances Spurgeon and Professor Richard G. Lonsdorf, Chair of the Admissions Committee, discussed the important issue of "Law School Admissions: Trends For The Future." The subject of Financial Aid was examined by Assistant Dean Spurgeon with Overseers Jane Lang McGrew and Glen Tobias, followed by "The Changing Curriculum" presented by Professor Robert A. Gorman. Director of Development, Donald G. Myers, and Overseers John G. Harkins, Jr., and Judge Arlin M. Adams and National Chairman of Annual Giving, Richard B. Smith, completed the morning session with the topic, "Providing Financial Resources for the Law School." Following lunch and remarks by Provost Thomas Ehrlich at the University's Faculty Club, Associate Professor Stephen B. Burbank discussed "Building the Faculty."

The membership of the Overseers' Board changed as of the April meeting. Overseers William T. Coleman, Jr., The Honorable Wade H. McCree, Jr., and Robert M. Landis, '47, stepped down from their posts and Richard M. Dicke, '40, Bernard G. Segal, '31 and Robert L. Trescher, '37, were appointed Overseers Emeriti. The new members of the Overseer body include: Stephen A. Cozen, '64; Howard Gittis, '58; Leon C. Holt, Jr., '51; Edwin P. Rome, '40; Marvin Schwartz, '49, and Myles H. Tannenbaum, '57.

Alumni Gatherings

During the summer and early fall months, the Law Alumni Society and numerous Regional Alumni Clubs sponsored events geared to attracting Alumni and their guests.

On July 17, a successful and wellattended Alumni reception was held in London at the Library of the Reform Club during the annual meetings of the American Bar Association. The Honorable Arlin M. Adams, '47, who chairs the Law School Board of Overseers, extended greetings to the over one-hundred Penn Law School Alumni and their guests who were present at the event.

Alumnus David H. Marion, '63, who is Chancellor of the Philadelphia Bar Association, was the honored guest at the Law Alumni Society Reception held Saturday evening, September 21 during the Annual Conference and Exposition of the Philadelphia Bar Association at Bally's Park Place in Atlantic City, New Jersey.

Dean Robert H. Mundheim was the honored guest at a Law Alumni Society Reception held in Tokyo, Japan in early October.

Revisions in the Law School Calendar

Changes and innovations have been made in the School's 1985-1986 Academic schedule:

- As a result of disruption caused by offcampus interviewing, the Faculty/Student/ Alumni Placement Committee resolved that all classes would be cancelled one or two days in each of several weeks beginning at the time of the on-campus interview season in the mid to late fall.
- Winter term examinations usually administered after the Christmas holiday, have been rescheduled to be given prior to the break. This change provides the students with a very definite vacation between semesters.
- The moving of examinations from after to before the Christmas holiday enables a twoweek open period which will be utilized to provide courses in legal research and writing and in Professional Responsibility and the Legal Profession offered to students in the first-year. The program is under the leadership of Professors Curtis R. Reitz, '56, and Douglas Frenkel, '72, Senior Fellow, Judge Edmund Spaeth, and Dean Robert H. Mundheim.

FEATURED EVENTS

Commencement 1985

May 20, 1985 was a perfect day for celebration. The sun was brilliant, the air was fresh and carried the strains of Brahms and Elgar, the Law School Courtyard was decorated festively, spirits were high with anticipation and nostalgia and relief.

Dean Robert H. Mundheim welcomed the Commencement gathering and introduced Kyung Han Sohn of South Korea, who graciously spoke for his fellow LL.M. graduate students "hoping that the University of Pennsylvania Law School will become the best Law School not only in the United States but, also, in the World. We promise to continue our efforts for this purpose in our respective countries."

Class President Henry S. Hoberman, in an eloquent, moving address to his colleagues and their families, to the Law School Faculty and to the invited guests, reviewed the Class of 1985 three-year Law School experience-the successes, the frustrations, the challenges and the dreams. Hoberman enumerated the accomplishments made during their time at the Law School: "Members of our Class were instrumental in establishing the first food-stamp clinic, the first telethon to help support the Clinical Programs, the first student newspaper, the first concrete plan to improve the diversity of the Law Review, the first seminar course for first-year students and the first program for newly-accepted students about to enter in the fall...We worked hard to make the Public Interest Law Conference a fixture at this Law School and dedicated our efforts to the memory of the late Professor Edward V. Sparer. We helped create a Fund to feed the hungry in Ethiopia, collected canned food and clothing for neighbors in West Philadelphia, and sponsored an International Food Day for charity. We stood firm to our convictions when refusing to allow recruiters who discriminate against our fellow students to use our facilities. The list of our accomplishments is impressive, and we have every right to be proud." Mr. Hoberman continued, "Law School is a difficult experience to capture in words, simply because it is so intense and so unlike any other educational experience we have ever encountered. However, our years have been productive and enlightening.'

The Annual Honorary Fellowship of the Law School was conferred on Rhonda Copelon, Associate Professor of Law at CUNY Law School at Queens College, who is visiting the University of Pennsylvania Law School for the year 1985-1986. In his presentation of Professor Copelon, Dean Robert H. Mundheim lauded her for "tirelessly working to defend human rights. The issues you have raised-ranging from challenges to racism and sexism in jury selection, to racial discrimination against unwed mothers, to discrimination against gays and lesbians, to illegal government wiretapping, and to interference with freedom of the press-evidence the breadth and depth of your concept of rights...In a period in which the Government has retreated from past commitments to human and civil rights and in which opponents of women's reproductive rights increasingly resort to violence, you have expanded your advocacy by taking on the roles of educator, speaker and writer as well as of litigator...We acknowledge your dedication, skill, sacrifice and courage...We hold you in esteem and commend your example to the generation of lawyers who go forth from this School.'

Professor Copelon's acceptance address was followed by the presentation of the Harvey Levin Memorial Award for Teaching Excellence given this year to Professor Morris S. Arnold, who is now Dean of the University of Indiana Law School at Bloomington.

A special award, presented by Class of 1985 Officer Joylin Tolliver, recognized "an individual who has provided us with daily support, smiles and comic relief for the past years"—the Law School Registrar, Gary Clinton. In his response to the honor, Mr. Clinton stated, "One of the things that I have realized during my nine years at the Law School is that life does not stop just because you walk through those doors...I hope that you realize and remember, as you leave, that the Law School, in fact, has a human heart in addition to a wonderful Faculty—and that we do care about you."

Three new academic awards were added in 1985 to the list of many which are given each year to graduates. The Frank H. Gelman Prize, honoring the memory of the Class of 1935 Alumnus, was awarded to Donna B. Cohen, "the student who has demonstrated special promise in the subjects of real property and real estate transactions." The Noyes E. Leech Award recipient, Eric P. Salonen, was recognized as "the editor of The Journal of Comparative Business and Capital Market Law who, during his third year, made, in the opinion of the Dean, the most scholarly or otherwise significant contribution to The Journal." Eliot R. Wagner received The Wapner, Newman and Associates Award for demonstrating special promise in the area of civil trial advocacy.

Assistant Dean Alice B. Lonsdorf and Vice Dean Margo Post Marshak then presented the Class of 1985 to Dean Robert H. Mundheim, who awarded diplomas. A reception honoring the Class of '85 and their families followed Commencement ceremonies.

Quinquennial Reunion '85

The Law School Classes of 1935, 1940, 1950, 1955, 1960, 1965, 1970, 1975 and 1980 celebrated milestone Reunions on Saturday May 18, 1985 during the University of Pennsylvania's Annual Alumni Weekend.

On Saturday afternoon, from 1:30 to 3:00 p.m., a tour of the Law School and champagne with Dean Robert H. Mundheim was offered to returning Alumni.

The Quinquennial Reunion parties, held on Saturday evening at a variety of sites in the Philadelphia area, were visited by Dean Robert H. Mundheim who extended greetings and best wishes from the Law School. The Class of 1935's 50th Reunion Party, through the able planning of Classmates Frank E. Hahn, Jr. and E. Calvert Cheston, was held at the Locust Club of Philadelphia. Robert W. Sayre, Richard M. Dicke and Lewis Weinstock of the Class of 1940 organized that gala Reunion at the Cosmopolitan Club of Philadelphia. The Barclay on Rittenhouse Square was the site of the Class of 1950's event which was planned ably by Chairman Stephen J. Korn. Stephen M. Feldman and Norman P. Zarwin of the Class of 1955 were the moving forces enabling the success of their party at the Tree House of the Philadelphia Zoo. The Bellevue Stratford Hotel was the choice of the Class of 1960 for their 25th Reunion celebration, chaired by Classmates Richard D. Rivers, Lowell S. Thomas, Jr. and Charles G. Kopp. Vernon Stanton, Jr., coordinated 1960's 25th Reunion Directory. Class of 1965 members Alan M. Lerner, William H. Ewing and Thomas P. Hamilton, Jr., chaired their Reunion party which was held at the Law School. Music

MESSAGE/ From National Development Chairman

It is an honor for me to serve as National Development Chairman for these outstanding years of growth and development at the University of Pennsylvania Law School. This year, the Law School is embarking on its most ambitious fundraising effort in over a decade. The strong support and enthusiasm of our Law School's alumni and friends helped make 1984-85 a productive and rewarding year for gifts and pledges.

I am grateful to those of you who have responded with exceptional multi-year commitments both for restricted and unrestricted purposes. It is a pleasure to report that in 1984-85, $2.18 million dollars was raised in restricted gifts and pledges, an 185% increase over last year. This significant progress gives The Law School's Board of Overseers confidence that our ambitious goals can be achieved.

We are currently moving ahead with energy to reach our new annual giving goal of $1.25 million dollars and $3 million dollars in restricted commitments. In order to meet our June 30, 1986 goal, continued support is needed to build this momentum, by reinforcing patterns of giving.

This considerable level of improvement in total gifts and alumni participation reinforces the Law School's highest quality of education and research. Such success helps us in our efforts to seek maximum assistance from law firms, corporations, and foundations.

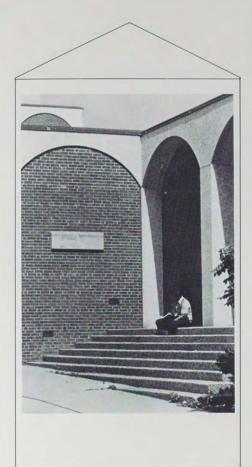

To meet these challenges that lie ahead, we ask you to increase your support of the Law School. Your help and dedication makes a difference.

Non-Active Funds—1984-85

The following funds were established in a prior fiscal year by alumni and friends of those honored as a way of remembering loved ones, classmates, and colleagues. Joyous occasions such as birthdays, anniversaries, notable religious milestones and good fortune have been celebrated by support of these funds in past years. In 1984-85, no additional gifts were received, but the income from these funds was allocated for purposes in keeping with the wishes of those who established the funds. If you are interested in more information about these funds, please contact Donald G. Myers, the Director of Development for the Law School.

PLANNED GIVING

Planned giving vehicles include gifts of life insurance, pooled income funds, charitable remainder trusts, bequests and gift annuities. These contributions may be funded with any of the following assets: cash, appreciated securities, real property, gift of a residence (retaining the right to live there for life), tangibles or anything of value. Substantial tax savings accrue to you and your estate through careful planning.

The Planned Giving Program helps the Law School maintain its tradition of excellence now and in the future. The planned gift offers an outstanding opportunity for you to meet your objectives to strengthen and ensure the School's high ranking position among peer institutions while meeting your philanthropic goals and financial responsibilities.

If you are interested in more information about planned giving, please notify Donald G. Myers, the Director of Development for the Law School.

IN MEMORY/Nicholas F. Gallicchio 1904-1984

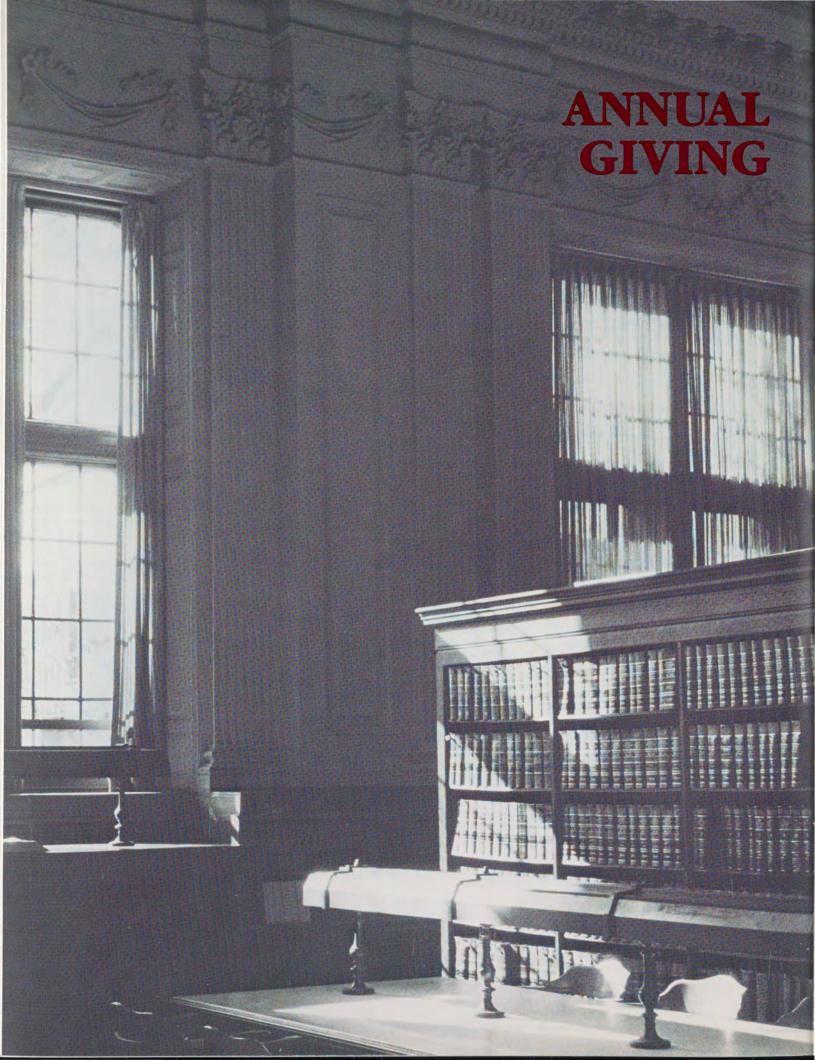

The Law School of the University of Pennsylvania pays tribute to the memory of a devoted Class of 1934 alumnus, Nicholas F. Gallicchio, whose career exemplified the ideals of a lawyer who pursued the private practice of law while serving his community in positions of public trust.

Lawyer, judge, and civic leader, Nicholas F. Gallicchio operated a law practice from Lambertville, New Jersey, for forty years. He was President of the Hunterdon County Bar Association, Municipal Judge for East and West Amwell and Delaware townships, Vice President and Director of Lambertville National Bank, and member and legal advisor of many civic groups and organizations.

In 1981, he named the Law School beneficiary of his estate in fulfillment of his long held dream to endow a law professorship. In grateful recognition, the Law School named the chair the Nicholas F. Gallicchio Professorship of Law. Alan Watson was named the Nicholas F. Gallicchio Professor of Law in 1984. The education of future generations of Penn Law students will be enriched by the vision and generosity of Nicholas F. Gallicchio.

MESSAGE / From National Chairman

An ambitious three-year plan was inauguarated at the outset of my two-year tenure as National Campaign Chairman to take Law Annual Giving from $495,000 in 1982-83 to $1 million by the end of 1985-86. At the end of the first year, 1983-84, a $261,000 increase in dollars and a 4% increase in alumni participation were achieved. It was a very encouraging start-up year for Dean Mundheim and the Faculty.

In 1984-85, the second year of the three-year plan, the goal of $850,000 was regarded as optimistic. When the books closed, however, we happily learned that our three- year goal had been all but accomplished in two years. We raised a total of $988,197 from 3,112 alumni and friends. This represents a 30% increase over the 1983-84 total and virtually a 100% increase over 1982-83.

One needs only to look at the number of contributing alumni, 3,112, to realize that many alumni responded with increasing generosity, and in fact, 221 gave for the first time. Most encouraging are the 314 Law alumni who have joined the University's Benjamin Franklin Society. Of this number, 296 donors contributed $1,000 or more to the Law School in 1984-85, 131 for the first time.

Also encouraging, is the number of alumni who have willingly given of their time and talent to help in the campaign, for which the Dean and I are enormously grateful.

In the coming year we must build on the momentum of the last two years by both reinforcing the levels of giving that have been established and by reaching more of the approximately 7,000 Law alumni. The Law School needs, in fact, $1.25 million in unrestricted giving to continue to build the Faculty, expand the library and improve the physical facility - all very real needs eloquently described by the Dean in his message in this issue of The Journal. $1.25 million in 1985-86 also is an optimistic goal. Raising over $250,000 more than last year will take a substantial commitment from an even more generous and more widely participating alumni body. Alumni of our peer law schools have done it for their schools. So can we.

To those who have been benefactors of the Law School, I offer my deep appreciation. To those who have given for the first time in 1984-85, I welcome you and encourage your continued participation. If you have not given this past year, I ask that you consider what the Law School has provided in your life and what role you can now play in its remaining a first-rate institution. You are heartily invited to join the growing number of alumni donors and friends who wish to assure the School of a strong future. Our support makes a difference.

THE BENJAMIN FRANKLIN SOCIETY

The Benjamin Franklin Society has become the flagship of Annual Giving. This gift club, founded in 1955, recognizes alumni and friends who contribute $1,000 or more to the University. Its members may designate all or part of their gifts to graduate and professional schools. This year, 314 Law School Members, Associates, Fellows and Founders of the Benjamin Franklin Society contributed $593,555 to Law Annual Giving. This represents 60.06% of the Law Annual Giving total. 131 Law School alumni and friends joined the Society for the first time in fiscal year

The Society recognizes four levels of support:

with an annual gift of Founders $10,000 or more with an annual gift of Fellows $5,000 to $9,999 with an annual gift of Associates $2,500 to $4,999 with an annual gift of Members

All those enrolled in the Benjamin Franklin Society are invited to the Law School's Benefactors Dinner on October 29, 1985. In addition, they will receive two special newsletters from the Dean. Their names will be inscribed on the Benjamin Franklin Society bonor roll plaque in the Faculty Club. They will be listed in the annual Benjamin Franklin Society directory and will be invited to the Benjamin Franklin Society Reception to be beld in November, 1985.

$1,000 to $2,499

Fellows and Founders may register, free of charge, for any course of their choice in the popular Special Programs of the College of General Studies.

Founders have two special privileges in addition to those given to all others. They will be receive at a scheduled dinner meeting of the University Trustees and will be given the Benjamin Franklin Society rosetta designed exclusively for them.

The Law School's Benjamin Franklin Society Chairman, Richard B. Smith, recognizes the following loyal alumni and friends of the Law School who rejoin the Society annually and welcomes those who have moved into this important leadership group for the first time.

WILLIAM DRAPER LEWIS ASSOCIATES

Chairman— Timothy N. Black, '67

The William Draper Lewis Associates were founded to honor the memory of William Draper Lewis, Dean of the Law School from 1896 to 1914. His eminent career foreshadowed today's emphasis on the interdisciplinary approach to complex legal issues. Programs such as the Institute for Law and Economics, (which coordinates studies among the Department of Economics, Wharton Graduate School of Business and the Law School) prepare dedicated lawyers who are wholly qualified to "better adapt the law and its administration to present day needs."

Contributions of $500 to $999 to Law Annual Giving by William Draper Lewis Associates help to strengthen and maintain the high standards of legal education at the Law School. In fiscal year 1984-85, 178 William Draper Lewis Associates contributed $138,095; 13.97% of Law Annual Giving.

The Pacesetters recognize alumni graduating within the past five years who have begun early in their careers to continue the long tradition of alumni support of the Law School. The gift levels for membership are listed below. The Pacesetter program culminates with gifts of $150 by the fifth year, thus qualifying alumni for membership in the Edwin R. Keedy Affiliates. Many Pacesetters have also joined the Edwin R. Keedy Associates, William Draper Lewis Associates and the Benjamin Franklin Society within the first five years following graduation.

REGIONAL SOLICITATION PROGRAM

There are fourteen regional Annual Giving committees around the country, each coordinated by a chairman; in some of the regions, the chairman was assisted by a committee of volunteers. The success of the regional committees becomes apparent when examining the 1984-85 Annual Giving figures. The total raised through regional solicitation efforts this year was $744.898.

The Law School is extremely grateful to the regional chairmen and committee members, who are listed below. These volunteers form a vital link in helping the School establish ties with alumni/ae throughout the country. Their work is deeply appreciated.

FIRM SOLICITATION

The 1984-85 campaign was the second year for the very successful firm solicitation program, with 15 Philadelphia and 11 New York law firms participating. Each firm has a solicitor who has agreed to conduct the Annual Giving solicitations for each Law School alumnus/a. The total collected this year through the Philadelphia program was $169,975, while $74,890 was collected from New York firms. This combined figure of $239,865 is approximately 24% of the entire Annual Giving figure of $988,197. Fred Blume, L'66, distinguished himself as the firm solicitor who spearheaded the drive that resulted in 100% participation from all 45 Penn Law School alumni/ae at Blank, Rome, Comisky & McCauley.

The program has been so successful that plans are underway to expand the number of participating firms. The efforts of all our firm solicitors are greatly appreciated.

REUNION PROGRAM

Message from the National Reunion Chairman

Quinquennial Reunions provide Law School Alumni/ae with an opportunity to renew friendships, reminisce and rekindle feelings of loyalty to the Law School. In addition, each class presents Dean Mundheim with an extraordinary financial gift to Annual Giving, in honor of the event. This year the ten participating classes raised a total of $220,528 from 586 donors. This represents 22% of the Annual Giving total and an increase of $42,955 over the $177,573 raised last year by Reunion classes.

The fiftieth Reunion class of 1935, under the leadership of E. Calvert Cheston led the way in presenting the Law School with a gift of $37,671. The Class of 1960, headed by Charles G. Kopp and Lowell S. Thomas, Jr., raised $40,090 as they celebrated their 25th Reunion. I would like to offer special thanks also to George W. McKeag, '30, Richard M. Dicke, '40, Stephen J. Korn, '50, Norman P. Zarwin, '55, Alan M. Lerner, '65, William H. Ewing, '65, Alexander Kerr, '70, Alan C. Myers, '75 and Peter Y. Solmssen, '80 for their outstanding leadership as Chairmen of their respective Reunion Gift Committees.

The Law School acknowledges with pride the accomplishments of these Reunion classes. Their contribution to Law Annual Giving 1984-85 and to the future of the School is deeply appreciated.

IN HONOR AND MEMORY

A gift to the Law School in honor or in memory of a friend, alumnus/a or parent is a thoughtful way to pay tribute to the individual. Whether you wish to express condolences, provide a lasting remembrance, convey appreciation and support or recognize the achievements of a special person, the Law School offers a wide range of gift opportunities. Because circumstances vary with individuals and time, these special gifts involve important decisions and careful planning. For information and assistance in planning an honorary or memorial gift, please contact Donald G. Myers, Director of Development, University of Pennsylvania Law School, 3400 Chestnut Street/14, Philadelphia, PA 19104; (215) 898-7489.

The Law School gives special thanks to the following alumni/ae and friends who, over the past year, have chosen to give in such a meaningful manner.

CORPORATE MATCHING GIFT PROGRAM

Chairman—Mitchell Brock'53

This year the following corporations contributed $77,539 to the Law School through their matching gift programs.

The unrestricted income realized through these matching gifts is vital to the success of Law Annual Giving. A gift to the Law School can literally be doubled or even tripled, depending upon each corporation's particular policy. We appreciate the generosity of the companies who supported the Law School through the Matching Gift Program and are grateful for those qualifying alumni/ae who forwarded the proper forms to the Law School when making their gifts. All matching gifts are included in the gift total and gift club recognition for the alumnus/a.

THANK YOU

The success of the Law School's fund raising efforts in FY1984-85 reflects the dedication and commitment of our outstanding group of alumni fund raisers. Their enthusiasm and loyalty have endowed the Law School with a new vigor; their hard work has provided increased gifts for the Law School. We acknowledge with praise and appreciation the accomplishments of these loyal alumni.

A Blueprint for the Future

The University of Pennsylvania Law School

Law Annual Giving provides the foundation of Alumni support for the Law School. The School's continued progress and future growth as well as the improvement of its facilities, faculty and curriculum depend on this support. For FY 1985-86 the Annual Giving goal is to raise $1,250,000 in unrestricted funds.

The Overseers of the Law School recognize the need to fully support the Annual Giving goal. They have pledged $125,000 as a challenge gift. The Overseers Challenge Fund will match (up to $125,000):

1. gifts from Alumni who join the Benjamin Franklin Society for the first time by giving $1,000 or more to Law Annual Giving;

2. gifts from Alumni who are presently members of the Benjamin Franklin Society but who respond to the challenge by moving to a higher level of B.F.S. membership, e.g., from Member to Associate, from Associate to Fellow, from Fellow to Founder.

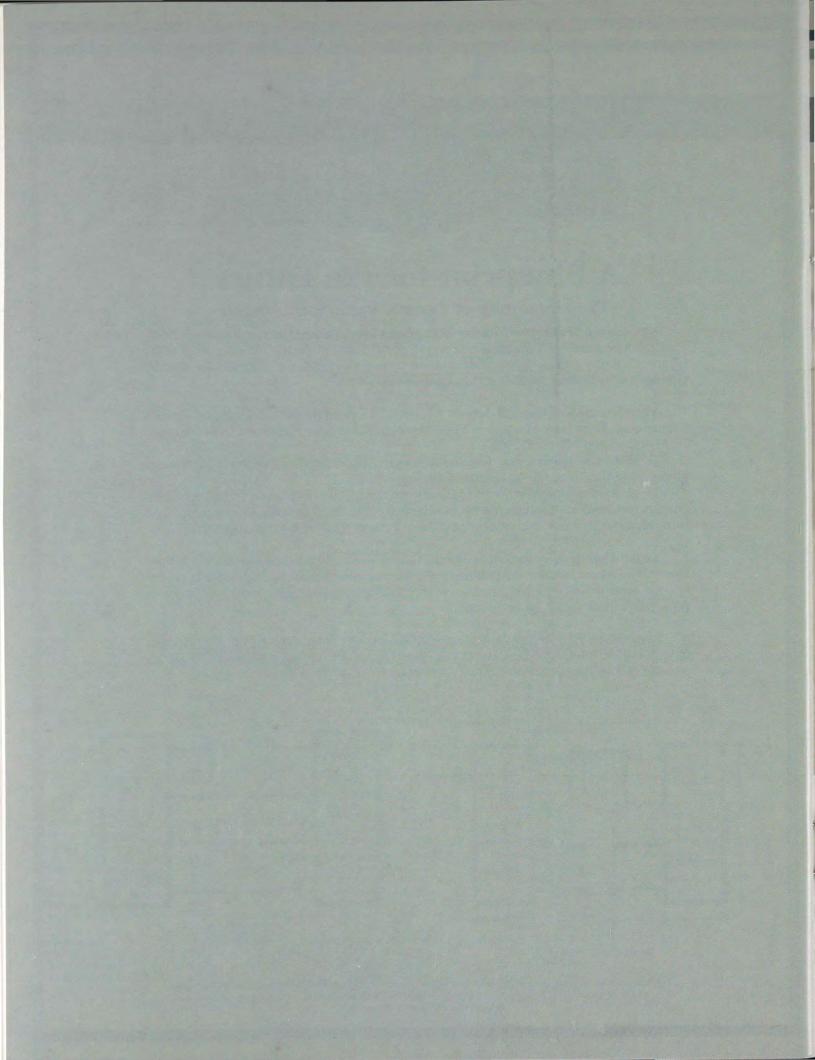

Active Alumni participation of Annual Giving will build a strong foundation for the Law School's Blueprint for the Future. Please support Law Annual Giving by contributing at your most generous level possible. With your support the goals of $1,250,000 and 50% participation will be achieved.

Remember: gifts to Annual Giving 1985-86 may be forwarded to the Law Annual Giving Office, 3400 Chestnut Street I 4, Philadelphia, Pa. 19104. Gifts and pledges are payable before June 30, 1986.

The Law School building at 34th and Chestnut Streets is an outstanding example of Georgian architecture. At the dedication, on February 21, 1900, the School was acclaimed as one of the most complete educational facilities in the nation.

The Reunion Speech That Was Not Delivered

for the event was organized by 1965's Albert Oehrle and Stephen Goodman who alternated on the piano. Knoblauch, a Private Bank on Locust Street in Philadelphia, was the site of the elegant reunion given by the Class of 1970. Classmates William R. Dimeling, Alexander Kerr and Lisa Holzager Kramer organized this highly successful effort. The Class of 1975 held their Reunion at the Ross Gallery in the University of Pennsylvania's Furness Building. Alumnus William S. Stevens was event chairman with the aid of Alan C. Myers, M. Duncan Grant and David E. Beavers. Richard A. D'Avino and Peter Y. Solmssen chaired and organized the Class of 1980's highly successful events which began on Friday evening, May 17 at the Law School with a Cocktail Reception honoring their "honorary classmate," former Dean, Judge Louis H. Pollak, of the U. S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania. On Saturday evening, the Class of '80 celebrated their 5th Reunion with a Chinese banquet at the Bodek Lounge in Houston Hall at the University.

A Tongue-in-Cheek Account of a Perfect Evening in a Not-So-Perfect Career by Peter Florey, '50

May 18, 1985. A very important day in my life. The first Law School Reunion I ever attended, and my 35th at that!

Why had I stayed away so long? Perhaps because I had left the active practice of law in 1957 and turned to fulltime labor arbitration in 1962. Perhaps because my career exiled me to Pittsburgh for many years from which I voluntarily moved to Southern New Jersey—hardly the turf for social acceptance in Philadelphia. Perhaps it was my concern for Susan, twenty years my junior, on whom I did not want to inflict the pain of rubbing shoulders with middle-aged lawyers. Maybe it was my lukewarm support of Law School finances.

Why then did I respond to the call for the 35th Reunion? Was it the friendly tone of the letter of invitation? Did the pleasant afternoon I spent with my mentor, Lou Schwartz, at his summer home in Maine, revive my interest in the Law School? Was it the change in Susan who now qualified as "matron" and had developed a penchant for successful people? Or was it perhaps the mystical significance of the number 35 in the Life of Man? The more I thought about it, the more I discovered that there is a correlation between the development of a person and the unfolding of a legal career.

For the first seven years of life, the young child discovers a personality in his newly acquired body, until he can say with confidence: I am. The lawyer, in the first seven years of practice, incorporates the practicalities of the law into the empty law school shell. At the end of this period, a senior partner may say: "You are it!"

In 1957 I caught the seven year itch, left a prestigious Philadelphia law firm and was employed by a client as a stevedore in the Port of Philadelphia.

Between ages seven and fourteen, the child learns about life. The lawyer discovers specialties and bar association committees.

By 1964 I had not only loaded and unloaded ships in the Port of Philadelphia, but had turned out socket head screws in Mexico, made soup in Camden, New Jersey, and had rubbed elbows with the world of high finance by shepherding stock issues through the SEC. I had arrived at a point in my labor arbitration career when, besides umpiring between U. S. Steel and the Steelworkers Union, had heard ad hoc cases in industry for a variety of employment situations.

Fourteen to twenty-one. Puberty to maturity. "Sturm und Drang" in German. (I do not want to carry the analogy too far.) Little need be said about these stormy years. The lawyer ventures to overturn a few Supreme Court decisions and, at the end of the period, delegates the "dirty work" to junior associates.

By 1971 I had lost several permanent umpireships by writing decisions which offended both parties. I also had married Susan who asked to run my office. Imagine a full-time live-in secretary!

From ages twenty-one to twenty-eight a person lays the foundation for his livelihood. The lawyer amasses influential clients, becomes the membership chairman of the local country club and is elected to the board of directors of the bank.

From 1971 to 1978 I drifted in and out of impermanent, permanent umpireships, had my name listed on every conceivable panel and, sensing the decline of "Big Steel," changed my base of operations to the east coast. I also fired Susan as secretary and acquired a real secretary. We are now happily married.

From age twenty-eight to thirty, a person usually establishes a family. The lawyer plays with the idea of founding his own firm and aspires to the presidency of the local bar association.

I became preoccupied with the so-called Mohonk Dialogues of Labor Relations Practitioners, where I brought together congenial persons to consider current trends in labor relations in the pleasant surrounding of a unique hostelry run by a Quaker family.

And here it is 1985-the threshold of year 35 since graduation from law school. At this point in time, one has the possibility of entering the realm of spirituality. The affluent person has the choice of sipping beer on a yacht in the Chesapeake, of going to retreats, of reading good books and of becoming a deacon in the church. The successful lawyer can merge his law firm, become a director in large corporations and even establish branch law offices in other cities. One can translate his standing in the community into a judgeship or political office. With affluent clients, one can even become a trustee of the local art museum.

THE SALE OF CONRAIL: Unique Issues Of Policy And

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bruce B. Wilson delivered the Third of the 1984-85 Law Alumni Society's Annual Luncheon Forum Lectures on March 28, 1985.

An Alumnus of the Law School's Class of 1961, Mr. Wilson is a graduate of Princeton University. He served as law clerk to the late former Penn Law School Dean. Judge Herbert F. Goodrich of the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. Mr. Wilson practiced with the Philadelphia firm of Montgomery, McCracken, Walker & Rhoads from the years 1962 to 1969, after which he joined the Antitrust Division of the U.S. Justice Department where he held numerous highlevel positions for 10 years. In 1979, he joined Consolidated Rail Corporation as Special Counsel. He was named General Counsel-Litigation and Antitrust at Conrail in 1981, became Vice-President and General Counsel in 1982 and, in December 1983, was elevated to his present position as Vice President-Law

Robert L. Kendall, '55, co-Chair of the Luncheon Lecture Series noted, in his introduction of Mr. Wilson to the Lecture gathering, that 'Bruce Wilson—just yesterday [March 27, 1985]—was before the Senate Judiciary Committee on the subject of the proposed merger of Conrail with the Norfolk Southern Corporation. No one is better qualified than he to speak on the unique public policy issues and the very difficult legal issues that are presented by this proposed sale. We, in Philadelphia, know that Conrail has been a success story for management and a success story for a government-owned corporation which has competed successfully in the private sector."

What follows is a fascinating insider's glimpse into this uniquely American story as told by Bruce B. Wilson.

-L.S.H.

We originally considered titling this presentation "War Stories From the Takeover Battle" but decided that, since many of you may have experienced takeover battles at one point or another, we would opt for a calmer, more learned title.

In a way, the Conrail takeover battle is like any other except that, in addition to the acquiring party, we happen to have the United States Government on the other side. The pattern is very much the same, however. For the first three months, in early 1984, the U.S. Department of Transportation was very solicitous toward Conrail. As the pattern goes in the first stage of a takeover battle, the Department really cultivated us. For about nine months, as the second stage of the takeover battle was entered, we, as well as the rest of the American public, were kept in the dark as to what the Department of Transportation was doing. We are now in the third stage, which can be characterized as similar to the process of growing mushrooms-first, we were cultivated, then, we were kept in the dark and, now, we are covered with a lot of fertilizer.

Those of you who have lived in the Philadelphia area for some time may recall that

And what of an arbitrator? He can continue his regular day-to-day struggle with the parties, or take the risk of exhorting parties to see the larger picture of life which, in the case of the private sector, means placing productivity ahead of partisan strife. In my case, the opportunity for public service came when President Reagan appointed me to a Railroad Emergency Board in December of 1984. I thought he was auditioning me as a replacement Democrat for Jean Kirkpatrick. However, when Jean changed her party registration, the need for an Administration Democrat had evaporated, and my brief brush with the White House remained a "one shot" affair.

At the Class of 1955 Law School Reunion Dinner on May 18, 1985, I managed to sit at the same table as the Chairman for the evening. Susan and I enjoyed the fellowship although no one noticed that I was wearing the Law Alumni's Society's necktie. We also broke bread with a classmate who had married a women ten years Susan's junior, making the evening a complete success! I casually mentioned my age theory between soup, sherbet and salad and was immediately pledged to enlighten the group. However, before the Chairman turned to me (although there were to be no speeches), he performed a happy task: Don Erickson and his wife had flown into Philadelphia at 5 p.m. on the day of the Reunion after more than two days of air travel from the Cameroons where Don is the legal advisor for the United States Agency for International Development. The opportunity to hear from our classmate who had come the farthest could not be ignored. Don is not a man of many words. He sketched his life with a few brush strokes. In Yaounde, he does not have a telephone but an armed guard who lives with the family in the house. Newspapers and magazines come two-to-four weeks late, and the laundry which hang outside often is infested with worms. Governmental processes grind slowly, and the timing for signing documents of State is governed by horoscopes. With a fews words Don was able to convey the dedication and the sacrifices of foreign service officers who, literally, represent our interests on the firing line of the Third World. I suddenly realized that Don had stolen my thunder. Here was the living example of what I had intended to hold out to my classmates, in theory, as our challenge.

When the Chairman nodded to me to give my carefully prepared speech extemporaneously, I nodded back "no." The evening had to end on Don's note of selfless dedication. We could not have had a more inspiring message.

Susan was enraptured by the proceedings and the whole evening. I realized, with an uneasy feeling in the stomach, what would happen to our family budget when the next appeal for contributions comes from the Law School.

Mark me down for our 40th Reunion, a number which fortunately cannot be divided by seven, so that Susan and I can enjoy ourselves completely without the worry of having to give speeches. Thank you, Don Erickson! Thank you, Class of 1950! Thank you, University of Pennsylvania Law School!

Law by Bruce B. Wilson

it was about fourteen years ago when we read in The Philadelphia Inquirer: "Penn Central Railroad: The Successor to the Standard Railroad of the World—The Company That has Never Missed a Dividend—Files in Bankruptcy." Over the next three years, the U. S. Government wrestled with the question of what it was going to do with this rail system in bankruptcy, since it served the most concentrated manufacturing and industrial complex in the world. Finally, the Government decided that it would try to reorganize that rail system, and it spent the next three years planning how to do it.

As a result, in 1976, Consolidated Rail Corporation came into existence.

The intention of the Government was to give Conrail a great deal of financial assistance, gradually improving it until it could stand on its own again. The Government and the Company had numerous problems. Labor costs were out of sight. The declining manufacturing base of the northeast and the midwest did not generate enough business to enable the railroad to sustain both its oversized work force and its physical plant that had been built in a generation where there was a great deal more rail traffic than existed in 1976. We had a commuter operation which drained both the railroad's finances and its management. In addition, there were huge operating inefficiences which obviously influenced how fast and with what reliability we could get products to their destination and how much it would cost to get them there.

Another problem that we shared with the entire industry was rail pricing. Rail pricing traditionally had been done in legal cartels and resulted in an equalized rate system so that, no matter how one traveled from Boston to New Orleans—and there were 837 different ways—the price was always the same. As is the case with most cartels, the price had to be set high enough to cover a great number of inefficient operations with the result that the trucking industry quite rightly drew traffic off the entire United States railroad system.

We are now in the ninth year of Conrail's existence—soon to begin the tenth. We have emerged from this old era of subsidies, of inefficiencies and of over-regulation. We have reduced the size of our work force from the original 100 thousand employees to about 39 thousand today. We have reduced the size of the physical plant considerably and have cut approximately 2700 route miles from the system and over twice that many track-miles. I think it is safe to say that we are now a lean railroad. We also have used, with some aggressiveness, the competitive freedom which the Congress gave us in the 1980 Staggers Rail Act—an Act designed to get away from the system of equalized pricing and enabling railroads to price their product independently in their own best judgment. The cumulative result of this is that we now have a four-year history of earnings which began in 1981 with $39 million. In 1982, we hit $173 million; in 1983, we did $313 million and, by 1984, we were up to $500 million.

In early 1984, the Government decided to take the step that it always had contemplated—a step that Conrail management looked forward to with anticipation. That step was to get the Government out of its role in the railroad industry and return Conrail to the private sector.

During 1984, the Department of Transportation negotiated with various private bidders for the sale of the Government's 85 percent interest in the common stock of Conrail. In February 1985, the Government selected as the buyer the Norfolk Southern Corporation, which is the result of a merger between the Norfolk and Western Railroad—one of Conrail's major competitors—and the Southern Railroad Company.

There has been a proposal backed by Conrail management to provide an alternative to that selection. We would like to see the railroad returned to the private sector by means of a public offering. One of the basic reasons behind that position is that we want to preserve what we think is the healthy market competition that goes on between Conrail and the Norfolk Southern. We think that competition results in innovation, that it benefits shippers and that, in and of itself, it is a healthy idea.

From an economic, an antitrust and a regulatory perspective, what the U.S. Department of Transportation proposes to do with Conrail by its sale to the Norfolk Southern Corporation is an extraordinary transaction. Economically, it is extraordinary because it would result in the largest transportation company in the country. It would produce a company which would possess 50 percent or more of the rail market in the northeast and the midwest for chemicals, for grain, for automobiles, for steel, for scrap and for automobile parts-all products vitally important to our economy. As an antitrust concern it would be extraordinary as well. The Department of Justice reviewed the proposed transaction and concluded that, if nothing were done and if Conrail and Norfolk Southern were simply allowed to get together, the transaction would violate the merger standards of the Clayton Act and the standards of the Interstate Commerce Act, and would have a significantly adverse effect on competition. The Justice Department proposed certain limited divestitures. The Justice Department's solution was to divest about 1500 miles of track. The tracks proposed to be divested as part of the merger transaction are, basically, the Norfolk Southern line which runs westward from Buffalo to Cleveland, a Conrail line which runs through Fort Wayne up to Chicago, and the Norfolk Southern line that runs from Ohio down to St. Louis.

The second part of the extraordinary antitrust aspect of this situation is that the Department of Transportation's proposed legislation wants to immunize the entire transaction from the antitrust laws.

Lastly, the transaction is extraordinary because it undermines some of the procompetitive regulatory reforms that were contained in the Staggers Act and under which the railroads have made considerable progress in the 1980's.

The review process of the Department of Justice was a bit unusual. It identified headto-head competition between Conrail and Norfolk Southern and then, by way of the divestitures, it purported to fix that. The Justice Department totally ignored three other competitive factors which are probably of more significant. One is called source competition-i.e., Norfolk Southern serves a coal mine, Conrail serves a coal mine, and each railroad has lines running to a power plant. We are as much in competition with Norfolk Southern in that situation as we are when we compete head-to-head, although our lines may originate in different places. The questions of source competition were completely ignored in the Justice Department's report on the Conrail/Norfolk Southern transaction. By contrast, source competition was extensively considered in the Southern Pacific-Santa Fe Case review filed less than two months later.

The second kind of competition which the Justice Department ignored was national market competition—competition that results from the fact that Conrail shippers compete in end-product markets with shippers located on Norfolk Southern lines. For example, we serve Bethlehem Steel Corporation in Bethlehem, PA, in Maryland and in Indiana. Bethlehem Steel competes with steel mills located on other railroads. We want Bethlehem Steel to be healthy because when Bethlehem is healthy, so is Conrail. So we cut our rates on the intermill shipments of semi-finished products to Bethlehem Steel in order to enable Bethlehem to compete in a broader geographic market than it would otherwise be able to. Those rates are very much constrained by competition from Norfolk Southern and from other railroads, but the Department of Justice did not acknowledge this situation.

Third, the Department's own guidelines state that it is more likely to challenge a transaction which will result in the elimination of a disruptive competitive element in the market. If there ever has been a disruptive competitive influence in the railroad market, it has been our friendly, Philadelphia-headquartered Conrail. I hear this from many people-mainly from other railroads, whom I think would be just as happy (if there were no other side effects) to have us acquired by an entity which would take us out of that posture. And Norfolk Southern is a railroad which has not been a leader in trying to move to independent pricing. Indeed, if they have been anything, they have been foot-draggers.

On balance, looking at the Department of Justice analysis, one has to say that the Department seemed to assume a role which was very different from its ordinary one as investigator and prosecutor. It is almost as though the Department were acting as the antitrust counselor to the Department of Transportation. Justice rendered antitrust advice to Transportation saying in essence: "If you divest these 1500 miles, maybe then we can approve it."

As a result, we now have on the record a Department of Transportation negotiating process, largely secret, which resulted in a proposal that the Norfolk Southern acquire Conrail. We have a Department of Justice analysis of the transaction—done without the benefit of a public record—in which, if certain limited things happen, the Justice Department will bless that transaction. And we have an Administration going to Congress and saying, "Approve this."

In that proposed legislation, DOT is asking Congress to grand total immunity to the transaction. Hidden in the legislation (one must be on interstate commerce lawyer as well as an antitrust lawyer to know what is going on) is a provision to the effect that the transaction shall be deemed to have been approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission under Chapter 113 of the Interstate Commerce Act. The existence of Chapter 113 of the Interstate Commerce Act as a means of granting immunity is not readily apparent.

Although railroad mergers are immunized from the antitrust laws by the ICC, they are immunized only after a long and thorough process on the public record in which interested parties have the right to participate, have the right to discovery, have the right to cross-examination and have the right to resolution of disputed issues of fact by a quasi-judicial body. In an ordinary merger transaction, one goes to the Department of Justice which will examine it as required under the Hart/Scott/Rodino Amendments of 1976 and decide to sue or not to sue. In the case of a not-to-sue situation, an interested party affected by that transaction is not precluded from going to the Federal District Court and filing his own antitrust suit under Section 7 of the Clayton Act. Again, there will be a public record, discovery, the right to cross examination and a decision by a judicial body. None of this will occur in Conrail's case if Congress adopts the Department of Transportation's proposal to immunize this transaction by legislation. That kind of immunity is unprecedented in antitrust history.

"If there ever has been a disruptive competitive influence in the railroad market, it has been your friendly, Philadelphia-headquartered Conrail."

Another unique aspect of this transaction is its implication for tax policy and tax enforcement policy. It is entirely probable that Norfolk Southern will be able to recover all of its investment in Conrail through tax benefits in five years or less. Norfolk Southern claims that it is getting no advantage that does not ordinarily flow from the tax laws. But what is unusual about this transaction, from the standpoint of tax enforcement policy, is that in the sale agreement which Norfolk Southern made with DOT, the Government is going to guarantee many of the tax consequences which are expected by Norfolk Southern.

Finally, I want to offer some thoughts on the proposal that Conrail be sold through a public offering. We think that an independent Conrail with an independent management, an independent board of directors and a broad base of stockholders is going to have the greatest incentive to serve the long-term interests of the shippers and communities that we serve today. It is our opinion that such a Conrail is going to continue as a leader in making the rail industry more competitive as we go on through the 1980's. Needless to say, DOT is hardly encouraging Conrail's efforts to put together a public offering. This causes difficulty-and I will make no bones about it—because, where there is no willing seller, it is difficult to find buyers. A buyer would have to be willing to purchase the stock from the DOT and take the Government out all at once, assuming the risk of a subsequent public offering. Despite the difficulty and despite the fact that DOT is, to say the least, not totally cooperating in this effort, by discouraging people here and there, we are working on that alternative and are making substantial progress because we—and those who already have said that they are willing to invest in us—believe that a public offering is the better way to sell Conrail.

Question: It appears, from your last remark about the closing of the DOT with the financing of a public offering, that there must be a closing with cash before the public offering so that the risk of the transaction will be on the lending banks or the underwriters if anything happens.

Bruce Wilson: The DOT has made that a requirement of the process so far, and I see no indication of change unless Congress requests it. The Congress could pass a statute that says, "Call in the underwriters and let's do a public offering." In the present political posture, though, I do not think that such a statute would pass. It should be remembered that another unusual aspect of this transaction is that the majority leader of the Senate of the United States is married to the Secretary of Transportation—which causes some difficulty as well.

I think that if the public offering proposal is going to fly, a syndicate must be put together that will take the 85 percent of Conrail stock from the Government and fork over $1.2 billion, and then have a shareholders' agreement to do a secondary offering.

Question: Would this be feasible?

Bruce Wilson: Yes, I think so because, in the 1984 negotiating process, Allegheny came in with a bid of $1 billion. Everyone clustered around that number, and the three finalists were negotiated up to $1.2 billion. I think that there is a tremendous upside potential for any group that would buy the Government's interest with a view toward resale to the public.

THE CASE FOR THE CIA AND CRISIS MANAGEMENT

EDITOR'S NOTE: Stanley Sporkin, a Yale Law School alumnus, became General Counsel to the CIA in 1981, after a long and full career in public service. He joined the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission in 1961, initially to work on the SEC's Special Study of Securities Markets. At the conclusion of this assignment, Mr. Sporkin joined the staff of the SEC and between 1963 and 1974, held positions of increasing responsibility, culminating in his appointment as Director of the Division of Enforcement in 1974. In 1979, Mr. Sporkin received the President's Award For Distinguished Federal Civilian Service, the highest honor that can be granted to a member of the Federal Career

A native Philadelphian, Stanley Sporkin is the son of Class of 1917 University of Pennsylvania Law School Alumnus, The Honorable Maurice W. Sporkin, a Senior Judge of the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas.

In his introduction of Mr. Sporkin at the May 14, 1985 Annual Spring Luncheon of the Law School's Washington, DC Alumni Association, Dean Robert H. Mundheim said of his former SEC colleague, "One of Stanley's great activities at the SEC was to pursue people who acquired and used inside information. He is now in a job where one of the purposes is to acquire and to use inside information." What follows is a lively, informative discussion of Mr. Sporkin's present work at the CIA, his notions on crisis management and some questions and answers concerning all of the above.

by Stanley Sporkin, Esquire General Counsel, The U. S. Central Intelligence Agency

I hold in high esteem the work of the organization with which I am presently associated. I do not believe there is any question that the CIA is this nation's most important peacetime body. No nation can maintain world-class status without having a world-class intelligence organization. We must know what our adversaries are doing and, more important, what they are thinking. Many of us in this room remember Pearl Harbor and have vowed that never again would we allow ourselves to be without the necessary information that would prevent another sneak attack. If there is one day that is indelible in the minds of those born in the 1930's or before, it is that ominous day.

At times it becomes quite trying for us to do our jobs in the face of the constant harping and criticism with which we so often must contend. Hardly a day goes by without the appearance of another negative press story. A minor development can become a major media event once the CIA

Question: If Conrail's earnings were $500 million last year, why is the corporation only worth $1 billion? I don't understand.

Bruce Wilson: This is related to my last comment. Conrail is an extraordinary company. In addition to making $500 million last year, it has in excess of $800 million in the bank as of this morning [March 28, 1985]. It presently has over $200 million of excess funding in its pension plan. It has approximately $3.1 million of coming depreciation deductions. It has five-years left on its so-called frozen-base deductions. I think that, with all of these tax benefits, one will surely get the purchase price back in five years or less. And yet, basically, the Government is proposing to sell it for $1.2 billion.

I want to make one thing clear about the $500 million in earnings. In 1984, we were paying our employees about 12 percent less than the rest of the industry. We had been doing this since 1981 when our labor and management people decided to pull together to attempt to make Conrail a profitable, viable company. For 6 months in 1984, we had the 12 percent hold-down in effect. In the second half of that year, we we booked the money necessary to bring those wages back to industry standards, and we have since paid them. As a result, in 1985, there will be $60-$65 million off of those earnings on a comparable basis. Secondly, we did not pay state taxes in 1984 pursuant to the Federal legislation and, as soon as the sale is achieved, we will pay in the neighborhood of $30 million in state taxes. So, realistically, the earnings will be brought down to $410 million on a comparable basis when we begin comparing them to 1985.

Question: Would you care to comment on Conrail's situation in the U. S. Senate, particularly with respect to the Committees examining the issue?

Bruce Wilson: I think that we are going to have a very tough fight in the Senate. The Judiciary Committee is considerably friendlier to Conrail than the Committee on Commerce, which is the Committee that really decides what legislation goes before the Senate. A look at the Commerce Committee line-up is quite discouraging. Of seventeen senators, only two are from the region served by Conrail—Senators Rockefeller (West VA) and Reigle (Michigan). The others on the Committee do not have a direct interest in railroads in the northeast and the midwest—like Senators Inouye of Hawaii and Stevens of Alaska. In addition, Senator Danforth, who chairs the Committee, and Senator Packwood, a high-ranking member, favor the DOT plan. So I think that we will not have much success with the Commerce Committee.

On the Judiciary Committee, we do have some friends like Senators Specter (PA), Metzenbaum (Ohio), Biden (Delaware), Kennedy (Massachusetts), and Byrd (West Virginia)-so we may have a somewhat better chance with Judiciary. Senator Thurmond, however, will probably go with the Administration on this one. Given the situation with Senator Dole as Majority Leader, we probably will not have much success on the Senate-side. We must fight the battle there, however, for, if we do not, we will lose our credibility in the House where, hopefully we are in pretty good shape. We have Congressman James Florio (NJ), who chairs the sub-Committee on Transportation of the House Commerce Committee, John Dingell who chairs the full Commerce Committee, Peter Rodino (NI) who chairs the House Judiciary Committee, and Dan Rostenkowski (Illinois) to examine the tax consequences of the situation. The House looks quite optimistic.

is involved. What must be remembered is that the CIA is your organization, and it is here to protect your vital interests. We live in the greatest nation that has ever existed. Our ability to enjoy freedom and liberty is assured only by our ability to protect ourselves. I was very impressed by a Readers' Digest article written by Assistant Secretary of State Eliot Abrams about a great United States hero and statesman, Senator Henry "Scoop" Jackson. What particularly impressed me was the following quote made in reference to Senator Jackson by Secretary Abrams, who was once one of Jackson's assistants. " 'Scoop' was born in 1912, in a rough-and-tumble lumber town. A child of Norwegian immigrants, he acquired his nickname from a comic strip character whom his sisters thought he resembled. His oldest sister, Gertrude-a teacher-spent part of her meager paychecks to help him through law school. He was elected county attorney and, in 1940 at age 28, became a Congressman. This was the world of Roosevelt, Churchill, and Hitler and of Europe at war. It was the young Congressman's thinking that national security was paramount. The Nazi invasion of his parents' homeland, in that same year, had left a searing impression on him. 'We are dealing with survival,' he would tell those who advocated less spending on defence and more on domestic programs, 'Norway had one thousand vears of freedom-clean air, clean water, clean land-they had one of the finest health programs. But what good were these when the hobnail boots took over in the spring of 1940?'

I do not think that I am asking too much when I request that the citizenry try to be a bit more understanding of us. I would hope that we could eradicate the negative, knee-jerk reaction each time the CIA is mentioned. The unfortunate part is that the CIA has a difficult time communicating to the public exactly what it does. As you know, my former legal life was devoted to promoting a system of full and fair disclosure. I have been criticized by many for having been an advocate of full disclosure, and now presently defend a system of no disclosure. Actually, I believe these two systems to be totally compatible, and I am comfortable with my present role as well as with my former one. Indeed, the Supreme Court-in a recent landmark decision-recognized the need for our maintaining confidentiality and secrecy in the carrying out of this nation's intelligence program. In CIA v. Sims, the Supreme Court, in citing two other national security cases stated, "The government has a compelling interest in protecting the secrecy of information important to our national security." What I am suggesting is that the American people should give their intelligence organization the good faith presumption which is normally accorded to other institutions of this nation. If it means that, to some extent, our role must be taken on faith, then I do not believe there is a great deal wrong in doing so. Let us face it, there are not too many alternatives.

As to the legal apparatus that fits into the CIA operations, a rather elaborate oversight provision has been constructed. This is the result of the findings in the mid-70's of congressional hearings which examined certain excesses that were brought to the public's attention. The CIA is subjected to review by two committees of Congress and Presidential oversight. An Executive Order presently governs the conduct which may be undertaken by the Intelligence Community and also makes clear that the CIA, in carrying out its mission, essentially cannot intrude into the basic rights of our citizens. For example, Section 2.4 of the present governing Executive Order provides "that agencies within the Intelligence Community shall use the least intrusive collection techniques feasible within the United States or directed against United States persons abroad.' Agencies are not authorized to use such techniques as electronic surveillance, visible searches, mail surveillance, visible surveillance or monitoring devices unless there are procedures established by the head of the agency concerned and approved by the Attorney General of the United States. Such procedures shall protect constitutional or other legal rights and limit the use of such information to lawful government purposes.

My role as General Counsel of the CIA can be mildly described as awesome. In addition to acting as the CIA's lawyer and carrying out such ordinary functions as preparaing contracts and, along with the Department of Justice, defending the CIA when it is sued in court, we are also called upon on a day-to-day basis to review various proposed courses of action in order to make certain that they comply with all applicable laws and Executive Orders. Although one cannot assure that in every instance the CIA will comply with all applicable legal constraints, I do believe that our track record has been pretty good. The key people in our organization clearly understand their legal responsibilities and make every effort to bring to the General Counsel's attention those activities in which there is a possibility of vulnerability During my four-year tenure at the CIA, I have done a good deal of counseling in order to structure courses of conduct to legally meet the stringent demands which are placed on the Organization.

The General Counsel's Office, which is comprised of approximately forty attorneys, is run much like the office of the general counsel of a large corporation. It is divided into various divisions-litigation, intelligence law, government contract law, administrative law and a group which assists our intelligence gathering operations. One of the innovations that Bill Casey [CIA Director, William Casey] and I instituted was the use of a compliance officer in those areas where, in the course of ongoing activities, there might develop high incidences of legal problems. The theory is to have a full-time individual placed within the operating offices so that instantaneous decisions on legality can be made. This development had its origins in the compliance concept that Dean [Robert H.] Mundheim and I-together with some others-developed when we worked together at the SEC. This concept is now in place at most major brokerage houses in the nation, as well as in all major accounting firms. It is an idea that, in my view, has not reached its full potential and has a role to play in the industrial sector outside of the financial institutional area. Indeed, I would think that our defense contractors, who are now under-fire, might consider the employment of such a

An emerging concept in the legal profession is the role of the lawyer in damage control or crisis management. Because of my involvement in what I consider this new era of specialization, 1 would like to share certain observations about it. There is no need to cite too many recent negative government or corporate events to make my case. From Bhopal to the Ohio banking problem-from abuse of government contracting to the various failures of the securities industries-one can see graphic examples of where crisis management has a role to play. I would suggest that, because society is becoming so complex, hardly any large institution or organization is immune from involvement in negative events. There is a need to give some thought to such matters. In virtually every instance of this kind there is, what I call, the ad hoc reaction. Lawyers may get involved in the early stages but, too often, they are not consulted until after the problem is already well out of control. I do think that both large institutions and major law firms should begin to think of these kinds of problems and develop a quickreaction response designed to deal with such major problems when they strike.

A full program of crisis management has a number of different aspects to it. Since there is nothing better than an innoculation or a good dose of preventative medicine, every effort must be made to put in place a mechanism which might prevent disasters from happening. The presences of a business practice officer, a compliance director and/or an inspector general used in conjunction with good legal and accounting audits-are cost effective preventative techniques. A plan that has been carefully formulated to be used in the event of a serious problem is another important method to deal with a possible crisis. When I was at the SEC, we had a written plan to deal with various major breaks in the market. It is my opinion that the key to the development of any plan is a quick and intelligent response to a situation. There are many instances where the taking of bold steps can resolve a problem quickly. At other times, corporations can become confused by events and, because of slow reaction, lose control. Since I do not have the definitive answer to all of the questions, I would suggest that today's law schools examine this area.

I cannot seem to recall a particular time in the recent past when so many things have happened so rapidly-in almost epidemic proportions. Although one does not expect to face banking problems like the ones that occurred in Ohio and Maryland this past spring, nevertheless, it would be beneficial to have plans or programs to deal with such crises. As a fire department extinguishes major conflagrations, so can a management crisis group deal with its particular emergencies. Since I do not have the definitive answer or even know all of the questions, I would suggest that perhaps your fine law school or some other legal organization could undertake an effort to start a discussion on this topic and, perhaps, include a course of study of this kind in the law school curriculum. I would also like to see one of our fine continuing legal education organizations, such as the ALI or the PLI, devote some of its energies to the development of a continuing legal education program devoted to the topic of crisis management. I thank you for allowing me to share these thoughts with you.

Question: In your present position, have you and/or your lawyers ever had difficulty in getting recommendations or opinions followed?

Stanley Sporkin: I do not recall any instance where an opinion was not followed. It could be unfortunate if someone in the Organization responded negatively to an opinion. Such behavior could mean the end of the project. We operate with a tremendous amount of oversight—moreso than in any other areas that I have ever been involved.

Question: I was quite troubled by what you have said and realize that oversight can sandbag you—as it did in the Nicaragua mining incident. Is there not some alternative or middle way between the normal oversight procedure given to the 'public' of public agencies and the faith that you insist we have in the CIA and secret operations? Is there not some way that we can accommodate the normal democratic view that public agencies should be subject to public accommodation and public accounting?

Stanley Sporkin: One must realize that we are not talking about political matters. If one looks back to the Kennedy or Nixon or Carter eras, there was always confrontation between those who scrutinized and were critical of the CIA and those at the CIA who were doing their work. The question does not have to do with which political party is in power. I do want to say that the present system of oversight, while not perfect, is quite adequate. We do have two very vigorous bipartisan committees of the Congress overseeing the CIA-and if one begins with the presumption that intelligence is necessary and it must be kept secret, how else do we do it? Remember, in addition to these committees, there also are the Presidents' Intelligence Oversight Board and the Presidents' Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. There are many people sitting on these Boards who are not political but who believe in and are strong supporters of intelligence.

Question: You said that we must presume two things: that we need information and we need secrecy. How would you rate the CIA on both getting the information and keeping the secrecy? Stanley Sporkin: First of all, I think we are doing a good job. Our people out there are amazing. Their work is incredible. Now, are we better than the KGB? That is difficult to say. The problem is that the KGB does not have the elaborate legal restraints this nation has imposed on its Intelligence Community.

Question: I came out of college in the late '60's and early 70's, at a time when the CIA was somewhat of a dirty word. During the late '70's and early '80's, the American people seem to have developed more of an appreciation for the CIA and for the necessity of its existence. I also feel differently about the CIA having worked at the Department of State and having learned a great deal about what is done. Just recently, a revelation has been made linking the CIA to the [May, 1985] bombing of Lebanon. How does the CIA overcome that? Is that not a setback that can have a pretty negative impact on the operation?

Stanley Sporkin: It is very difficult to predict the impact of such an incident. It is also particularly difficult when one cannot respond. For instance, this part year, one of our three television networks came out with a story that involved the CIA in all sorts of illicit actions. In its nightly news, the network stated that it had learned of information tending to link the CIA in a plot to murder a U. S. businessman. To a number of us, it was obvious that the network had broadcast such a charge only because it believed we could not respond.

Question: Can you comment on your relationship with the oversight committees previously mentioned?

Stanley Sporkin: It is important that we have the oversight committees. They are helpful in assuring the necessary degree of credibility with the citizenry.
